Inquiry was made of the Board as to the provision of a new burial ground for an ecclesiastical parish consisting of two rural parishes, one of which had not a parish council. The Board stated that if it were desired to provide and maintain a joint burial ground under the Burial Acts for the two civil parishes, the appointment of a joint committee under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 57, would be necessary, and that before this could be done the parish meeting of the parish without a council would have to obtain from the county council an order investing them with the requisite powers of a parish council. Other formalities would be involved by procedure under the Burial Acts. There would first have to be resolutions of the parish council and of the parish meeting of the respective parishes under the Burial Act, 1852, s. 23, expressing concurrence and agreement in providing a joint burial ground and apportioning the expenses. Following this, resolutions of the parish meeting of each parish under s. 19 of that Act, authorising the expenditure, would be necessary; and, after the joint committee had been formed, further resolutions of the parish meetings of the respective parishes under s. 26 of the same Act would have to be passed approving of the contract for the acquisition of the site. As, therefore, procedure under the Burial Acts would involve considerable delay and trouble, the Board suggested that probably the preferable course would be for the rural district council to provide a cemetery for the parishes under the present Act. The Board observed that if proceedings were taken under this Act, the involved procedure under the Burial Acts would be avoided, and there would be no necessity for conferring upon the parish meeting parish council powers, the rural district council having, in fact, all the necessary powers for providing a cemetery for the joint use of any group of parishes within their district. Again, if a loan were required, the only consent necessary under this Act as regards the loan, would be that of the L. G. B.; whereas a loan for a burial ground provided under the Burial Acts would require the consent of the parish meeting of each parish, of the county council, and of the Board. In conclusion, the Board suggested that the matter should be brought before the rural district council with a view to action by them under this Act.

An urban district council may provide a cemetery under this Act even if they are a burial authority under the Burial Acts, and, as in the case of rural areas (see note above), there are certain advantages in their doing so. Thus, under this Act, a term of sixty years is obtainable for the repayment of a loan for the purchase of land, thirty years being (see "Local Government," 1910, p. 97), the maximum under the Burial Acts; compulsory powers also are obtainable (the P. H. A., 1875, s. 176, being applicable): and the consent of the vestry to the proposed expenditure and site is dispensed with. It may be added that an urban council may effect an extension of a burial ground vested in them under the Burial Acts by proceeding under the Act of 1879. Though the two grounds will strictly be separate burial grounds subject to different statutes.

Note to Section 2.

If an urban council proceeding under this Act wish to limit the incidence of expenses to part of the district, they may do so under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 211.

Model byelaws.

Model byelaws for cemeteries have been issued. [See Mackenzie and Handford, Vol. I., p. 489.] The accompanying memorandum says:

"The combined effect of the enactments in s. 141 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and in s. 2 (1) of the Public Health (Interments) Act, 1879, is to enable a local authority to make byelaws with respect to the management and charges for use of a cemetery provided under the latter Act. It is, however, to be observed that this power of making byelaws is only one of several means which the local authority may employ for the proper control of their cemetery. For example, s. 37 of the Cemeteries Clauses Act, 1847, which is incorporated with the Act of 1879, enables the local authority to appoint gravediggers and other servants necessary for the care and use of the cemetery. Where a gravedigger is appointed by the local authority, they may conveniently dispense with many regulations which might otherwise require to be embodied in byelaws. It may be assumed that, as a servant of the local authority, the gravedigger will act in strict accordance with their directions as to such matters as the appointment of grave spaces, the dimension of graves, and their separation by a sufficient thickness of undisturbed earth. These subjects may accordingly be regarded as outside the range of such byelaws as will ordinarily be needed. At the same time it is important, for the reasons which are explained in the accompanying memorandum, that the local authority should give definite instructions to their servants as to the manner in which their duties are to be discharged.

"The Board desire me to add that local authorities who may intend to adopt the model clauses as the basis of their byelaws will, on application to the Board, be furnished with copies of those clauses, on foolscap paper, with a margin for annotations. These draft forms should be used in accordance with the instructions in the Circular of July 25th, 1877."

In the preface to a reprint of the model in April, 1907, the Board remarked:

"The opportunity has been taken to revise the series in regard to certain requirements which have sometimes been found irksome in practice, and may in the Board's opinion be omitted or modified without danger to the public health. Thus the clause (No. 3 in former editions) which forbade the burial in one grave at one time of more than one body unless the deceased were members of the same family, has been omitted, this being a matter which may be left to the local authority to determine in view of the sentiments of the inhabitants, and the customs prevailing in the district. The clauses forbidding the reopening of a grave, except for the interment of another member of the same family, until after the expiration of a term of years, have been replaced by one forbidding, on the reopening of any grave, the disturbance of any human remains already interred therein, or any soil which is offensive. Reductions have been made as regards the thickness of the layer of earth required between one coffin and another in a grave, and of the cover of earth above the topmost coffin; these, by enabling more coffins to be placed in a grave, will prolong the period for which the cemetery will remain available. A proviso allowing a less depth of cover in certain cases has been added which may be adopted by local authorities who desire to promote what is termed the 'earth-to-earth' system of burial.

"In the clause prescribing fees for the use of the cemetery the same fee shall be fixed for infants under one month of age as for stillborn infants, in order to avoid the inducement which there might otherwise be to declare as stillborn infants who have in fact been born alive."

In the case of a cemetery provided under the Public Health (Interments) Act, 1879, the only charges which require the approval of the Ministry are charges for the use of the cemetery fixed by byelaw under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 141, as extended to cemeteries by s. 2 of the Act of 1879, and the Ministry consider that these charges should only extend to interments in common graves.

Crematoria.

By the Cremation Act, 1902, s. 2, the expression "burial authority" in that Act "shall mean . . . any local authority maintaining a cemetery under the Public Health (Interments) Act, 1879 . . ." By s. 4 the powers of a burial authority to provide and maintain cemeteries, or anything essential, ancillary, or incidental thereto, shall be deemed to extend to and include the provision and maintenance of crematoria. See the Act in App. I., post, Vol. II.

3. The Cemeteries Clauses Act, 1847, shall be incorporated with this Act. Section 3. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 65, incorporated with this Act.

This Act is set out in App. I., post, Vol. II.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (FRUIT PICKERS LODGINGS) ACT, 1882.

An Act to extend the Public Health Act, 1875, to the making of Byelaws for Fruit Pickers. [12th July 1882.]

1. This Act may be cited as the Public Health (Fruit Pickers Lodgings) Act, 1882, and shall be construed as one with the Public Health Act, 1875. Short title and construction.

2. Section three hundred and fourteen of the Public Health Act, 1875 (a), which enables any local authority to make byelaws for securing the decent lodging and accommodation of persons engaged in hop picking within the district of such authority, shall be deemed to extend to and authorise the making of byelaws for securing the decent lodging and accommodation of persons engaged in the picking of fruit and vegetables. Power to make byelaws for fruit pickers.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACT, 1875 (SUPPORT OF SEWERS), AMENDMENT ACT, 1883.

An Act to amend the Public Health Act, 1875, and to make provision with respect to the Support of Public Sewers and Sewage Works in Mining Districts. [25th August 1883.]

1. This Act may be cited as the Public Health Act, 1875 (Support of Sewers), Amendment Act, 1883, and shall be construed as one with the Public Health Act, 1875 (in this Act called the principal Act), as amended by the Acts for the time being in force amending the same. Short title and construction.

This Act has been referred to in the notes to some of the sections of the P. H. A., 1875. It was passed apparently in consequence of Re Corporation of Dudley (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 86; 46 J. P. 340, where the Court of Appeal held that the P. H. A., 1875, imposed upon landowners through whose land a sewer was laid, an obligation to preserve to such sewer subjacent support, and gave them a right to immediate compensation for being deprived of the free power of working subjacent minerals. The court seemed to doubt whether any obligation was imposed as to lateral support, though from the remarks of JESSEL, M.R., in Roderick v. Aston L. B. (1877), 5 Ch. D. 328; 41 J. P. 516, it might be inferred that in his opinion there was a right also Effect of Act.

of lateral support for which the landowner was entitled to compensation. See also the decision of PARKER, J., on this point in Jary v. Barnsley Corporation, post, p. 719.

The present Act deals with the subject of "support," but though the title would imply that it has reference only to "sewers," the definition in the next section shows that it has a much wider application. Its effect is briefly as follows: The local authority are not to be entitled to minerals under any sanitary works constructed by them unless such minerals have been expressly purchased. Such minerals must not be worked if under or near the works without giving notice to the authority, who may then require them to be left unworked, making compensation for them. The authority may, however, define the extent to which they desire support to be left. The amount of compensation is to be settled by arbitration. If the authority refuse to take the minerals, the owner is to be at liberty to work them, though he must not do so in any unusual manner so as to cause damage. Power is preserved to the owner, if he is prevented from working the mines under the sanitary works, of making mining communications so as to work the mines on either side. Except as aforesaid, a local authority are not hereafter to acquire any right of support, whether vertical or lateral; but the saving clause preserves all rights acquired before the passing of the Act. This Act materially affects the amount of compensation to be paid by a local authority in a mining district, for as by the mere execution of a sanitary work they acquire no right of support, they will not have to pay for it until the owner of the minerals is desirous of working them. It is to be noticed, however, that the Act is limited in its application to support from mining lands. The law as to support in other cases remains as it was before the Act passed; that is to say, as declared in the Dudley Case, supra.

By a Provisional Order, confirmed by Act of Parliament in 1875, the B. Corporation were authorised to put in force the powers of the Lands Clauses Acts with regard to certain lands, which they required for sewage purposes. In October, 1875, the corporation gave to the predecessor in title of the plaintiffs notice to treat under that Order for some of his land (excepting the mines and minerals) which they required to take, and the question of compensation was referred to arbitration. In 1876, the arbitrator made his award in respect of the lands (excepting all minerals lying within or under the same). The compensation having been paid, the lands, excepting all minerals lying within or under the same, were conveyed to the corporation by two conveyances, dated May, 1878, and April, 1883; the conveyances contained a power for the owner to work the minerals by underground workings only. In 1876, the corporation gave notice to the plaintiffs' predecessor in title, under the P. H. A., 1875, that they proposed to construct an outfall sewer on certain land in his possession, and in 1878, the umpire made his award (purporting to be under s. 308 of that Act) reciting an agreement that the landowner should have rights of herbage, passage and building over the land, and awarding that the corporation should pay a perpetual ground rent of so much per lineal yard for the sewer. In 1904, the plaintiffs, the lessees of the mines, gave notice to the corporation that they intended to commence work within forty yards of the sewage works, and the corporation then gave notice that if the plaintiffs proceeded to work they would demand compensation in respect of any damage to their sanitary works, and that they claimed that they had acquired a right to support in respect of such works before the passing of the Support of Sewers Act, 1883. The plaintiffs thereupon sued for a declaration that upon the true construction of the Act of 1883, the other Acts of Parliament, and the Provisional Order, awards and conveyances, the defendants were not entitled to have (1) the outfall sewer, or (2) the main sewage works, or either of them, supported by the underlying or adjacent minerals. It was held that the corporation acquired in respect of the lands conveyed for the purpose of the main sewage works a natural right of support by the subjacent minerals and the adjacent lands of the conveying parties for such land, and for any buildings or works reasonably in the contemplation of the parties when the land was conveyed; that with regard to the outfall sewer the corporation had, on the principle of In re Dudley Corporation, ante, p. 717, a right to support from the subjacent land, if not also from the adjacent land in the same ownership, which right must be considered to have been covered by the award; and that the sewage works and outfall sewer were accordingly sanitary works in respect of which a right to support had been acquired before the passing of the Act of 1883, and in respect of which right no compensation was, at the passing of that Act, recoverable; and that the sewage works and outfall sewer were, therefore, excepted by s. 5, post, p. 722, from the operation of the Act, and were entitled to the rights of support required in respect of them (Jary v. Barnsley Corporation, [1907] 2 Ch. 600; 71 J. P. 468). Note to Section 1.

2. In this Act— Interpretation.

The expression "sanitary work" means any existing or future building or work constructed by or vested in or under the control of a local authority under the powers or for the purposes of so much of the principal Act or of any general or local Act or Provisional Order as relates to the construction or maintenance of any works of sewerage, drainage, sewage disposal, lighting, or water supply, and includes any fixtures, pipes, fittings, or apparatus connected with any such work, and belonging to or used by the local authority:

The expression "support" includes vertical and lateral support:

The expression "Sanitary Act" means the Act or Provisional Order under the authority of which a sanitary work has been or is constructed or is maintained, whether such Act or Order was passed and confirmed before or after the commencement of this act:

The expression "person" includes a body corporate.

It will be observed that the Act applies to the support of any "sanitary works," though the title would imply that it was confined to sewers. Thus, it will apply to gas and water works, or pipes, and to sewage works other than sewers.

As to the right of a local authority to support for buildings and property not being sanitary works within the meaning of this Act, see Durham C. C. v. South Medomsley Colliery, Ltd. (1916), 80 J. P. 343. And as to the right of support for sanitary works under leases, see Westhoughton U. D. C. v. Wigan Coal and Iron Co., Ltd., [1919] 1 Ch. 159; 88 L. J. Ch. 60: 120 L. T. 242.

3. The provisions of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, sections eighteen to twenty-seven (both inclusive) (a), with respect to mines, shall, in relation to any sanitary work (b) of a local authority, be deemed to be incorporated with this Act and with the Sanitary Act (b) under the authority of which such sanitary work has been or is constructed or is maintained, with the following modifications (that is to say): Application of provisions of Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, with respect to mines, to sanitary works over mines.

(1) For the purposes of such incorporation the said provisions of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, shall be construed as if the expression "the undertakers" referred to the local authority, and as if the expression "the special Act" referred to such Sanitary Act (b) and this Act, and as if expressions relating to pipes, conduits, or other works referred to the sanitary work (b):

(2) The local authority, by or with any notice under the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, of willingness to treat for or make compensation, or of intention to prevent or interfere with the working of any mines (c), may specify and define the nature and extent of support which they require to be left, and any such notice may extend to minerals beyond the distance of forty yards mentioned in the said Act or to such less distance as the local authority think fit (d):

Section 3.

(3) As regards sanitary works existing at the passing of this Act the local authority shall cause the survey and map referred to in section nineteen of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, to be made within twelve months after the passing of this Act (e) :

(4) The amount of any compensation in respect of support for a sanitary work (b) payable by a local authority under the provisions of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, as incorporated with this Act or the Sanitary Act (b), together with the costs of and incident to settling the same by arbitration or otherwise, shall be paid, charged, and borne in the same manner, and subject to the same powers and provisions as to borrowing and otherwise, as is provided with respect to the expenses of the construction or maintenance of the sanitary work by the Sanitary Act (f) :

(5) A local authority may from time to time make agreements with the owners, lessees, or occupiers of or the persons working any mine for compromising any claim made or to be made in respect of anything done or omitted before the passing of this Act in relation to the matters in this Act mentioned or otherwise for carrying into effect the purposes of this Act in relation to the past or future working of mines.

The provisions of this Act shall apply to every sanitary work as defined in this Act, whether the land on, in, over, or under which such work is situate is or is not vested in or occupied by the local authority, and is or is not wholly or partially dedicated to the public as a street, highway, or public place (g).

Common law right to lateral support.

(a) See these sections and notes thereto in App. I., post, Vol. II. These sections alter the common law where they are applicable. See Davies v. James Bay Rail. Co., [1914] 1 A. C. 1043 ; 83 L. J. P. C. 339 ; 111 L. T. 946 ; 30 T. L. R. 633. The position of a local authority who have a common law right to lateral support of land owned by them was recently considered under the following circumstances : In 1875 the Manchester Corporation purchased by agreement under the powers of a special Waterworks Act of 1847, (1) an estate from S., who reserved to himself the minerals thereunder, with full powers to work the same without making compensation ; (2) an adjoining estate from T., including the minerals. In 1875 the corporation obtained a further special Act, which incorporated the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, and under it they constructed a reservoir partly on the S. land and partly on the T. land. By s. 22 of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, if the owner, lessee, or occupier of any mines lying under the reservoirs of the undertakers, or within forty yards therefrom, be desirous of working the same, he must give the undertakers notice in writing of his intention so to do thirty days before the commencement of working, and if it appear to the undertakers, after an inspection of the mines, that the working of the mines is likely to damage their works, and they be willing to pay compensation for the mines to the owner, lessee, or occupier thereof, then he shall not work the same ; and by s. 23 if before the expiration of the thirty days the undertakers do not state their willingness to pay compensation to such owner, lessee, or occupier, he may work the mines as if that Act and the special Act had not been passed. The appellants, lessees of the mines under the S. land, gave notice to the corporation of their intention to work the mines under and adjacent to the reservoir, but the corporation gave no counter-notice of their willingness to pay compensation for the mines, and accordingly the appellants worked the mines and caused a subsidence of the T. land. In an action to restrain the appellants from so working their mines as to damage the T. land :—Held, that the mining sections (18—27) of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, did not deprive the corporation of their common law right to lateral support of the surface of the T. land, and that they were entitled to an injunction in respect of the appellants' workings, both within and without the forty yards limit (New Moss Colliery, Ltd. v. Manchester Corporation, [1908] A. C. 117; 72 J. P. 169). See also Howley Park, etc. Co. v. L. & N. W. Rail. Co., [1913] A. C. 11, as to the common law right of support enjoyed by a railway company outside the forty yards limit referred to in the mining sections of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845.

(b) See the definition in the last section.

(c) The notice here referred to is the notice to the owner not to work the minerals, under the Act of 1847.

(d) Forty yards is the distance prescribed by the Act of 1847. Under this Act the authority may require support to any extent, whether less or more than forty yards. This will to some extent, if not altogether, obviate the difficulty arising out of the decision in Metropolitan Board of Works v. Metropolitan Rail. Co., ante, p. 59.

(e) That is, on or before August 25th, 1884. See the section referred to. Compliance with this requirement is a condition precedent to the right to recover damage for injury caused by subsidence (South Staffordshire, etc. Co. v. Mason (1886), 56 L. J. Q. B. 255).

(f) That is to say, such compensation shall be paid pursuant to the provisions of the principal Act, unless the work is done pursuant to a special Act or Provisional Order which makes special provision for these purposes.

(g) This clause was probably inserted to protect the rights of the owners of mines under roads vested in urban authorities under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, ante, p. 273. It has been decided that that section does not vest the minerals in the urban authority (see cases in the notes thereto); and the Highway Act, 1878, s. 27, in App. I., post, Vol. II., contains an express provision with reference to the right to work mines under disturnpiked roads which have become vested in an urban authority. See Att.-Gen. v. Conduit Colliery Co. there cited. The case of Normanton Gas Co. v. Pope (1883), 52 L. J. Q. B. 629; 49 L. T. 798, as to the right of subjacent support for gas pipes laid in a highway, may be referred to in illustration of this clause.

Limitation of right to support for sanitary works over mines.

4. Except as in this Act provided, a local authority shall not by reason only of anything contained in the Sanitary Act (a) under the authority of which a sanitary work (b) has been or is constructed or maintained be deemed to have acquired or to be entitled to or to be bound to acquire or make compensation for any right of support for such sanitary work as against any person owning or working or being lessee or occupier of or entitled to work or otherwise interested in any mine; and nothing in such Sanitary Act shall be deemed to have subjected or to subject any such person to any liability to the local authority in respect of damage to a sanitary work caused in or consequent upon the working of any mines in a reasonable and proper manner.

(a) See the definition in s. 2, ante, p. 719.

(b) This section gives the Act a retrospective operation, except in cases where a right of support has already been acquired, as to which see the next section, and Jary v. Barnsley Corporation, ante, p. 719. Its effect is to prevent for the future the acquisition of any right of support otherwise than as provided by the Act. Therefore no such right can hereafter be acquired by prescription. But as to the common law right of support which may belong to a local authority, see New Moss Colliery, Ltd. v. Manchester Corporation, supra.

With reference to the operation of the Statute of Limitations upon the right of action arising out of subsidences caused by mining operations, see Darley Main Colliery v. Mitchell (1886), 11 App. Cas. 127; 48 J. P. 823; Crumbie v. Wallsend L. B., [1891] 1 Q. B. 503; 55 J. P. 421; West Leigh Colliery Co., Ltd. v. Tunnicliffe and Hampson, Ltd., [1908] A. C. 27.

Section 5. Savings.

5. Nothing in this Act shall be construed to repeal, invalidate, or affect any express enactment in a sanitary or other Act with respect to rights of support for sanitary works, or any agreement made before the passing of this Act with respect to such rights, or to affect any action, arbitration, or other legal proceeding concluded before or pending at the passing of this Act.

Where any right of support has been acquired (a) before the passing of this Act by a local authority in respect of any sanitary work, and no compensation is at the passing of this Act recoverable in respect of such right, nothing in this Act shall be construed to apply to the work in respect of which such right has been acquired, or operate to deprive the local authority of such right or to entitle any person to any compensation in respect thereof, to which such person would not have been entitled if this Act had not been passed.

(a) Note these words. This section was inserted to preserve to the local authority such rights of support as they had actually acquired by prescription or otherwise at the date of the Act. But such a right must have been actually acquired; in other words, if it is claimed to have been acquired by prescription, the prescriptive period must have been complete before the passing of the Act. If it was not complete the landowner will be entitled to the benefit of the Act.

As to such rights there is nothing in the previous sections which can apply so as to govern in any way the relative rights of the local authority and the landowner in respect of rights of support: see Jary v. Barnsley Corporation, ante, p. 719.

THE EPIDEMIC AND OTHER DISEASES PREVENTION ACT, 1883.

Such loans may be made forthwith and without any preliminary public notice or inquiry, if it appear to the Local Government Board desirable in order to the prompt and effective execution of such regulations (d).

made and confirmed in manner hereinafter provided, make regulations for the licensing, etc. of slaughter-houses, etc. The manner provided by that Act is set out in ss. 200—209, which are not, however, incorporated with the Public Health Act, but it would seem, notwithstanding, that these provisions applied to byelaws made by a local authority pursuant to the P. H. A., 1875 (Wallasey Tramway Co. v. Wallasey L. B. (1883), 47 J. P. 821.) However this may be, s. 202 required the byelaws to be confirmed in the prescribed manner, and if no manner of confirmation were prescribed, then by a judge of the superior courts or by the justices in quarter sessions. In order to remove all doubts with regard to the application of these provisions to byelaws made by a local authority under the P. H. A., 1875, this Act provides that no confirmation shall be necessary in future except that of the L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health). Provision is also made for the validity of past confirmation by the Secretaries of State under former Public Health Acts or local Acts. The foregoing remarks apply mutatis mutandis to the other incorporated enactments, all of which are set out in App. I., post, Vol. II.

(b) As to the provisions of the P. H. A., 1875, with regard to the confirmation of byelaws, see s. 184, ante, p. 441.

Confirmation of byelaws.

3. Every byelaw made or to be made under any of the incorporated enactments by reason of the incorporation thereof with the Public Health Act, 1848, the Local Government Act, 1858, or the Public Health Act, 1875, or any local Act, or any provisional order or any Act confirming such provisional order, and every rule and regulation made or to be made by an urban authority under section forty-eight of the Tramways Act, 1870 (a), shall be deemed to have required or to require the confirmation of the confirming authority, and not to have required, or to require any other confirmation, allowance, or approval.

(a) See the section in App. I., post, Vol. II.

Saving clause.

4. This Act shall not invalidate the confirmation, allowance, or approval of any byelaw, rule, or regulation, confirmed, allowed, or approved prior to the passing of this Act, nor shall this Act apply to any byelaw made or to be made under any of the incorporated enactments by reason of the incorporation thereof with any local Act, if such byelaw has or will come into force without any confirmation, allowance, or approval, or if by the express provisions of the local Act and without reference to the provisions with respect to confirmation, allowance, or approval of byelaws in any of the incorporated Acts, such byelaw is required to be confirmed, allowed, or approved otherwise than by the confirming authority.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (OFFICERS) ACT, 1884.

(47 & 48 VICT. c. 74.)

An Act to amend the Public Health Act, 1875, with respect to the Officers of Local Authorities. [14th August 1884.]

Short title.

1. This Act may be cited as the Public Health (Officers) Act, 1884, and shall be construed as one with the Public Health Act, 1875, in this Act called the principal Act.

2. Proceedings for the recovery of any penalty under the hundred and ninety-third section of the principal Act shall not be taken except with the consent in writing of the Attorney-General. Section 2. — Restriction on recovery of penalties.

The P. H. A., 1875, s. 193, ante, p. 456, forbids officers of a local authority to contract with such authority, or to accept any fee or reward other than their proper salaries. This provision is enforced by a penalty of £50, which the section provided might be recovered by any person, and these words were held in Fletcher v. Hudson, post, p. 730, to enable any person to recover it, whether he was aggrieved or not, and whether or not he had obtained the leave of the Attorney-General under s. 253, ante, p. 559. In so far as the proceedings for the penalty are concerned, the consent of the Attorney-General must now be obtained. See also the Public Health (Members and Officers) Act, 1885, post, p. 729, which contains further amendments of the law.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT CONFERENCES ACT, 1885.

(48 & 49 VICT. c. 22.)

An Act to provide for Expenses incurred in relation to Conferences of Local Authorities. [25th June 1885.]

1. This Act may be cited as the Public Health and Local Government Conferences Act, 1885. Short title.

2. Any local authority may, when empowered by and subject to any regulations made by the Local Government Board in that behalf (which regulations the said Board is hereby authorised from time to time to make, vary, or rescind), pay the reasonable expenses of any member or members or clerk to the local authority attending any conference or meeting of members of local authorities held for the purpose of discussing any matter which is connected with the duties which devolve on them, and any reasonable expenses incurred in purchasing reports of the proceedings of any such meeting or conference, and may charge the amount to any rates applicable to the general purposes of the Public Health Act, 1875, within their district. Expenses of local authorities may be allowed.

The foregoing enactment is simply a repetition, mutatis mutandis, of the Poor Law Conferences Act, 1883. General Orders have been made under it dated May 13th, 1891, and December 28th, 1896, for urban and rural authorities respectively, the text of which will be found in App. II., post, Vol. II.

The travelling expenses of members of local authorities in the execution of their ordinary duties within their districts are not payable out of the rates (R. v. Dolby (1902), 66 J. P. 521 ; 87 L. T. 27).

It will be observed that the Act refers to no officer except the clerk.

3. Expressions used in this Act have the same respective meanings as they have in the Public Health Act, 1875, save and except that in England the term "local authority" shall not mean or include the urban authority of any borough. Interpretation.

In other words, the Act applies only to rural authorities and to urban authorities not being borough councils. It does not apply to a town council who are the urban authority in their borough. Also, it does not apply to a port sanitary authority.

Section 1.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (SHIPS, ETC.) ACT, 1885.

(48 & 49 VICT. c. 35.)

An Act to amend the Public Health Act, 1875, in relation to Ships and Port Sanitary Authorities. [31st July 1885.]

Short title.

1. This Act may be cited as the Public Health (Ships, etc.) Act, 1885, and shall be construed as one with the Public Health Act, 1875, in this Act referred to as the principal Act.

Amendment of s. 110 of the P. H. A., 1875.

2. Section one hundred and ten of the principal Act shall have effect not only for the purpose of the provisions of that Act relating to nuisances, but also for the purpose of such of the provisions of that Act relating to infectious diseases and hospitals as are referred to in the Schedule to this Act.

Section 110, as amended, will now read as follows: For the purposes of the provisions of this Act relating to nuisances, and also for the purpose of such of the provisions of this Act relating to infectious diseases and hospitals as are contained in ss. 120, 121, etc. (see the schedule, post, p. 727), any ship or vessel lying in any river, harbour, or other water within the district of a local authority, shall be subject to the jurisdiction of that authority in the same manner as if it were a house within such district, and any ship or vessel lying in any river, harbour, or other water not within the district of a local authority shall be deemed to be within the district of such local authority as may be prescribed by the M. of H., and where no local authority has been prescribed, then of the local authority whose district nearest adjoins the place where such ship or vessel is lying. The master, or other officer in charge of any such ship or vessel, shall be deemed for the purpose of the said provisions to be the occupier of such ship or vessel. This section shall not apply to any ship or vessel under the command or charge of any officer bearing his Majesty's commission, or to any ship or vessel belonging to any foreign government. See the notes to this section, ante, p. 210. The provisions of some of the later Public Health Acts are expressly extended to ships. See, for instance, the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, s. 13, post, p. 804.

Constitution of permanent port sanitary authorities.

3. In any case in which the Local Government Board are by the principal Act authorised permanently to constitute a port sanitary authority by Provisional Order, they may permanently constitute a port sanitary authority by Order (a).

Every Order made under this section shall specify a day on which it shall come into operation in the event of its not becoming a Provisional Order as hereinafter provided, and at least four weeks before such day a copy of it shall be sent by the Local Government Board to every riparian authority (b) which is by the Order or otherwise required to contribute to the expenses of the port sanitary authority (c), and if before such day notice in writing shall be received by the Local Government Board from any such riparian authority objecting to the Order, and such notice is not withdrawn before such day, the Order shall be deemed to be a Provisional Order (d) duly made by the Local Government Board under the principal Act, and in the event of its being confirmed by Parliament shall come into operation on such day as may be provided in that behalf in the Act confirming it.

Any Order made under this section may, if the same has not become a Provisional Order, be repealed, altered, or amended by any subsequent Order made by the Local Government Board. Section 3.

(a) Section 287 of the principal Act enabled the Board (now the Ministry of Health) by Provisional Order permanently to constitute any local authority whose district or part of whose district forms part of or abuts on any part of a port in England, or the waters of such port, or any conservators, commissioners, or other persons having authority in or over such port or any part thereof (which local authority, conservators, commissioners, or other persons are in the Act referred to as a "riparian authority") the sanitary authority of the whole of such port or of any part thereof (in the Act referred to as the "port sanitary authority"). The Board were also empowered by Provisional Order permanently to constitute a port sanitary authority for the whole or any part of a port, by combining any two or more riparian authorities having jurisdiction within such port, or any part thereof, and to prescribe their joint action; or by forming a joint board consisting of representative members of any two or more riparian authorities in the same manner as is by the Act provided with respect to the formation of a united district. And the Board were further empowered by Provisional Order permanently to constitute a port sanitary authority for any two or more ports, by forming a joint board consisting of representative members of all or any of the riparian authorities having jurisdiction within such ports or any parts thereof. See the section, ante, p. 622.

The effect of the above amendment is to abolish the necessity for a Provisional Order in the foregoing cases, under the circumstances set out in the section, and to enable the Board in each of the cases to permanently constitute a port sanitary authority by an Order which will require no confirmation by Parliament. The Orders made by the Board will be binding and conclusive (s. 295, ante, p. 627).

(c) As to the expenses of a port sanitary authority and the mode of obtaining contributions from the several riparian authorities, see s. 290, ante, p. 624.

(d) In other words, s. 287 will apply as it originally stood, and the Board may then make an Order temporarily constituting the port sanitary authority pending the confirmation of the Provisional Order. As to the making of Provisional Orders, see s. 297, ante, p. 629.

SCHEDULE.

Sections 120, 121, 124, 125, 126, 128, 131, 132, and 133 of the Public Health Act, 1875.

The following are the words of the above sections as applied by this Act:

Section 120 (ante, p. 227).—Where any local authority are of opinion, on the certificate of their medical officer of health or of any other legally qualified medical practitioner, that the cleansing and disinfecting of any ship or part thereof, and of any articles therein likely to retain infection, would tend to prevent or check infectious disease, it shall be the duty of such authority to give notice in writing to the master or other officer in charge of such ship or part thereof requiring him to cleanse and disinfect such ship or part thereof and articles within a time specified in such notice. If the person to whom notice is so given fails to comply therewith, he shall be liable to a penalty of not less than one shilling and not exceeding ten shillings for every day during which he continues to make default; and the local authority shall cause such ship or part thereof and articles to be cleansed and disinfected, and may recover the expenses incurred from the master or other officer in charge of such ship in default in a summary manner. Where the master or other officer in charge of such ship or part thereof is from poverty or otherwise unable, in the opinion of the local authority, effectually to carry out the requirements of this section, such authority may, without enforcing such requirements on such master or other officer, with his consent cleanse and disinfect such ship or part thereof and articles, and defray the expenses thereof.

From the notes to this section, p. 228, ante, it will be seen that s. 5 of the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, may have superseded s. 120 in some districts. If so, s. 5 of the Act of 1890 will be applied for the purposes of this Act (Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 38 (1)). See also the notes under the other sections applied by this Act.

Section 121 (ante, p. 229).—Any local authority may direct the destruction of any bedding clothing or other articles which have been exposed to infection from any dangerous infectious disorder, and may give compensation for the same.

Section 124 (ante, p 231).—Where any suitable hospital or place for the reception of the sick is provided within the district of a local authority, or within a convenient distance of such district, any person who is suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder, and is on board any ship or vessel, may, on a certificate signed by a legally qualified medical practitioner, and with the consent of the superintending body of such hospital or place, be removed, by order of any justice, to such hospital or place at the cost of the local authority. An order under this section may be addressed to such constable or officer of the local authority as the justice making the same may think expedient ; and any person who wilfully disobeys or obstructs the execution of such order shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds.

It will be seen that this section already applied to ships, but the new Act makes clear what authorities may act under it. (See s. 2, ante, p. 726.)

Section 125 (ante, p. 232).—Any local authority may make regulations (to be approved of by the Local Government Board) for removing to any hospital to which such authority are entitled to remove patients, and for keeping in such hospital so long as may be necessary, any persons brought within their district by any ship or boat who are infected with a dangerous infectious disorder ; and such regulations may impose on offenders against the same reasonable penalties not exceeding forty shillings for each offence.

See the remarks on s. 124, supra. For "Local Government Board" now read "Ministry of Health" (9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 21).

Section 126 (ante, p. 233).—Any person who—

(1) While suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder wilfully exposes himself without proper precautions against spreading the said disorder in any street public place shop inn or public conveyance, or enters any public conveyance without previously notifying to the owner conductor or driver thereof that he is so suffering ; or

(2) Being in charge of any person so suffering, so exposes such sufferer ; or

(3) Gives lends sells transmits or exposes, without previous disinfection, any bedding clothing rags or other things which have been exposed to infection from any such disorder, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds ; and a person who, while suffering from any such disorder, enters any public conveyance without previously notifying to the owner or driver that he is so suffering, shall in addition be ordered by the court to pay such owner and driver the amount of any loss and expense they may incur in carrying into effect the provisions of this Act with respect to the disinfection of the conveyance. Provided that no proceedings under this section shall be taken against persons transmitting with proper precautions any bedding clothing rags or other things for the purpose of having the same disinfected. Schedule.

The application of this section to ships is not clear. It does not appear to have any bearing upon persons or things in ships beyond what it had before the Act.

Section 128 (ante, p. 235).—Any person who knowingly lets for hire any ship or part of a ship in which any person has been suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder, without having such ship or part of a ship and all articles therein liable to retain infection, disinfected to the satisfaction of a legally qualified medical practitioner, as testified by a certificate signed by him, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds.

Section 131 (ante, p. 238).—Any local authority may provide for the use of the inhabitants of their district hospitals or temporary places for the reception of the sick, and for that purpose may—

Themselves build such hospitals or places of reception ; or contract for the use of any such hospital or part of a hospital or place of reception ; or,

Enter into any agreement with any person having the management of any hospital, for the reception of the sick inhabitants of their district, on payment of such annual or other sum as may be agreed on.

Two or more local authorities may combine in providing a common hospital.

Section 132 (ante, p. 244).—Any expenses incurred by a local authority in maintaining in a hospital, or in a temporary place for the reception of the sick (whether or not belonging to such authority), a patient who is not a pauper, shall be deemed to be a debt due from such patient to the local authority, and may be recovered from him at any time within six months after his discharge from such hospital or place of reception, or from his estate in the event of his dying in such hospital or place.

Section 133 (ante, p. 246).—Any local authority may, with the sanction of the Local Government Board, themselves provide or contract with any person to provide a temporary supply of medicine and medical assistance for the poorer inhabitants of their district.

For "Local Government Board" now read "Ministry of Health" (9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 21).

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (MEMBERS AND OFFICERS) ACT, 1885.

An Act to amend the Public Health Act, 1875, with respect to the Members and Officers of Local Authorities. [6th August 1885.]

1. This Act may be cited as the Public Health (Members and Officers) Act, 1885, and shall be construed as one with the Public Health Act, 1875, in this Act called the principal Act. Short title.

2. Notwithstanding anything in the hundred and ninety-third section of the principal Act (a), or any similar restrictions in any local Act. to the contrary, it shall not be unlawful for any officer or servant Amendment of s. 193 of the P. H. A., 1875.

appointed or employed under the principal Act or local Act by the local authority to be concerned or interested in any contract with the local authority made with such consent or approval as is hereinafter mentioned for the sale, purchase, leasing, or hiring of any lands, rooms, or offices (b), or to be concerned or interested in any contract with the local authority as a shareholder in any joint stock company (c), and no officer or servant of a local authority shall be incapable of holding any office or of being employed under the principal Act or local Act, or be liable to any penalty by reason only of his having been concerned or interested either before (d) or after the passing of this Act in any such contract as aforesaid. No such contract as aforesaid shall be made after the passing of this Act, or approved if made before the passing of this Act, for the sale, purchase, leasing, or hiring of any lands, rooms, or offices except with the consent of two-thirds of the number of the members of the local authority present (e) at a meeting held after seven clear days notice shall have been published in some newspaper circulating in the neighbourhood, and after notice shall have been sent in writing to every member stating the nature of the contract, and the time and place of the meeting at which the question is to be considered (f).

(a) Section 193 (ante, p. 456) prohibited officers or servants appointed under the P. H. A., 1875, from being in anywise concerned or interested in any bargain or contract made with such authority for any of the purposes of the Act. If any officer or servant was so concerned or interested, he was to be incapable of afterwards holding or continuing in any office or employment under the Act, and was to forfeit and pay the sum of £50, which might be recovered by any person, with full costs of suit, by action of debt. In Fletcher v. Hudson (1880), 5 Ex. D. 287 ; 45 J. P. 5, it was laid down by BRAMWELL, B., that the penalty under s. 193 might be recovered by any person, although he was neither a party aggrieved nor had the consent of the Attorney-General under s. 253 (ante, p. 569). To meet this decision the Public Health (Officers) Act, 1884 (p. 724, ante), provided that proceedings for the recovery of any penalty under s. 193 should not be taken without the consent in writing of the Attorney-General. In other respects, however, s. 193 remained in full force. In Todd v. Robinson (No. 2) (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 739 ; 49 J. P. 278, it was held that an officer of a local board, who was a shareholder in a gas company having a contract with the board for the lighting of the streets, was, so long as the contract existed, interested in a bargain or contract with the board within the meaning of s. 193, and if the contract was capable of producing any profit to the shareholders of the company, he was liable to the penalty imposed by that enactment. In Burgess v. Clark (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 735 ; 49 J. P. 388, it was held that a demise of rooms was a bargain or contract within the meaning of s. 193, and that if an officer, employed by a local board, let rooms to the board at a rent payable to him, although the rooms were used by the board in the transaction of its business, he became liable to the penalty ; for the rent could not be considered as an allowance in addition to his salary under ss. 189, 193, being unconnected with the performance of any services in the course of his employment under the board. It was to meet these and similar cases that the present statute was passed. It must be noted that the Act does not affect the decision in Todd v. Robinson (No. 1) (1884), 12 Q. B. D. 530 ; 48 J. P. 692, that when any penalty is recovered under the section the Crown cannot remit the penalties under 22 Vict. c. 32, as that Act relates only to persons upon whom a penalty was imposed by judicial authority.

(b) This meets the case of Burgess v. Clark, supra.

(c) This meets the case of Todd v. Robinson (No. 2), supra. The words "joint stock company" will apparently apply to every joint stock company, however formed.

(d) The effect of this provision is to remove any liability or disqualification existing before the time of the passing of the Act by reason of an officer having entered into a contract of the kind mentioned in the section. Note to Section 2.

(e) The necessary majority is two-thirds of those present (not of the whole board), whether voting or not.

(f) The question of such a contract will in general arise at an ordinary meeting. In such a case the consideration of the question should be postponed until a day named, and the clerk should be instructed to insert the necessary advertisement, and to send a notice to every member stating the nature of the contract, etc. As to the sending of the notice, see s. 267, ante, p. 593.

3, 4. [Repealed.]

These sections were repealed by the L. G. A., 1894, post, p. 902, s. 46 of which contains the provisions now in force.

THE HOUSING OF THE WORKING CLASSES ACT, 1885.

(48 & 49 VICT. c. 72.)

An Act to amend the Law relating to Dwellings of the Working Classes.
[14th August 1885.]

Whereas it is expedient to amend the law with reference to the provision of suitable dwellings for the working classes:

The preamble was repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1898, and the rest of the Act was repealed by the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, post, Vol. II., except ss. 3, 7—9, and except s. 10 so far as it relates to byelaws authorised by those sections. Section 3 referred only to the sale of the sites of certain metropolitan prisons (Millbank and Coldbath Fields) to the Metropolitan Board of Works.

The Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, and other Housing Acts were in former editions of this work included in Vol. I. in chronological order. In the present edition they, or any consolidating Act which may replace them, will be included in Vol. II. The unrepealed sections of the Act of 1885 are however allowed to remain here as they effect amendments of general sanitary law.

Amendment of General Sanitary Law, etc.

7. It shall be the duty of every local authority entrusted with the execution of laws relating to public health and local government to put in force from time to time as occasion may arise, the powers with which they are invested, so as to secure the proper sanitary condition of all premises within the area under the control of such authority. General duty of local authority to enforce the law.

This section is repealed, so far as it relates to London, by the P. H. (London) A., 1891, s. 142.

The P. H. A., 1875, s. 299, ante, p. 632, provides that if an authority makes default in enforcing any of the provisions of that Act which it is their duty to enforce, the L. G. B., now M. of H., on complaint made may compel them to perform their duty. (The notes to that section should be referred to in explanation of the precise effect of such provision.) The present section is much wider in its operation. It applies to the execution not only of the P. H. A., but of all laws relating to public health and local government. And as it makes such execution a statutory duty, the remedy of any person aggrieved by any default, other than one to which the P. H. A., 1875, s. 299, is applicable, will apparently be by mandamus. The only limitation of the section is that in the last clause, which seems to confine its operation to the execution of such laws as may be necessary to secure the proper sanitary condition of premises. An example of the operation of this section may be given by referring to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 23, ante, p. 83. Under that section a local authority were originally bound to give notice to an owner to drain his house effectually; on his making default they were empowered (not bound) to execute the necessary works themselves. Now, apparently, by reason of the provision in the text, they have no option, but must execute the necessary works. Similar examples will readily occur to readers of the Public Health Act.

Amendment of s. 90 of the P. H. A., 1875.

8. Whereas under section ninety of the Public Health Act, 1875, the Local Government Board can declare that section to be in force within the district of a sanitary authority, and after the publication of notice of such declaration such authority is empowered to make byelaws with respect to lodging-houses, and it is expedient to authorise every such authority to make such byelaws without any declaration by the Local Government Board: Be it therefore enacted as follows:

Every sanitary authority shall have power to make byelaws for the matters specified in section ninety of the Public Health Act, 1875.

The preamble to this section was repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1898. Section 90 of the P. H. A., ante, p. 161, enabled the L. G. B. to empower a local authority to make byelaws as to houses let in lodgings, i.e., houses other than common lodging-houses. The powers given by that section may now be exercised by any local authority without the intervention of the Ministry of Health.

Tents and vans used for human habitation.

9.—(1) A tent, van, shed, or similar structure used for human habitation, which is in such a state as to be a nuisance or injurious to health (a), or which is so overcrowded as to be injurious to the health of the inmates, whether or not members of the same family, shall be deemed to be a nuisance within the meaning of section ninety-one of the Public Health Act, 1875; and the provisions of that Act shall apply accordingly (b).

(2) A sanitary authority may make byelaws (c) for promoting cleanliness in, and the habitable condition of tents, vans, sheds, and similar structures used for human habitation, and for preventing the spread of infectious disease by the persons inhabiting the same, and generally for the prevention of nuisances in connection with the same (d).

(3) Where any person duly authorised by a sanitary authority or by a justice of the peace (e) has reasonable cause to suppose either that there is any contravention of the provisions of this Act or any byelaw made under this Act in any tent, van, shed, or similar structure used for human habitation, or that there is in any such tent, van, shed, or structure any person suffering from a dangerous infectious disorder (f), he may, on producing (if demanded) either a copy of his authorisation purporting to be certified by the clerk or a member of the sanitary authority or some other sufficient evidence (g) of his being authorised as aforesaid, enter by day (h) such tent, van, shed, or structure, and examine the same and every part thereof in order to ascertain whether in such tent, van, shed, or structure there is any contravention of any such byelaw or a person suffering from a dangerous infectious disorder (f).

(4) For the purposes of this section "day" means the period between six o'clock in the morning and the succeeding nine o'clock in the evening.

Section 9.

(5) If such person is obstructed in the performance of his duty under this section, the person so obstructing shall be liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding forty shillings (i).

(6) This section shall apply to the metropolis, with the substitution of section nineteen of the Sanitary Act, 1866, for section ninety-one of the Public Health Act, 1875, and of nuisance authority, under the Nuisance Removal Acts, for sanitary authority (k).

(7) Nothing in this section shall apply to any tent, van, shed, or structure erected or used by any portion of her Majesty's military or naval forces.

(a) It is not necessary that a nuisance, in order to be within this section, should also be injurious to health. See the note to the corresponding words in s. 91 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 168, and Bishop Auckland L. B. v. Bishop Auckland Iron Co. (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 138; 47 J. P. 389.

(b) This is one of the most useful provisions of the Act. It enables local authorities to control a class of persons hitherto incapable of being reached through the sanitary laws. The effect of the sub-section is as follows: It is now the duty of the local authority to inspect the district for the detection of the nuisances to which the section relates (P. H. A., 1875, s. 92). Information of a nuisance under the sub-section may be given by any person aggrieved, or by two inhabitant householders, by an officer of the local authority, by the relieving officer, by any constable or police officer (s. 93). The local authority must then serve a notice for the abatement of the nuisance on the occupier of the tent, van, etc., for there will rarely be an owner distinct from the occupier (s. 94). On non-compliance with the notice complaint may be made to a justice (s. 95), and an order may be made by a court of summary jurisdiction (s. 96). It may be doubted whether a tent, van, etc., is a house or building within s. 97.

(c) The making, authentication, etc. of these byelaws is regulated by ss. 182—187 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, pp. 432—446. The provision of s. 185 as to the printing and publication of byelaws should be attended to. See the next section.

(d) The model series of byelaws under this section will be found in Mackenzie and Handford's Model Byelaws, Vol. II., p. 37. Local authorities will do well to adopt the byelaws without greater modification than may be absolutely necessary.

(e) Sanitary authorities may give a general authority to their officers or a special authority to any other person. A justice may also give a special authority; probably he will do so on application similar to an information.

made by the Metropolitan Board of Works, or any nuisance authority in the metropolis; and

(b) The provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875, relating to byelaws, where such byelaws are made by a sanitary authority (c), shall apply to such byelaws, and a fine or penalty under any such byelaw may be recovered on summary conviction.

(2) For the purposes of the execution of their duties under this Act the Local Government Board may hold such local inquiries as the Board see fit, and sections two hundred and ninety-three to two hundred and ninety-six, both inclusive, of the Public Health Act, 1875, relating to inquiries by such Board shall apply.

This section was repealed by the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890 (see note as to this Act on p. 731), except in so far as it relates to byelaws made under the sections of this Act remaining unrepealed.

THE CONTAGIOUS DISEASES (ANIMALS) ACT, 1886.

An Act to amend the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878.

[At the present time (April, 1922) s. 9 of this Act still has operative effect. By the Milk and Dairies Act, 1914, sub-ss. (3) (5) and (6) of s. 9 of the Act of 1886 were repealed so far as they related to England. The coming into operation of the Milk, etc. Act, 1914, was postponed by Order of the L. G. B. until October 1st, 1915. The Milk and Dairies Acts Postponement Act, 1915, provided that the Act of 1914 should not come into operation until such date, not being later than the expiration of one year after the termination of the War as the L. G. B. might by Order appoint. Later in the same month (July) in which the Postponement Act, 1915, was passed, the Milk and Dairies (Consolidation) Act, 1915, was placed on the Statute Book, but did not, and has not since, become an operative enactment, because by s. 21 (1) thereof it is provided that it shall come into operation on such date, not being later than the expiration of one year after the termination of the war as the L. G. B. (now the M. of H.) may by Order appoint, and no such order has been made. The Consolidation Act of 1915 is, it is believed, considered to be an unworkable measure, and it is proposed to modify it or replace it by yet another Act. The Consolidation Act provides that on its coming into operation the Act of 1914 and the unrepealed portion of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1886, shall be repealed. The position, therefore, is as follows: At the moment s. 9 of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1886 (the only portion of the Act now unrepealed), is in force, and so are the various Dairies, Cowsheds, and Milk Shops Orders. If an amending Act or a new Act containing the like repeals as in the Consolidation Act, 1915, comes into force before August 31st next (this being the end of the year following the official termination of the War) the unrepealed portion of the Act of 1886 will disappear, but, presumably, there will be a provision like that in force in the proviso to s. 21 (3) of the Consolidation Act of 1915 continuing in force existing orders and regulations until fresh ones are issued. If time does not permit of the passing of an amending Act or new Act before August 31st next and the expedient of a suspensory Act is again adopted, then, unless at the same time there is also a further suspension of the coming into operation of the Act of 1914, that Act will come into operation. The effect of this would be that portions only of the unrepealed section of the Act of 1886 would be repealed, and the existing Orders and Regulations would be abrogated because in the Act of 1914 there was no saving such as is contained in the proviso to s. 21 (3) of the Act of 1915. In this state of chaos the Editors have thought it best to delete here s. 9 of the Act of 1886 and the notes thereto and not to put into this volume the Acts of 1914 and 1915, but to leave the matter to be dealt with in Vol. II.]

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT (ENGLAND AND WALES) ACT, 1888.

(51 & 52 VICT. c. 41.)

An Act to amend the Laws relating to Local Government in England and Wales, and for other purposes connected therewith.

[13th August 1888.]

This Act established county councils throughout England and Wales, and transferred to them the administrative powers and duties formerly exercised and performed by justices in quarter sessions. In so far as it relates only to county councils, their election, powers, duties and liabilities, it is beyond the scope of the present Work, and on these subjects the reader is referred to a separate work on the Act by one of the Editors *; but it contains some provisions, and these of great importance, relating to sanitary authorities, and it is therefore necessary to set out these provisions, in order that the present volume may comprehend all statutory provisions such as are described in its title.

* * * * * *

Transfer to county council of powers of certain government departments and other authorities.

10.—(1) After the passing of this Act it shall be lawful for the Local Government Board to make from time to time a Provisional Order for transferring to county councils—

(a) any such powers, duties, and liabilities of her Majesty's Privy Council, a Secretary of State, the Board of Trade, the Local Government Board, or the Education Department, or any other Government department, as are conferred by or in pursuance of any statute and appear to relate to matters arising within the county, and to be of an administrative character: also

(b) any such powers, duties, and liabilities arising within the county, of any commissioners of sewers, conservators, or other public body, corporate or unincorporate (not being the corporation of a municipal borough or an urban or rural authority, or a school board, and not being a board of guardians) as are conferred by or in pursuance of any statute;

and such Order shall make such exceptions and modifications as appear to be expedient, and also such provisions as appear necessary or proper for carrying into effect such transfer, and for that purpose may transfer any power vested in her Majesty in Council:

(2) Provided that before any such Order is made, the draft thereof shall be approved, if it relates to the powers, duties, or liabilities of a Section 10. Secretary of State, or the Board of Trade, or any other Government department, by such Secretary of State, Board, or department, and approved, if it affects the powers, duties, or liabilities of any commissioners, conservators, or body, corporate or unincorporate, by such commissioners, conservators, or body; and every such Provisional Order shall be of no effect until it is confirmed by Parliament.

(3) If any such powers, duties, or liabilities as are referred to in any Provisional Order under this section arise within two or more counties, they may be transferred to the county councils of such two or more counties jointly, and may be exercised and discharged by a joint committee of such councils.

(4) The Act of Parliament confirming any Provisional Order made under this section shall be a public general Act.

This section was amended by the Local Government (Transfer of Powers) Act, 1903, as follows:

"1.—(1) Section ten of the Local Government Act, 1888, in so far as it authorises the transfer to county councils of certain powers, duties and liabilities of Government Departments, shall be construed as authorising the transfer by Provisional Order of all or any of those powers, duties or liabilities to the council of a particular county or county borough, as well as to such councils generally.

"(2) A Provisional Order shall not be made under this section except on the application of the council of a county or county borough.

"(3) Where the Local Government Board propose to make a Provisional Order under this section transferring any power, duty or liability to the council of a county or county borough, the Board shall give notice to all local authorities who, in the opinion of the Board, are likely to be affected by the transfer, and if, within such time as the Board prescribe, a majority of those authorities notify to the Board that they object to any such proposed transfer the Order shall not be proceeded with so far as relates to that transfer, but without prejudice to the power of the Board to propose a new Order.

"(4) For the purposes of this Act, the expression 'local authorities' means the following local authorities, namely, the council of a borough or other urban district, a rural district council, a board of guardians, a metropolitan borough council and the common council of the city of London."

The powers of the L. G. B. are now exercised by the M. of H. (9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 21).

Entire maintenance of main roads by county council.

11.—(1) Every road in a county (a) which is for the time being a main road within the meaning of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (b), inclusive of every bridge carrying such road if repairable by the highway authority (c), shall, after the appointed day (d), be wholly (e) maintained and repaired by the council of the county in which the road is situate, and such council, for the purpose of the maintenance, repair, improvement, and enlargement of, and other dealing with such road (f), shall have the same powers and be subject to the same duties as a highway board, and may further exercise any powers vested in the council for the purpose of the maintenance and repair of bridges (g), and the enactments relating to highways and bridges shall apply accordingly; and the county council shall have the same powers as a highway board for preventing and removing obstructions (h), and for asserting the right of the public to the use and enjoyment of the roadside wastes (i); and the execution of this section shall be a general county purpose, and the costs thereof shall be charged to the general county account (k).

Note to Section 11.

(a) The expression "county" practically includes every place within an administrative county, i.e., a county for which a county council is elected. It includes all quarter sessions boroughs other than county boroughs. See ss. 35 (3) and 38 (3), post, pp. 762, 764.

(b) The Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, so far as material and unrepealed, is set out in App. I., post, Vol. II.: see especially ss. 13—17, and the notes thereto. The administrative business formerly done by quarter sessions under that Act in respect of all powers vested by it in the "county authority" is transferred to the county councils by s. 3 (viii.) of this Act.

Bridges.

(c) County bridges over which a main road is carried are not affected by this provision. Apart from it they are repairable by the county council, the powers and duties of the justices in quarter sessions having been transferred to them by s. 3 (viii.) of this Act. The liability to repair a bridge ratione tenuræ is not transferred to a county council by virtue of this provision. But all bridges carrying main roads, if repairable by the highways authority, became in effect county bridges by virtue of this provision.

(e) Under 41 & 42 Vict. c. 77, s. 13, the county authority contributed only a moiety of the cost of maintenance. Now they are liable for the entire cost. This provision, however, does not affect their right to receive the income of charitable trusts created for the repair of the road or bridge (Att.-Gen. v. Day, [1900] 1 Ch. 31; 64 J. P. 88; Re Hall's Charity (1912), 76 J. P. 9; 28 T. L. R. 32).

A local Act of 1871 gave power to the corporation of a borough to order that in any street (whether or not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large) footways should be made by the frontagers of such form, size, and materials as the corporation should direct; and provided that if the frontagers made default in execution of the work, the corporation might cause the work to be executed and recover the cost from the frontagers. It was held that when the borough had by virtue of this Act become a county borough, the provisions of s. 11, supra, had not the effect of repealing the provisions of the local Act as regards streets which were main roads (Lodge v. Huddersfield Corporation, [1898] 1 Q. B. 847; 62 J. P. 387; see also Re Staffordshire and Derbyshire County Councils (1890), 54 J. P. 566).

"Maintenance, repair and improvement" of roads.

(f) Under 41 & 42 Vict. c. 77, s. 13, the county authority contributed only towards the cost of maintenance. It was held that the cost of removing snow, so as to render a main road passable, was an expense within the meaning of this term (Amesbury Union (Guardians of) v. Wiltshire JJ. (1883), 10 Q. B. D. 480; 47 J. P. 184). Cf. Acton U. D. C. v. London United Tramways Co., Ltd., [1909] 1 K. B. 68; 73 J. P. 6, as to a tramway company's liability to remove snow from a street under the Tramways Act, 1870. The cost of scavenging and watering was also held to be within the term so far as these were necessary for keeping the road in repair, as distinguished from scavenging and watering for purposes of public health and comfort (R. v. Essex JJ. (1888), 4 T. L. R. 676; Burnley Corporation v. Lancashire C. C. (1889), 54 J. P. 279; Warminster L. B. v. Wiltshire C. C. (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 450; 54 J. P. 375). The House of Lords held that lighting was not "maintaining or repairing," in Lanarkshire Road Trustees v. Fleming (1886), 14 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (H. L.) 18; and in Warminster L. B. v. Wiltshire C. C., supra, the court held that the cost of lighting main roads was not cast upon county councils by the wider language of the text. The words "improvement and enlargement of and other dealing" were inserted to meet the decision in Leek Improvement Commissioners v. Staffordshire JJ. (1888), 20 Q. B. D. 794; 52 J. P. 403, where it was held that converting a macadamised road into a paved road did not come within the term "maintenance," but it would no doubt be an improvement or other dealing with the road within the meaning of the text. See also London (Lord Mayor, etc. of) v. Barnes (1896), 12 T. L. R. 135. The Highway Act, 1864, ss. 47, 48, enumerates certain acts which are to be deemed improvements which a highway board may make, and the county council will have the same powers. These improvements include the conversion of any road that has not been stoned into a stoned road, the widening of any road, the cutting off the corners in any road where land is required to be purchased for that purpose, the levelling roads, the making any new road, and the building or enlarging bridges, and the doing of any work in respect of highways beyond ordinary repairs essential to placing any existing highway in a proper state of repair. See also as to improvements the Development and Road Improvement Funds Act, 1909, in App. I., post, Vol. II., amended by the Roads Act, 1920, post, Vol. II. The county council is liable to repair footpaths by the side of main roads, paved or pitched crossings, etc. (see Warminster L. B. v. Wiltshire C. C. (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 450; 54 J. P. 375; In re Burslem Corporation and Staffordshire C. C., [1896] 1 Q. B. 24; 59 J. P. 772; Derbyshire C. C. v. Matlock Bath and Scarthin Nick U. D. C., [1896] A. C. 315; 60 J. P. 676).

The owner of land, through which a main road ran, brought an action against the county council claiming a declaration that the council were liable to repair the retaining walls on either side of such road; he also asked for a mandatory injunction ordering the council to do any necessary repairs to such walls. It was held that the court could not consider whether the repair of these walls (or any other particular work) was necessary for the proper maintenance of the road, and that it would be contrary to practice to grant a mandatory injunction to do repairs even if the council were liable to repair the walls (Att.-Gen. v. Staffordshire C. C., [1905] 1 Ch. 336; 69 J. P. 97; but cf. R. v. Wilts and Berks Canal Co., [1912] 3 K. B. 623; 77 J. P. 24). The liability of a highway authority is general, i.e., merely to repair and maintain the highway; they must select and adopt proper methods of performing their duty; the court will not prescribe methods, but merely consider the result (Att.-Gen. v. Staffordshire C. C., supra). Whether the only liability as distinct from duty is on the inhabitants of the parish, quære (ibid.). See further as to the discretion of a highway authority as to the mode of repairing, Wednesbury Corporation v. Lodge Holes Colliery Co., Ltd., [1908] A. C. 323; 72 J. P. 417; R. v. Brighton Corporation (1907), 71 J. P. 265; 96 L. T. 762.

Repair of bridges.

(g) The county council have now all the powers formerly exercised by justices in quarter sessions as to the repair of county bridges. See s. 3 (viii.) of this Act. As to the general liability of the county council (as representing the "inhabitants") to repair a county bridge, see Att.-Gen. v. West Riding C. C. (1903), 67 J. P. 173, and cases cited therewith on p. 273, ante. A bridge was partly in Staffordshire and partly in Derbyshire, and by a local Act the expenses of repairing it were to be borne equally by the two county rates. Although by s. 50 of this Act the whole of the bridge became included in Staffordshire, it was held that the local Act remained in force, and both counties were still liable equally (Re Staffordshire and Derbyshire County Councils (1890), 54 J. P. 566). If the county council make any alteration in the road so as to cause a nuisance, they will be liable in damages to any person injured thereby: see Shill v. Gloucestershire C. C. (1893), Times, October 30th. But where the approach to a county bridge had subsided, and the county council proposed to raise it to its original level, it was held that they could not be restrained from doing so at the suit of a frontager, who alleged injury to his property (Atherton v. Cheshire C. C. (1895), 60 J. P. 6). As to the liability of councils, railway and canal companies and others to repair bridges and "approaches" thereto and fences thereof and in some cases to raise bridges when a subsidence occurs, see cases cited in note (d) to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 148, ante, p. 271.

For the purpose of repairing main roads the county council have the same right under this section of taking gravel from a pit as a surveyor of highways has (Norfolk C. C. v. Bittering Highway Surveyor (1894), 58 J. P. 497). See also as to the power of a county council to take materials for repairs under the Highway Act, 1835, ss. 51, 53, Allinson v. Cumberland C. C. (1907), 71 J. P. 398; 97 L. T. 187.

Removing obstructions to highways.

(h) The costs of prosecuting by indictment for obstructing a highway are properly chargeable as part of the cost of maintaining a highway (R. v. Heath (1865), 2 J. P. 452). JESSEL, M.R., expressed an opinion that the Crown or the conservators of a road had by their agents a right to remove an obstruction, though a private person has no such right if he could pass without doing so, and that in any case a body or person who represented the public would have such a right after judicial determination that there was an obstruction (Bagshaw v. Buxton L. B. (1875), 1 Ch. D. 224; 40 J. P. 197). But in Reynolds v. Presteign U. D. C., [1896] 1 Q. B. 604; 60 J. P. 296, it was held that an urban district council has power to remove encroachments upon any highway within the district vested in them by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, without first taking proceedings, either summarily or by way of indict ment, against the person responsible. And according to the dicta in Louth U. D. C. v. West (1896), 65 L. J. Q. B. 535; 60 J. P. 600, it would appear that this power is exercisable by rural district councils also. Moreover, in Harris v Northamptonshire C. C. (1897), 61 J. P. 599; 13 T. L. R. 440, it was held that a county council has the like power of removing obstructions without first taking proceedings, apart from any vesting in them of the soil of the road. In the Louth Case, supra, it was held that the local authority might recover the expenses of removal by action from the person responsible. Note to Section 11.

It has been held in Ireland that traction engine traffic which breaks up a road reasonably fit for the ordinary traffic thereof is a public nuisance, and that (apart from statutory provision) a council liable to repair such road can recover the extra cost of repairs as special or particular damage (Cavan C. C. and Bailieborough R. D. C. v. Kane, [1913] 2 I. R. 250. See also cases on p. 265, ante.

(i) The highway is prima facie the entire space between the fences which is capable of being used for passage. See and compare the following cases as to the presumption and the conditions to which it is subject: R. v. United Kingdom Telegraph Co. (1862), 2 B. & S. 647; 31 L. J. M. C. 166; Turner v. Ringwood Highway Board (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 418; Nicol v. Beaumont (1883), 53 L. J. Ch. 853; 50 L. T. 112; Harris v. *Northamptonshire C. T. 563), although there is no rule of law that a ditch running alongside a highway cannot be dedicated as part of the highway, merely because it is not part of the roadway and cannot be used by the public for purposes of passage (Chorley Corporation v. Nightingale, [1907] 2 K. B. 637; 71 J. P. 441); with the last case compare Walmsley v. Featherstone U. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 322. Nor would it include any part of the unenclosed land adjoining a highway which had never been dedicated as part of the highway though within fifteen feet of the centre of the road (Easton v. Richmond Highway Board (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 69; 36 J. P. 485). And see Robinson v. Cowpen Local Board (1893), 63 L. J. Q. B. 235; 9 R. 858. As to whether the whole width of a projected road has been dedicated, or only that portion of it as yet reasonably fit for traffic, see Rowley v. Tottenham U. D. C., [1914] A. C. 95; 78 J. P. 97. As to the liability of a local authority for the interference by a third party with the right of access to a highway, see Porter v. Tottenham U. D. C., [1915] 1 K. B. 776; 79 J. P. 169. The provision in the text appears to imply that the county council will have the same powers over and in respect of roadside wastes between the fences as they have with respect to the rest of the highway; but it is submitted that they have no powers or rights over roadside wastes which do not form part of the highway and which remain private property as before (Belmore (Countess of) v. Kent C. C., [1901] 1 Ch. 873; 65 J. P. 456). As to the vesting of the roadside wastes in the county council under sub-s. (6), see Curtis v. Kesteven C. C. in the notes to that sub-section. By the L. G. A., 1894, s. 26 (6), post, p. 939, nothing in that section shall affect the powers of the county council in relation to roadside wastes. Width of highways.

financial adjustment between a county and county borough, see Glamorgan C. C. v. Cardiff Corporation, [1915] 3 K. B. 438; 79 J. P. 505.

(2) Provided that any urban authority (a) may, within twelve months after the appointed day (b), or in case of a road in the district of such authority becoming a main road at any subsequent date then within twelve months after that date, claim to retain the powers and duties of maintaining and repairing a main road within the district (c) of such authority, and thereupon they shall be entitled to retain the same, and, for the purpose of the maintenance, repair, improvement, and enlargement of, and other dealing with such road (d), shall have the same powers and be subject to the same duties as if such road were an ordinary road vested in them (e), and the council shall make to such authority an annual payment towards the costs of the maintenance and repair, and reasonable improvement connected with the maintenance and repair of such road (f).

(b) The appointed day was April 1st, 1889.

Main roads "retained" by urban authorities.

(c) This means the district as constituted for administrative purposes (Middlesex C. C. v. Willesden U. D. C. (1896), 60 J. P. 630; 12 T. L. R. 437). It would seem that a claim, once made, is irrevocable.

In the case of a newly-formed urban district, the L. G. B. expressed the opinion that the urban district council would have no power under this provision to claim to maintain and repair roads within their district which for a period exceeding twelve months prior to the date of the constitution of the district had been main roads within the meaning of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878.

Similarly, a town council cannot claim to maintain main roads in an area which has been added to the borough if they were main roads at the date of the extension of boundary.

(d) As to these words, see note (f) to the preceding sub-section. A district council cannot execute works in a main road unless they have claimed to retain under sub-s. (2), or contracted to undertake, or been required to undertake, under sub-s. (4).

(e) In urban districts all streets repairable by the inhabitants at large are vested in the urban sanitary authorities by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, ante, p. 273. By that section they may cause all such streets to be levelled, paved, metalled, flagged, channelled, altered, and repaired, as occasion may require; they may also from time to time cause the soil of any such street to be raised, lowered, or altered, as they may think fit, and may place and keep in repair fences and posts for the safety of foot passengers. As to the meaning of the word "vest," see the cases decided with reference to the word as used in the P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, ante, p. 277; and see the note to sub-s. (6), infra. By the P. H. A., 1875, s. 144, every urban authority has all the powers, duties, authorities, and liabilities of surveyors of highways under the Highway Acts, and all the powers, etc. given by these Acts to the inhabitants of a parish in vestry assembled: see the notes thereto, ante, p. 253.

Payments by county council.

(f) This provision has given rise to a good deal of discussion. It has been contended that notwithstanding the use of the word "towards," the county council are liable to pay the entire cost, properly incurred, of the maintenance, repair, and reasonable improvement of a main road retained by an urban authority; that, in fact, their liability is no less than it would have been if the road had not been retained but was maintainable and repairable by the county council under sub-s. (1). In re Wiltshire C. C. and Marlborough Corporation (1894), 58 J. P. 213, to some extent supported this view. But in In re Bedfordshire C. C. and Bedford Urban Sanitary Authority, [1894] 2 Q. B. 786; 58 J. P. 786, MATHEW, J., said: "The legislature plainly contemplated the case ordinarily arising, in which it would not be fair that the whole amount incurred in respect of repair and maintenance should be paid by the county council, although it would certainly be just that some part should be cast upon the county council. The Act does not, however, exclude cases where the whole amount of costs incurred might be paid by the county council." See also Middlesex C. C. v. Willesden U. D. C., supra. The costs towards which the county council are to make payments include the costs of the maintenance and repair of the paved footways at the sides of the road, and of the paved or pitched crossings over the road: see cases cited in note (f) to the preceding sub-section. The order in Warminster L. B. v. Wilts C. C. (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 450; 54 J. P. 375, was settled after the judgments by CHARLES, J., and is to the following effect: (1) The county council are liable to make an annual payment towards the cost of the maintenance and repair and reasonable improvement connected with the maintenance and repair of all footpaths by the sides of main roads, whether these are gravelled, paved, asphalted, etc., and whether such footpaths are or are not footpaths which the turnpike trustees were exempted from repairing under 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 112. (2) The county council are under the like liability as to paved or pitched crossings over main roads. (3) The county council are liable to contribute an annual sum towards the cost of scavenging, cleansing, and watering main roads, in so far as such scavenging and cleansing are necessary for maintenance and repair as distinguished from purposes of public health. (4) The county council are under no liability with respect to the lighting of main roads (see sub-s. (11), post, p. 745). (5) If the local authority alter the paving or flagging of the footways, as, for instance, by substituting flagging, pavement, wood, or asphalte for gravel or other substance, the county council are bound to make an annual payment in respect of such alteration, in so far as it is a reasonable improvement connected with maintenance and repair, the question whether it is reasonable in any particular case being, in case of dispute, settled by arbitration under sub-s. (3). (6) The county council are not liable to make any payment in respect of the principal or interest of any money borrowed before the passing of this Act; but the court expressed no opinion as to moneys borrowed after that date. In In re Wiltshire C. C. and Marlborough Corporation (1894), 58 J. P. 213, the court held that although the whole burden might be cast upon the county council, that council were only bound to discharge their liability in the same way as the urban authority, so that if money was borrowed or capital expenditure incurred by the urban authority, the county council were only bound to pay the instalments, or were entitled to spread the expenditure over a number of years: and it was further held that this sub-section did not forbid the recovery from the county council of expenses defrayed out of borrowed money.

In Sandgate U. D. C. v. Kent C. C. (1898), 79 L. T. 425, the House of Lords held that the words "annual payment towards the costs of maintenance and repair" mean a payment to be made annually in respect of the expenditure of the particular year, not a fixed sum to be arrived at by taking the average expenditure over a series of years. They also held that a local authority under an obligation to keep up a road is chargeable with the cost of works necessary for its preservation, though they may not actually form part of it, such as a sea wall and groynes protecting the road from injury by the sea, and that the existence of a path along the top of the sea wall used as a promenade for pleasure as well as for passage makes no difference to the liability.

The use of the expression "annual payment" does not preclude the county council from making one or more payments "on account," provided that before any such payment is made the council have a favourable report from their surveyor as required by s. 11 (5).

(3) The amount of such payment shall be such annual sum as may be from time to time agreed on, or in the absence of agreement may be determined by arbitration of the Local Government Board.

See also note (f) to sub-s. (2).

Amount of payments: how to be fixed.

By the Local Government (Determination of Differences) Act, 1896, post, p. 1002, which seems to have been passed to meet the decision in In re Kent C. C. and Sandgate L. B., [1895] 2 Q. B. 43; 59 J. P. 456, this and the next sub-sections are to have effect as if for the words printed in italics were substituted the words "be determined by the Local Government Board either as arbitrators or otherwise at the option of the Board." It is therefore only where the Board (now the Ministry of Health) determine any difference or other matter as arbitrators that they are obliged to appoint under s. 63, post, p. 779, an arbitrator, who may be compelled under the Arbitration Act, 1889, s. 24, to state a case for the opinion of the court. Where the Board determine otherwise than as arbitrators they proceed under s. 87, post, p. 782, and this, in fact, is the course usually adopted. As to the finality of their decision where they so decide, see R. v. Local Government Board (1908), 72 J. P. 211.

By the same Act (s. 2, now repealed as spent), an Order of the Board made before the passing of this Act, and purporting to have been made for the determination of any matter under s. 11 of the Act of 1888, was declared not to be invalid by reason only of the Board having determined the matter as arbitrators or otherwise instead of appointing an arbitrator to determine it.

The L. G. B. have stated, in response to inquiries made of them, that they are willing to entertain applications for their determination of any such dispute as is hereinbefore indicated upon being asked to do so. Any application should be accompanied by (1) a copy of a resolution of each authority formally requesting the Board to determine the differences under the enactment referred to; (2) a statement of facts (in a form supplied by the Board for the purpose) in which both authorities should concur; (3) a map of the district showing by colour the main roads; and (4) a detailed account of the expenditure for the period. As regards any inquiry which would be directed by the Board to be held, it would accord with their practice to require by any Order issued in the matter that the costs (other than the Board's costs) incurred in relation to the inquiry should be borne by the parties by whom such costs had been respectively incurred. As regards their own costs, the Board would not, of course, be in a position to say in advance how they would be charged.

The Board state that it is contrary to their practice to explain the principles which guide them as arbitrators in determining differences as to the cost of main road improvements under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 11, as amended by the Act of 1896.

No great delay should be allowed to occur in bringing a dispute before the Ministry of Health. In the Local Government Board's Annual Report for 1906—1907 a case is referred to in which they were asked to deal with differences which had arisen as long ago as 1899. The town council had given receipts "on account," in acknowledgment of the contributions made by the county council, with the intention of eventually submitting the equity of certain deductions which had been insisted on by the county council to arbitration under the Act. The Board decided in this case to investigate the figures for three years only.

The L. G. B. would not undertake to settle a dispute as to whether a particular road was a main road or not.

The High Court has no jurisdiction to determine the question of amount under this sub-section (In re Bedford Urban Sanitary Authority, [1894] 2 Q. B. 786; 58 J. P. 786).

An agreement made under this sub-section requires a 10*s.* stamp (Cumberland C. C. v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1898), 62 J. P. 407; 78 L. T. 679; and see Southampton C. C. v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1905), 69 J. P. 105).

Contracts between county and district council.

(4) The county council and any district council (a) may from time to time contract for the undertaking by the district council of the maintenance, repair, improvement, and enlargement of, and other dealing with any main road (b), and, if the county council so require, the district council shall (c) undertake the same, and such undertaking shall be in consideration of such annual payment (d) by the county council for the costs of the undertaking as may from time to time be agreed upon, or in case of difference, be determined by arbitration of the Local Government Board (e); and for the purposes of such undertaking the district council shall have the same powers and be subject to the same duties and liabilities as if the road were an ordinary road vested in them (f).

(a) I.e. Any urban or rural district council. See s. 100, post, p. 785.

Note to Section 11.

(b) As to the meaning of maintenance, etc., see note (f) to sub-s. (1), p. 737, ante. This contract may apparently be for a term of years, a year, or a less period. An agreement under this sub-section between a county council and a highway authority does not take away from the former their rights and liabilities as the "road authority" under the Tramways Act, 1870 (Stockport and Hyde Highway Board v. Cheshire C. C. (1891), 61 L. J. Q. B. 22; 55 J. P. 808).

An agreement made under this sub-section requires a 10*s.* stamp (Southampton C. C. v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1905), 69 J. P. 105; and see Cumberland C. C. v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1898), 62 J. P. 407; 78 L. T. 679).

The Highways and Bridges Act, 1891, in App. I., post, Vol. II., contains further provisions enabling county councils and highway authorities to make agreements for the improvement, etc., of main roads, highways and bridges.

(c) The highway authority have no option, if required by virtue of this provision to undertake the maintenance, etc., of main roads. They must maintain and repair out of the funds in their hands for the repair of highways in their district, and the payments made to them by the county council will be paid into the same fund.

(f) A highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, if in an urban district, is vested in the urban authority; see sub-s. (2), note (e), ante, p. 740. But save in this case, a highway does not vest in a highway authority, and the words "vested in them" must here be read as equivalent to "subject to their control."

An urban authority is not liable to be indicted at common law for non-repair of a highway (R. v. Poole (Corporation) (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 602; 52 J. P. 84). But they may be indicted under the Highway Act, 1878, s. 10 (R. v. Wakefield Corporation (1888), 20 Q. B. D. 810; 52 J. P. 422).

(5) Provided that in no case shall a county council make any payment to a district council towards the costs of such undertaking as respects any road, or towards the costs of the maintenance, repair, or improvement of any road by an urban authority, until the county council are satisfied by the report of their surveyor, or such other person as the county council may appoint for the purpose, that the road has been properly maintained and repaired, or that the improvement or enlargement of or other dealing with the road, as the case may be, has been properly executed.

Proviso as to proper maintenance.

This refers both to an undertaking under sub-s. (4), and to the maintenance of main roads by an urban authority under sub-s. (2). As to the procedure in case of refusal to make a payment under this sub-section, see sub-s. (9), post, p. 745.

(6) A main road and the materials thereof, and all drains belonging thereto (a), shall, except where the urban authority retain the powers and duties of maintaining and repairing such road (b), vest in the county council (c), and where any sewer or other drain is used for any purpose in connexion with the drainage of any main road, the county council shall continue to have the right of using such sewer or drain for such purpose, and if any difference arises between a county council and any highway or sanitary authority as respects the authority in whom the drain is vested, or as to the use of any sewer or other drain, the council or the highway or sanitary authority may require such difference to be referred to arbitration, and the same shall be referred to arbitration in manner provided by this Act (d).

Vesting of main roads and drains.

(a) A drain, which upon the facts was held to have been a drain under the control of the highway authority prior to the passing of the P. H. A., 1875, and not to have been vested in the local authority under that Act, and which was held, under the present provision, to be vested in the county council as being a drain "belonging to a main road," is not divested out of the authority having control of the main road and vested in the local authority as being a "sewer" because a connection has been made without the knowledge of either authority between a house and the drain. The owners and occupiers of the house having brought an action for damages caused by the flooding of the cellars of the house against the local authority, and not against the county council, it was held, that the defendants were not liable and that the action failed (Rickarby v. New Forest R. D. C. (1910), 74 J. P. 441; 26 T. L. R. 586).

(b) This refers to sub-s. (2), ante, p. 740. Where the urban authority retain the right of repairing, the road will remain vested in them as formerly: see sub-s. (2), note (e), ante, p. 740.

(c) See the cases decided with reference to the meaning and effect of the word "vest" as used in the P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, ante, p. 277.

Roadside wastes.

A main road was 3,746 yards long; the metalled part of the road was of a uniform width of 22 feet; the total width of the road, including the waste on each side from hedge to hedge, varied from 65 to 95 feet. The unmetalled portion was covered with grass, timber, and other growths. C., the plaintiff, was tenant for life of the manor, which included the waste land adjoining the highways in the parish. The strips of land adjoining the highways were let annually by the plaintiff to cottagers, two of whom were also plaintiffs. The defendants, the country council, contended that the strips were vested in them by the provisions of the text, and they let the herbage to L., a co-defendant. The plaintiffs claimed a declaration that C. was seised in fee of the strips, and entitled to the herbage, trees, and other growths thereon, and for an injunction restraining the defendants from cutting or removing the grass, trees, or other growths. NORTH, J., held that the strips in question were "roadside wastes" within the meaning of sub-s. (1), but were not vested in the county council by the text, and he granted the injunction claimed without prejudice to the council's rights under the Act (Curtis v. Kesteven C. C. (1890), 45 Ch. D. 504).

(d) Arbitration in manner provided by this Act is regulated by s. 62 (2) and (3), post, p. 778.

Declaration as a main road.

(7) Where a county council declare a road to be a main road, such declaration shall not take effect until the road has been placed in proper repair and condition to the satisfaction of the county council.

This provision is in effect an amendment or proviso to the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, s. 15, for which see App. I., Vol. II., post. As to arbitration, if dispute arises as to the condition of the road, see sub-s. (9), infra.

Notice by county council to district council to repair.

(8) If at any time the county council are satisfied, on the report of their surveyor or other person appointed by them for the purpose, that any portion of a main road, the maintenance and repair of which are undertaken by any district council, is not in proper repair and condition, the county council may cause notice to be given to such district council, requiring them to place the road in proper repair and condition; and, if such notice is not complied with within a reasonable time, the county council may do everything that seems to them necessary to place the road in proper repair and condition, and the expenses of so doing shall be a debt of the said district council to the county council.

This provision applies only to main roads of which the repair has been undertaken under sub-s. (4), and not to main roads repaired by an urban authority under sub-s. (2). As to the method of determining cases of dispute under this sub-section, see the next sub-section.

The expenses incurred, being made a debt, will be recoverable by action in the High Court, or in the county court if less than £100. See note (a) to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 284, ante, p. 619.

(9) If any difference arises under this section between a county council and a district council as to the refusal of the county council to make a payment under this section to the district council in respect of any undertaking or road, or as to a road having been placed in proper repair and condition previously to its becoming a main road, or as to any notice given to the district council by the county council to place a road in proper repair and condition, such difference shall, if either council so require, be referred to the arbitration of the Local Government Board.

Determination of differences.

In this sub-section, for the words printed in italics must now be substituted under the Local Government (Determination of Differences) Act, 1896, post, p. 1002, the words "be determined by the Local Government Board as arbitrators or otherwise at the option of the Board." For the effect of this alteration, see note to sub-s. (3), ante, p. 741.

The differences referred to are those which may arise under sub-ss. (5), (7), (8).

(10) The county council may, if they think fit, contribute towards the costs of the maintenance, repair, enlargement, and improvement of any highway or public footpath in the county, although the same is not a main road.

Contribution by county council to other highways.

As to the meaning of the words "maintenance, repair, enlargement, and improvement," see note (f) to sub-s. (1).

The text uses the words "highway or public footpath," but a public footpath is to all intents and purposes a highway, and is repairable like any other highway: see per LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J., in R. v. Salop (1810), 13 East, at p. 97.

The contribution under this sub-section may be made subject to any such conditions for the proper maintenance and repair of such highway as may be agreed on between the county council and the highway authority: see the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25 (3), post, p. 935.

See further as to agreements between county councils and highway authorities in relation to the construction, improvement, etc., of highways, s. 3 of the Highways and Bridges Act, 1891, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

(11) Every authority having any power or duty to light the roads in their district shall have the same power and duty to light any main road in their district.

Lighting of main roads.

The result of this provision is that the county council are not liable to light the main roads in any case. In urban districts the power devolves on the urban authority under the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 161, 162, ante, pp. 364, 367. They may under these sections contract for the supply of gas or other means of lighting the street, and if there is no company having statutory powers in their district they may themselves provide a supply of gas for public or private purposes. In the latter case they may obtain a Provisional Order under the Gas and Water Works Facilities Acts or a special order under the Gas Regulation Act, 1920, s. 10, post. They may also purchase the undertaking of any gas company in their district. See the notes to the sections referred to.

In rural districts, unless urban powers have been obtained by the rural district council by Order of the L. G. B. under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 276, ante, p. 613, the power of lighting roads devolves ordinarily on the parish council under the Lighting and Watching Act, 1833, if that Act has been adopted. See the L. G. A., 1894, ss. 7, 53, in this connection.

Under the Electric Lighting Acts, 1882 to 1909, which are set out in Appendix I., post, Vol. II., an urban or rural district council might obtain a licence or provisional Order for the supply of electricity for public or private purposes. But see now the provisions of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1919, which is also set out, post.

Breaking up main roads.

(12) Anything authorised or required by law to be done by or to a highway or road authority shall, as respects a main road maintained by a county council, be authorised or required to be done by or to that council (a); and every authority having any power to break up any road in their district for the purpose of sewerage or otherwise shall have the like power of breaking up any main road in their district (b), but if the road is broken up the authority shall repair it to the satisfaction of the county council maintaining such road, and if it is not repaired to the satisfaction of the county council, that council may cause the necessary repairs to be done and may charge the costs against the authority, and the same shall be a debt due from the authority to the council (c).

(a) This provision apparently confers upon a county council all the powers and liabilities of a highway surveyor or a highway board for the purposes of main roads.

(b) A sanitary authority may lay sewers and water mains in any road, and may break up roads for that purpose (P. H. A., 1875, ss. 16, 32, 54, ante, pp. 55, 94, 128). Among other authorities who may break up roads may be mentioned water companies under the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, ss. 28—34; gas companies under the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847, ss. 6—12; tramway companies under the Tramways Act, 1870, ss. 26, 27, 30; electric lighting companies under the Electric Lighting Act, 1882, ss. 12, 13. All these Acts are set out in App. I., Vol. II. The provisions of the text as to the reinstating of the roads are in addition to those contained in those Acts.

(c) See the note to sub-s. (8), ante, p. 744.

Repair of main roads out of hundred rates.

(13) Section twenty of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, shall apply as if it were herein re-enacted and in terms made applicable to this section.

The 41 & 42 Vict. c. 77, s. 20, is as follows:—"Notwithstanding the provisions of this Act, in the case of any county in which certain of the bridges within the county are repairable by the county at large, and others are repairable by the several hundreds within the county in which they are situate, it shall be lawful for the county authority from time to time, by order, to declare any main road or part of a main road within their district to be repairable to the extent only and in manner provided by section thirteen of this Act, either by the county or by the hundred in which such main road or part is situate, as they think fit; and where a main road or part thereof is declared to be repairable by a hundred, the expense of repairing the same shall, to the extent to which but for this section the expense or any contribution towards the expense of repairing the same would be repayable out of the county rate, be repayable out of a separate rate which shall be raised and charged in the like manner as the expenses of repairing the hundred bridges in the same hundred would have been raised and charged."

The following is an extract from a letter, dated September 18th, 1878, from the L. G. B. with reference to this section: "The wording of this section, which was introduced at a very late stage of the Bill, and is limited in its application to the county of Lancaster chiefly, is somewhat obscure; but it may be assumed that the effect of declaring a main road repairable by the hundred is simply intended to be that the hundred rate shall be substituted for the county rate as the fund from which a moiety of the cost is to be repaid to the highway authorities. The justices will not fail to observe that where the alternative given by the section is adopted, it is desirable that all the main roads in the county should be declared to be repairable by the several hundreds through which they pass, otherwise the ratepayers of those hundreds will not only have to contribute towards the roads within their own hundreds, but also towards any roads within the county in respect of which a contribution is payable from the county rate."

By virtue of this provision as applied by the text the expenses of maintaining main roads may be made payable out of the hundred rate instead of the county rate, wherever 41 and 42 Vict. c. 77, s. 20, is in operation. The hundred rate is made and levied by the county council under s. 3 (i). It appears, however, that the expense of main roads in counties to which this section applies is a "general county purpose" (R. v. Dolby, [1892] 2 Q. B. 736). Note to Section 11.

12.—(1) After the appointed day, tolls shall cease to be taken on any road maintained and repaired by the Isle of Wight Highway Commissioners, under the Isle of Wight Highway Acts, 1813 and 1883, and after such day the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, as amended by this Act, shall apply to the Isle of Wight, and to every such road above mentioned, in like manner as if it were ceasing within the meaning of the said Act to be a turnpike road, and the Act of the session of the forty-fourth and forty-fifth years of the reign of her present Majesty, chapter seventy-two, shall be repealed. Roads and tolls in Isle of Wight.

The highways in the Isle of Wight are regulated by 53 Geo. 3, c. xcii. and 46 & 47 Vict. c. ccxxvi. The Isle of Wight was exempted from the operation of the Highway Acts by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 113; 25 & 26 Vict. c. 61, s. 7; 41 & 42 Vict. c. 77, ss. 2, 27; 44 & 45 Vict. c. 72. The text repeals the last-mentioned Act, which exempted the Isle of Wight from liability to contribute towards the county rate for the expenses of main roads. This exemption is now taken away, and the roads in the island are repairable as main roads, subject to the proviso contained in the next sub-section.

(2) Until provision is otherwise made by Parliament, or by a Provisional Order confirmed by Parliament (a), the repair and maintenance of the said roads shall continue to be undertaken by the said commissioners (b), and the county council for the county of Southampton shall pay such commissioners, in respect of the said repairs and maintenance (c), and of the expenses of the commissioners, such sums as may be agreed upon, or, in case of difference, be settled by arbitration under this Act (d), and the provisions of this Act with respect to main roads shall apply as if the commissioners were a district council who had undertaken the maintenance and repair of such road (e).

(a) In 1889 the Isle of Wight was made a separate administrative county of itself by Provisional Order confirmed by 52 & 53 Vict. c. lxxvii. Article 21 of that Order provides for the substitution of the county council of the Isle of Wight for that of the county of Southampton in the text.

(b) The commissioners were the Isle of Wight Commissioners mentioned in the preceding sub-section, appointed under 46 & 47 Vict. c. ccxxvi., ss. 5—15. These commissioners were abolished by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25, post, p. 933, and their duties under this section were transferred to the rural district council (In re Isle of Wight Highway Commissioners (1895), 59 J. P. 438; 72 L. T. 569).

(c) The words "improvement, enlargement of, and other dealing with" are omitted here. As to the meaning of the term "maintenance," see note (f) to s. 11 (1), ante, p. 737.

(d) As to arbitration under this Act, see s. 62, post, p. 775. It is to that section and not to s. 11 (4), ante, p. 742, that reference is here made (Re Isle of Wight R. D. C. and Isle of Wight C. C. (1900), 65 J. P. 87).

(e) See s. 11 (2), ante, p. 740. The language of this sub-section is very inaccurate. In the first place, the county is only to pay for repair and maintenance; in the second place, the arbitration is "under this Act," not by the M. of H.; so that s. 11 (2) differs in both these particulars.

13.—(1) After the appointed day no county road rate shall be levied and tolls shall cease to be taken on any road maintained and repaired by a county roads board in South Wales, in pursuance of the South Adaptation of Act to South Wales roads.

Section 13.

Wales Turnpike Trusts Act, 1844, and the Acts amending the same, and after such day the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, as amended by this Act shall apply to every county in South Wales as if the Highway districts in that county had been constituted under the Highway Act, 1862, and the Highway Act, 1864, or one of those Acts, and shall apply to every such road as above mentioned, in like manner as if it were ceasing, within the meaning of the said Act, to be a turnpike road.

Italicised words in both sub-sections repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1908.

By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 91, in each of the six counties of South Wales—namely, Glamorgan, Brecknock, Radnor, Carmarthen, Pembroke, and Cardigan—a "county roads board" was appointed, consisting of from six to twelve justices appointed by quarter sessions and certain ex-officio members, to have the superintendence, control, and management of all turnpike roads in the county. They had power to continue existing toll gates and to erect others and to take tolls. They might discontinue tolls on any road, and thereupon such road became an ordinary highway. By the same Act the commissioners who were appointed by the Act "for consolidating and adjusting the turnpike trusts of South Wales" might mark out and define in each county, districts which, subject to the superintendence and authority of the county roads board, should be placed under the care and management of "district roads boards." The members of these district boards were originally nominated by the commissioners out of persons possessing a prescribed qualification, all justices residing within the district being ex-officio members; vacancies were from time to time filled up by the board, the elected members retiring by rotation. The officers of the district boards were appointed by the county roads board. The duties of a district board were to direct and superintend all matters and things relating to the maintaining, repairing, and draining of the turnpike roads in the district, and the execution of any work or improvement placed under their direction and superintendence by the county roads board. Each district board annually elected two members to serve on the county roads board. The tolls received were paid into the county roads fund, and if that were insufficient for the expenses payable out of it, the quarter sessions had to make a county road rate to supply the deficiency.

By 14 and 15 Vict. c. 16, the county roads board of each county was required to divide the county into highway districts for the separate management of the ordinary highways therein. For each district a highway board was to be appointed, consisting of the guardians elected for each parish in the district and the resident justices. The Act was repealed by 23 & 24 Vict. c. 68, but the repeal did not affect existing districts. The county roads board were empowered to alter districts and appoint surveyors for each district. All land or property which would otherwise have become vested in the surveyor of any parish under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, was transferred to the highway board, which took over the care and management of the ordinary highways. The expenses of maintenance, etc. were chargeable to each parish and levied by a highway rate. Subject to the provisions of the Act and later amending Acts, the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, applies to ordinary highways in South Wales.

This section abolishes county roads boards, and makes the roads formerly repairable by them main roads. Consequently they are now repairable by the county council under the provisions of s. 11, ante, p. 736, and that section will apply in all respects as if these roads had been main roads under the Highway Act of 1878.

The effect of s. 25 of the L. G. A., 1894, was that highway boards in South Wales were superseded by rural district councils.

(2) On the appointed day every county roads board and district roads board (a) in each county shall cease to exist, and the property, debts, and liabilities of any such board shall be transferred to the county council, and that council shall be the successors of the county and district roads boards, and the provisions of this Act, with respect to the transfer of the property, debts, and liabilities of quarter sessions to county councils, and with respect to the officers and servants of quarter sessions (b), shall apply as if they were herein re-enacted and made applicable to the property, debts, liabilities, and officers of the said county and district roads boards. Section 13.

(a) See the note to the preceding sub-section.

(b) The provisions of the Act as to transfer of debts, etc., and with respect to officers, are outside the scope of the present Work. The reader will find these provisions in the separate Work on the L. G. A., 1888, by Macmorran and Dill.

(3) For the following purposes (that is to say):

(a) For giving effect to the said transfer of the property, debts, and liabilities, and for controlling the officers and servants transferred by this section to the county council, and otherwise winding up the affairs of the county and district roads boards; and

(b) For the purpose of the appointment of the surveyor of a highway board, the alteration of a highway district, and other purposes relating to highway boards;

the county council of every county in South Wales shall have all the powers of a county roads board in a county under the South Wales Turnpike Trusts Act, 1844, and the Acts amending the same, so, however, that nothing shall confer on the county council any power to levy any toll or county road rate.

See generally the notes to sub-s. (1) of this section.

14.—(1) On and after the appointed day (a) a county council shall have power, in addition to any other authority, to enforce the provisions of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (subject to the restrictions in that Act contained) (b), in relation to so much of any stream as is situate within, or passes through or by, any part of their county, and for that purpose they shall have the same powers and duties as if they were a sanitary authority within the meaning of that Act, or any other authority having power to enforce the provisions of that Act, and the county were their district (c). Power to county council to enforce provisions of Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876.

(a) Repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1908. The appointed day was April 1st, 1890 (s. 109). A county borough council is a county council for this purpose.

(b) The full text of this Act is set out in App. I., post, Vol. II.

(c) Parts I. and II. of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876, relate to pollution of streams by solid matters and sewage. Part III. deals with manufacturing and mining pollution. By s. 6 proceedings shall not be taken under Part III. save by a sanitary authority and with the consent of the L. G. B. If the sanitary authority, on the application of a person interested, refuse to take proceedings, such person may apply to the L. G. B., who, after inquiry, may direct the sanitary authority to take proceedings. The Board are not to give their consent to proceedings by the sanitary authority of any district which is the seat of any manufacturing industry, unless they are satisfied, after due inquiry, that means for rendering harmless the poisonous, noxious, or polluting liquids proceeding from the processes of such manufactures, are reasonably practicable and available under all the circumstances of the case, and that no material injury will be inflicted by such proceedings on the interests of such industry. Any person against whom proceedings are proposed to be taken under Part III. of the Act, notwithstanding any consent of the L. G. B., Effect of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act.

may object before the sanitary authority to such proceedings being taken, and the authority must if required in writing by such person afford him an opportunity of being heard against such proceedings being taken, so far as the same relate to his works or manufacturing processes. The authority must thereupon allow such person to be heard by himself, agents, and witnesses, and after inquiry such authority must determine, having regard to all the considerations to which the L. G. B. are by the section directed to have regard, whether such proceedings shall be taken or not. When any authority has taken proceedings under the Act, no other sanitary authority may take proceedings under the Act, until the party against whom the proceedings are intended has failed in reasonable time to carry out the order of any competent court under the Act. By s. 8, every sanitary authority, subject to the restrictions in the Act, have power to enforce the provisions of the Act in relation to any stream being within or passing through or by any part of their district, and for that purpose to institute proceedings in respect of any offence against the Act which causes interference with the due flow within their district of any stream or the pollution within their district of any stream, against any other sanitary authority or person, whether such offence is committed within or without the district of the first-named sanitary authority. By s. 13, two months' notice of proceedings under the Act must be given. In the section above quoted the Ministry of Health must now be substituted for the L. G. B.

The text enables a county council to institute proceedings under the Act, in all cases in which a sanitary authority could do so, and, of course, they can institute proceedings against any sanitary authority in respect of sewage pollution.

Proceedings against a sanitary authority are facilitated by the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1893, post, Vol. II., which provides that where any sewage matter falls or flows or is carried into any stream after passing through or along a channel which is vested in a sanitary authority, the sanitary authority shall for the purposes of the Act of 1876 be deemed knowingly to permit the sewage matter so to fall, flow, or be carried. See also the P. H. A., 1875, s. 17, ante, p. 60, and notes.

(2) Any county council shall have power to contribute towards the costs of any prosecution under the said Act instituted by any other county council or by any urban or rural authority.

Proceedings under the Act.

Proceedings under the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876, are instituted in the county court, subject to power to remove them into the High Court in certain cases (s. 10). Though the powers given by the Act are cumulative, and do not affect other remedies, e.g., by way of indictment or injunction (s. 16), yet the action in the county court seems to be the only proceeding which can be called "a prosecution under the said Act." It should be added that if default is made in complying with any order of the county court, a penalty not exceeding £50 a day may be imposed, and such penalty is recoverable as a judgment debt (s. 10).

Although the sub-section speaks of a prosecution, proceedings in the county court for an order under the Act of 1876 are not of a criminal or penal nature, and interrogatories may be allowed (Derby Corporation v. Derbyshire C. C., [1897] A. C. 550).

(3) The Local Government Board, by Provisional Order (a) made on the application of the council of any of the counties concerned, may constitute a joint committee or other body representing all the administrative counties through or by which a river, or any specified portion of a river, or any tributary thereof, passes, and may confer on such committee or body all of the powers of a sanitary authority under the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876, or such of them as may be specified in the Order (b); and the Order may contain such provisions respecting the constitution and proceedings of the said committee or body as may seem proper, and may provide for the payment of the expenses of such committee or body by the administrative counties represented by it, and for the audit of the accounts of such committee or body, and their officers.

Note to Section 14.

(b) The powers of a county council under sub-s. (1) are limited to their county. The text enables a joint authority to be appointed for several counties, so as to constitute one authority for an entire river and its tributaries, and that body may, therefore, prevent the pollution of a river at any point of its course.

Joint committees and rivers boards.

By a Provisional Order made under this sub-section and duly confirmed by Act of Parliament, the L. C. B. created a joint committee with power to prevent the pollution of the rivers Mersey and Irwell or the tributaries thereof. At the date of this Order the Manchester Ship Canal was in course of construction, and it was held that after the canal was completed it was included under the words "the rivers Mersey and Irwell or the tributaries thereof" (Mersey and Irwell Watershed Joint Committee v. Salford Corporation (1895), Times, May 17th).

There are only two other joint rivers committees at present—the Ribble Joint Committee and the West Riding of Yorkshire Rivers Board.

The powers of the latter board and of the Mersey and Irwell Joint Committee were somewhat modified and enlarged by the West Riding of Yorkshire Rivers Act, 1894, and the Mersey and Irwell Joint Committee Act, 1892, respectively.

In the third report of the Royal Commission on Sewage Disposal, the commissioners, after recommending the creation of a central authority to determine differences between local authorities and manufacturers in the matter of the disposal of trade refuse and to secure the protection of rivers and other sources of water supply from pollution, advocate the formation of rivers boards throughout the country. The following is an extract from the report:

"Although the rivers boards are merely joint committees of county councils, and therefore only possess for the combined areas the same powers which the individual councils might have exercised in their respective districts, we are satisfied that such combinations are of much greater value for the protection of rivers and streams than the separate councils acting independently.

"In the first place, they are bodies expressly created for enforcing the provisions of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, whereas the separate county council is under no obligation to enforce these provisions. And we find as a fact that in many counties outside the areas represented by the existing rivers boards, little or nothing is done by the county council to exercise its powers of checking river pollution.

"Then, too, a rivers board has jurisdiction over practically the whole of a watershed. This is a point of considerable importance.

"It has been again and again pointed out by previous Commissions that to obtain effective action there should be some one authority with power to deal in each instance with the whole watershed, and we entirely concur in this view.

"Another advantage of combination is that the area under the jurisdiction of a rivers board is sufficiently large to secure the appointment of skilled officers.

"We have not sufficient information to enable us to say what precise combinations should be made. Each rivers board district should however include, as far as practicable, the whole of one or more watersheds, and it should be sufficiently large to justify the permanent appointment of a skilled chief inspector at an adequate salary.

"One of the first duties of the central authority will be to ascertain what grouping of counties would be most effective, and then to take steps to constitute rivers boards for these areas."

Power of county councils to appoint medical officer of health.

17.—(1) The council of any county may, if they see fit, appoint and pay a medical officer of health, or medical officers of health (a), who shall not hold any other appointment or engage in private practice without express written consent of the council.

(2) The county council and any district council may from time to time make and carry into effect arrangements for rendering the services of such officer or officers regularly available in the district of the district council, on such terms as to the contribution by the district council to the salary of the medical officer, or otherwise, as may be agreed, and the medical officer shall have within such district all the powers and duties of a medical officer appointed by a district council (b).

(3) So long as such an arrangement is in force, the obligation of the district council under the Public Health Act, 1875, to appoint a medical officer of health shall be deemed to be satisfied without the appointment of a separate medical officer (b).

(a) The italicised portion of this section was repealed by the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909. Section 68 of that Act made the appointment of a medical officer by a county council obligatory. As to the appointment, powers, and duties of such officers, see that section and s. 69 and the notes thereto. See also the amending provisions in the Housing Act, 1919, Sched. 2.

(b) The power to make such an arrangement as was contemplated by sub-ss. (2) and (3) was determined—without prejudice to existing arrangements—by the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909, s. 68 (2). The L. G. B. had come to view such arrangements with disfavour. "There are," they had said, "many and marked objections to the same person holding the offices of county and district medical officer of health, seeing that in the former capacity he may be placed in a position in which he should criticise his proceedings in the latter capacity. A county council has power under the Act to make a representation to the Board on matters arising out of the reports of local medical officers of health, and in doing so they usually act on the advice of their own medical officer of health. If, however, their medical officer of health is acting as a local medical officer of health for several sanitary districts, he is obviously not in such a position of independence as is desirable with a view to the county council obtaining from him thoroughly impartial and disinterested advice. Hence it is desirable that where possible the county medical officer of health should be entirely independent of similar local appointments. But the Board's experience is that in the smaller counties where there is not sufficient work to occupy the whole time of a county medical officer of health the county council may properly arrange for him to act as medical officer of health for one or two district councils. The general objections above pointed out would apply to these appointments, no doubt, but the balance of advantage may be regarded as in favour of such appointments being made in the circumstances indicated. The Board do not think the principle could with advantage be extended to the larger counties."

Qualification of medical officers of health.

18. Except where the Local Government Board, for reasons brought to their notice, may see fit in particular cases specially to allow, no person shall hereafter be appointed the medical officer of health of any county or county district, or combination of county districts, or the deputy of any such officer, unless he be legally qualified for the practice of medicine, surgery, and midwifery.

The P. H. A., 1875, s. 191, ante, p. 454, simply required that a medical officer of health should be a legally qualified medical practitioner, i.e., simply a person registered under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90. A person might, before June 1st, 1887 (when the 49 & 50 Vict. c. 48, came into operation) have been registered, though qualified for the practice of medicine only, or of surgery only. A medical officer of health must now possess the triple qualification, unless the Ministry of Health grants a special dispensation, and this cannot be done in cases falling within the next sub-section. See also as to the appointment and tenure of medical officers of health, the Public Health (Officers) Act, 1921, 11 & 12 Geo. 5, c. 23, post. See also as to county medical officers, the Order of July 29th, 1910, in App. II., Vol. II., post.

A "county district" is an urban or rural district. See s. 100, post, p. 785.

The same medical officer may be appointed for two or more districts under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 191, with the sanction of the Ministry of Health; and by s. 286 the L. G. B. (now the M. of H.) may, by Order, unite two or more districts in the same county for the purpose of appointing a medical officer of health. The same section provides that in case of illness or incapacity of the medical officer of health, a local authority may appoint and pay a deputy medical officer, subject to the approval of the Ministry.

Note to Section 18.

(2) No person shall after the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two be appointed the medical officer of health of any county (a) or of any such district or combination of districts, as contained, according to the last published census for the time being, a population of fifty thousand or more inhabitants (b), unless he is qualified as above mentioned (c), and also either is registered in the medical register as the holder of a diploma in sanitary science, public health, or State medicine under section twenty-one of the Medical Act, 1886 (d), or has been during three consecutive years preceding the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two a medical officer of a district or combination of districts, with a population according to the last published census of not less than twenty thousand, or has before the passing of this Act been for not less than three years a medical officer or inspector of the Local Government Board (e).

(a) The medical officer of a county is appointed under s. 17, ante, p. 751, and the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909, s. 68, post, Vol. II.

(b) The districts here referred to are the county districts mentioned in sub-s. (1), i.e., urban and rural sanitary districts having a population of 50,000 or upwards.

(c) See sub-s. (1), supra.

(d) The 49 & 50 Vict. c. 48, s. 21, provides that every registered medical practitioner to whom a diploma for proficiency in sanitary science, public health, or State medicine has, after special examination, been granted by any college or faculty of physicians or surgeons, or university, in the United Kingdom, or by any such bodies acting in combination, shall, if such diploma appears to the Privy Council, or to the General Council, to deserve recognition in the medical register, be entitled, on payment of such fee as the General Council may appoint, to have such diploma entered in the said register, in addition to any other diploma or diplomas in respect of which he is registered.

(e) The medical officer of health of the Ministry of Health is appointed under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 97, s. 4 ; 34 & 35 Vict. c. 70. Inspectors are appointed under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 109, s. 19, and 34 & 35 Vict. c. 70, s. 2 (see this Act in App. I., post, Vol. II.).

Power of county council as to report of medical officer of health.

19.—(1) Every medical officer of health for a district in any county shall send to the county council a copy of every periodical report of which a copy is for the time being required by the regulations of the Local Government Board to be sent to the Board, and if a medical officer fails to send such copy the county council may refuse to pay any contribution, which otherwise the council would in pursuance of this Act pay, towards the salary of such medical officer.

Under the orders made by the L. G. B. relating to medical officers of health, every medical officer is required to make an annual report to the end of December in each year, and a copy of such report is sent to the Ministry of Health. See these orders in App. II., post, Vol. II. In future a copy of every such report must be sent to the county council, otherwise the contribution which that council would have to make under s. 24 (2) of this Act towards the salary of the officer may be withheld.

(2) If it appears to the county council from any such report that the Public Health Act, 1875, has not been properly put in force within the Section 19. district to which the report relates, or that any other matter affecting the public health of the district requires to be remedied, the council may cause a representation to be made to the Local Government Board on the matter.

This representation is not equivalent to a complaint under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 299, ante, p. 632, so as to enable the Board (now the Ministry of Health) to compel the defaulting authority to perform the duty in which it has made default, and some county councils have found it more satisfactory to make a formal complaint under the Act of 1875. Under it the Ministry, if satisfied of the alleged default after due inquiry, may make an order on the local authority for the performance of their duty, and enforce this order by mandamus, or appoint a person to perform the duty and recover the expenses from the local authority.

A further remedy for the enforcement of the Public Health Acts in rural districts is provided by ss. 16 and 19 (8) of the L. G. A., 1894, post, pp. 920, 923.

Payments by county council in substitution for annual local grants out of Exchequer in aid of local rates.

24. Whereas certain grants heretofore made out of the Exchequer in aid of local rates (a) (in this Act referred to as local grants) will by reason of the duties on the local taxation licences (b) and the probate duty grant (b) being by this Act made payable to local authorities, cease, it is therefore hereby enacted as follows:

(1) So much of any enactment as requires or authorises payment out of the Exchequer of any local grant in substitution for which the county council is required by this Act to make any payment is hereby repealed as from the thirty-first day of March next after the passing of this Act without prejudice to any right accrued before that day (c).

Italicised words repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1908.

(a) These local grants were made out of funds provided by Parliament. They are no longer made.

Later provisions.

(b) The "local taxation licences" are enumerated in Sched. I. to this Act. The duties thereon were formerly excise duties, but s. 20 of this Act directed the commissioners of Inland Revenue to pay the proceeds into the Local Taxation Account at the Bank of England. The amount collected in each county was to be certified by the commissioners, and paid out under the direction of the L. G. B. to the council of that county. As to the payment into the local taxation account of the duties on motor-cars, etc., the fees for licences and the penalties and forfeitures payable under the Acts relating to mechanically propelled vehicles, see the Roads Act, 1920, 10 & 11 Geo. 5, c. 72, and the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Order, 7th February, 1921, post. The Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896, 59 & 60 Vict. c. 36, s. 8, imposed certain excise duties on light locomotives, and provided that every such duty should be paid together with the duty on the licence for the locomotive as a carriage or a hackney carriage, and should be dealt with in manner directed with respect to duties on local taxation licences within the meaning of the L. G. A., 1888. As to the "Probate Duty Grant," see s. 21 of this Act, which directed the commissioners of Inland Revenue to pay into the Local Taxation Account four-fifths of one-half of the proceeds of the sums collected by them in respect of the probate duties. The sum so paid in was to be distributed among the councils of the several counties in England and Wales in proportion to the share certified by the L. G. B. to have been received by each county in the financial year ending March 31st, 1888, out of the grants theretofore made out of the Exchequer in aid of local rates. The Finance Act, 1894, s. 19, provided that in substitution for this grant out of the probate duties, there should be paid out of the proceeds of the estate duty derived from personal property, such sum as the commissioners, in accordance with the regulations made by the Treasury under this Act, might determine to be an amount equal to 1½ per cent. on the net value of such of the property in respect of which estate duty is leviable, as would, if that Act had not passed, have been chargeable with the duty imposed by s. 27 of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1881, on inland revenue affidavits, and this Act was to apply as if the sums so determined were the probate duty grant or one-half of the proceeds of the sums collected in respect of the probate duties (as the case required) within the meaning of this Act. Subsequent statutes made provisions for further payments into the Local Taxation Account, viz., s. 7 of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1890 (" the local taxation (customs and excise) duties "); s. 2 of the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896 (a further portion of the proceeds of estate duty earmarked for purposes of that Act); and s. 4 of the Licensing Act, 1904 (monopoly value payments on the grant of new licences). On the other hand, a portion of the proceeds of the estate duty which would otherwise have been payable to the Local Taxation Account, was diverted from the account by the Tithe Rent-charge (Rates) Act, 1899, for the purpose of making good the deficiency on certain rates caused by the partial exemptions conferred by that Act; and any deficiency upon the cattle pleuro-pneumonia account must be provided for under s. 18 (2) of the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894. The Finance Act, 1907, 7 Ed. 7, c. 13, s. 17, contains provisions dealing with certain specified grants, viz., (1) the estate duty grants paid under s. 19 of the Finance Act, 1894, supra, and (2) the agricultural rates grant paid under s. 2 of the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896. It provides that the said grants instead of being charged in manner provided by the Acts relating to these grants shall be charged on and paid out of the Consolidated Fund. Section 17 of the Act of 1907 further provides that the proceeds of the local taxation (customs and excise) duties and of the duties on local taxation licences (including any duty charged under the Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896, s. 8, (1)) payable under any Act in force into any local taxation account, shall, instead of being paid into that account be paid into the exchequer, and that there shall be paid into any such local taxation account out of the Consolidated Fund a sum equal to the amount which would have been paid into that account as the produce of the duties if the Act had not passed. (See the Act in extenso in App. I., post, Vol. II.). The Finance Act, 1908, 8 Ed. 7, c. 16, contains provisions relating to the duties on licences to deal in game, licences for dogs, killing game, guns, carriages (including duties charged under the Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896, s. 8 (1), armorial bearings and male servants. The power to levy such duties was transferred to county councils, and from the date of the transfer s. 17 of the Act of 1907, supra, was no longer to apply to them. And it was provided that s. 20, sub-ss. (3) (4) and (5), of the L. G. A., 1888, and any other provisions of that Act relating to the levy of the duties on local taxation licences by county councils should, as respects the licences to which the section applies, have effect as if the power to levy those duties had been transferred under s. 20 (3) of that Act. After the transfer there was to be charged on and paid annually out of the Consolidated Fund to the local taxation account a sum of £40,000, which sum was to be distributed among county councils in proportion to the proceeds of the duties in question collected in each county during the preceding year. (This Act is also set out in extenso in App. I., post, Vol. II.). The Finance Act, 1910, 10 Ed. 7, c. 8, s. 88, provided that for the purpose of the Finance Act, 1907, s. 17 (3) the proceeds of the duties on licences for the sale of intoxicating liquor and on licences for motor cars imposed by that Act, should so far as respects the sums to be paid into any local taxation account out of the Consolidated Fund be deemed to be the amount of the proceeds of the duties on those licences during the year ending March 31st, 1909. It further provided that, notwithstanding the provisos to s. 6 (4) of the Act of 1908, the duties on licences for motor cars should continue to be duties to which that section applies, but that any sum by which the proceeds of those duties levied in any financial year by the council should exceed the amount of the proceeds of those duties certified by the L. G. B. to have been collected in that county or county borough during the year ending March 31st, 1909, should be paid into the Exchequer, and that a council should be entitled to be paid any sum by which the proceeds of those duties levied by them in any year were less than that amount and that the sums so to be paid are to be charged on and paid out of the Consolidated Fund. The Revenue Act, 1911, 1 Geo. 5, c. 2, s. 17, provided that the sum to be paid in respect of the local taxation (custom and excise) duties into the local taxation account under the Finance Act, 1907, s. 17 (2), should in every year until Parliament should otherwise determine, instead of being a sum equal to the amount which would have been paid as the proceeds of those duties if the Act had not passed be a sum equal to the amount of the English share of the proceeds of those duties during the year ending March 31st, 1909. The Roads Act, 1920, 10 & 11 Geo. 5, c. 72, provides by s. 1 that the duties on mechanically propelled vehicles and the excise duties for carriages shall be levied by county councils in accordance with provisions to be made for the purpose by Order in Council (see the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Order, 7th February, 1921). Such duties are to be paid into the Exchequer in accordance with the directions contained in this Order. The Act further provides by s. 2 that there shall be charged on and issued out of the Consolidated Fund a sum equal to the proceeds of the duties and all other sums paid into the Exchequer under the Act, and that out of the sum so to be issued out of the Consolidated Fund, there shall be paid in every year to the local taxation account the sum of £536,954 8*s.*, and that sum is to be applied in paying to county councils sums equal to the amounts certified by the Minister of Health to have been collected by those councils during the year ending March 31st 1909, the balance being paid into the Road Fund. The Act further provides by s. 7 (7) that all sums received by a county council by way of fees for licences granted under the Motor Car Act, 1903, and all penalties recovered in respect of offences under the Motor Car Acts, 1896 and 1903 shall be paid into the Exchequer in such manner and in accordance with such directions as may be contained in any Order in Council made under the Act. See the Order already referred to.

Note to Section 24.

(c) Under this and the subsequent provisions of this section it was held that the county council, in substitution for the Exchequer, were bound to pay out of the county fund local grants in respect of the period between September 24th, 1888 and April 1st, 1889, though they did not come into existence until the latter date (Re West Riding C. C. (1890), 54 J. P. 533).

(2) In substitution for local grants, the council of each county shall from time to time as from the said day pay out of the county fund and charge to the Exchequer Contribution Account (a) the following sums, that is to say—

(c) They shall pay (aa) to every local authority (b), for any area wholly or partly (c) in the county, by whom a medical officer of health or inspector of nuisances (d) is paid, one-half of the salary of such officer, where his qualification, appointment, salary, and tenure of office are in accordance with the regulations made by order under the Public Health Act, 1875, or any Act repealed by that Act, but if the Local Government Board certify to the council that such medical officer has failed to send to the Local Government Board such report and returns as are for the time being required by the regulations respecting the duties of such officer made by order of the Board under any of the said Acts (e), a sum equal to such half of the salary shall be forfeited to the Crown, and the council shall pay the same into her Majesty's Exchequer (f) and not to the said local authority; and

(a) This account is a separate account, which consists of the sums from time to time received by a county council under the statutory provisions referred to in note (b) under sub-s. (1), supra.

(aa) As to the time for payment, cf. Calne Union v. Wilts C. C., [1911] 1 K. B. 717; 75 J. P. 42.

(b) I.e., every urban and rural district council. See s. 100, post, p. 783.

(c) As to areas in two counties, see sub-s. (5), post, p. 757.

Payments in respect

(d) The P. H. A., 1875, s. 189, ante, p. 447, provides that every urban authority shall from time to time appoint fit and proper persons to be medical officer of hea nd inspector of nuisances. The same section also provides that, subject in the case f any officers any portion of whose salary is paid out of moneys voted by Parliament o the powers of the L. G. B. under the Act (s. 191), the urban authority may pay to uch officers such reasonable salaries, wages, or allowances as they may think proper, nd subject as aforesaid, every such officer shall be removable by the urban authority t their pleasure. Section 190 provides that every rural authority shall from time o time appoint fit and proper persons to be medical officer or officers of health nd inspector or inspectors of nuisances. By s. 191, a person shall not be appointed nedical officer of health unless he is a legally qualified medical practitioner. (This provision, however, is now considerably modified by s. 18, ante, p. 752, which requires n most cases a more extended qualification.) Section 191 further provides that the L. G. B. shall have the same powers as it has in the case of a district medical officer f a union with regard to the qualification, appointment, duties, salary, and tenure of office of a medical officer of health or other officer of a local authority any portion f whose salary is paid out of moneys voted by Parliament, and may by order prescribe the qualification and duties of other medical officers of health appointed under the Act. See further as to the appointment and tenure of office of medical officers of health, sanitary inspectors, and inspectors of nuisances, the Public Health (Officers) Act, 1921, 11 & 12 Geo. 5, c. 23, post. Section 6 of that Act provides that s. 24 of the L. G. A., 1888, shall have effect as if the reference in sub-s. (2) thereof included a reference to that Act. Orders have been made by the Board prescribing the qualification, appointment, duties, etc., of medical officers of health and inspectors of nuisances. They will be found in App. II., post, Vol. II.

of medical officers and inspectors of nuisances.

(e) The medical officer must send to the county council a copy of every periodical report of which he is required to send a copy to the Ministry of Health, and if he fails to do so the council may withhold their contribution under the above section (s. 19, ante, p. 753).

(f) Section 27 (1) provides that where a county council are required to pay any sum into the Exchequer, such sum is to be deducted from the amount payable under the provisions of the Act out of the local taxation account to such council, and is to be paid into the Exchequer.

(3) A reference in sections one hundred and eighty-nine and one hundred and ninety-one of the Public Health Act, 1875, to officers any portion of whose salary is paid out of moneys provided by Parliament shall be construed to refer to those officers in respect of whose salaries payment is made by a county council in pursuance of this section.

The effect of these sections has already been stated. The meaning of this provision is that in the case of all medical officers of health and inspectors of nuisances, half of whose salaries are paid by the county council under sub-s. (2) (c), the Ministry of Health will have power by order to prescribe the qualification (subject to the provisions of s. 18 of this Act), appointment, duties, salary, and tenure of office of such officers.

(5) Where a sum is payable under this section to the guardians, authority, or officer of a union or other area, and such union or area is situate in more administrative counties than one (a), a proportionate part only of the sum otherwise payable shall be paid by the council of each of such counties to the guardians, authority, or officer, and the Local Government Board shall certify the proportionate part due from the council of each such county.

(a) An urban district cannot now be situate in more than one county, by reason of s. 50 (1) (b), post, p. 767. As the result of the L. G. A., 1894, ss. 24 (5), 36, there are now only a few rural districts not wholly comprised in one administrative county.

Section 24.

(6) The guardians, authority, or officer to whom a sum is payable under this section on the certificate of the Local Government Board shall submit to the Board their claim to the payment in such manner and produce such evidence and comply with such rules as the Board from time to time require or make, and the Board shall fix the amount due on the like principles, and may impose the like conditions for the payment thereof as before the passing of this Act.

(7) The Local Government Board may, if they think fit, vary a certificate granted for the purposes of this section, but, unless so varied it shall be conclusive.

Grant by county council towards costs of officers of union.

26.—(1) After the thirty-first day of March next after the passing of this Act, every county council (a), other than the London County Council, shall grant to the guardians of every poor law union wholly or partly in their county, an annual sum for the costs of the officers of the union (b) and of district schools to which the union contributes; and until Parliament otherwise determine, the said annual sum shall be such sum as the Local Government Board certify to have been expended by the guardians of each poor law union during the financial year ending the twenty-fifth day of March next before the passing of this Act, on the salaries, remuneration, and superannuation allowances of the said officers (other than teachers in poor law schools), and on drugs and medical appliances.

(b) In a Circular Letter of January 10th, 1889, issued by the L. G. B. to boards of guardians, the following opinion as to the meaning of this expression was given:

"The Act contains no definition of the expression 'officers of the union'; but the words clearly do not include parochial officers or officers appointed for areas such as rural sanitary districts in which the jurisdiction of the guardians is not in all cases co-extensive with the union. In the opinion of the Board, the following officers cannot be regarded as officers of the union for the purposes of the grant and care should be taken to exclude any expenditure of the guardians in respect of them:

Collectors of poor rates.
Assistant overseers.
Officers of rural sanitary authorities.
Officers of school attendance committees
Superintendent registrars, and Registrars of births, deaths, and marriages.

"On reference to s. 100 of the Act, it will be seen that the expression 'office' is to be construed according to the definition of 'office,' which is to include a 'place, situation, or employment.' (And see note (d) to that definition, post, p. 78

"In some instances officers, in respect of whose services in certain capacities a claim can properly be made against the grant, will have acted also in other capacities and their salaries, remuneration, or superannuation allowances in the latter capacity will properly be chargeable on the grant. In these cases care should be taken to include only so much of the expenditure of the guardians as has been incurred on account of the services of these officers in the latter capacities.

"The Board consider that the cost of the rations of officers may be included. The expenditure of the guardians for this purpose should be taken from the 'Rations Account' in the Union Ledger, with the necessary deduction in respect of teachers and assistant teachers."

(2) Where a poor law union is situate in more counties than one, the payment under this section to the guardians of the union shall be borne by the counties in which each portion of such union is situate, in proportion to the rateable value of that portion, ascertained on such day as the Local Government Board may fix. Section 26.

The day fixed is April 1st, see Order of Dec. 8th, 1911.

General Provisions as to Transfer.

28.—(1) The county council shall, as respects the business by this Act transferred to them from quarter sessions or the justices out of sessions, be subject to the provisions and limitations in this Act specified, but, save as aforesaid, shall have and be subject to all the powers, duties, and liabilities, which the quarter sessions, or any committee thereof, or any justice or justices had or were subject to in respect of the business so transferred. General provisions as to powers transferred to county council.

(2) The county council shall, with the exceptions hereinafter mentioned, have power to delegate, with or without any restrictions or conditions as they may think fit, any powers or duties transferred to them by or in pursuance of this Act (a), either to any committee of the county council appointed in pursuance of this Act, or to any district council in this Act mentioned (b); the county council may also, without prejudice to any other power whether to appoint committees or otherwise, delegate to the justices of the county sitting in petty sessions any power or duty transferred by this Act to the county council in respect of the licensing of houses or places for the public performance of stage plays (c), and in respect of the execution as local authority of the Explosives Act, 1875, or of the Act relating to contagious diseases of animals.

(a) The powers and duties transferred by this Act to county councils are those which constituted the administrative business of quarter sessions enumerated in s. 3, and those of justices out of session mentioned in s. 7, i.e., the licensing of theatres, and the execution of the Explosives Act, 1875.

(b) A district council is defined by s. 100, post, p. 785. It means an urban or rural district council. The effect of this provision is practically to enable a county council to delegate any of its powers, except the making of rates, to a district council.

(c) Similarly they may delegate to justices their licensing powers under the Cinematograph Act, 1909. Petty sessions when exercising such delegated licensing powers cannot state a special case (Huish v. Liverpool J J., [1914] 1 K. B. 109; 78 J. P. 45).

(3) Provided that the county council shall not under this section delegate any power of raising money by rate or loan.

29. If any question arises, or is about to arise, as to whether any business, power, duty, or liability is or is not transferred to any county council or joint committee under this Act, that question, without prejudice to any other mode of trying it, may, on the application of a chairman of quarter sessions, or of the county council, committee, or other local authority concerned, be submitted for decision to the High Summary proceeding for determination of questions as to transfer of powers.

Section 29. Court of Justice in such summary manner as subject to any rules of court may be directed by the court; and the court, after hearing such parties and taking such evidence (if any) as it thinks just, shall decide the question.

This is a useful provision, and has been put in operation in a number of cases where questions have arisen as to the respective liabilities of sanitary authorities and county councils. The practice formerly was to prepare a special case signed by the chairmen of the disputing bodies, and then to apply for leave to set down the case in the Crown Paper: see Ex parte Staffordshire Quarter Sessions, W. N. (1889), p. 183. Now, however, by a rule of the High Court dated August 10th, 1892, the procedure is to be by special case to be agreed on by the parties, or in default of such agreement to be settled by an arbitrator agreed upon by the parties or (if necessary) appointed by a judge at chambers, or to be settled by a judge at chambers. The special case when settled is to be filed at the Crown Office Department at the central office of the Supreme Court, by the chairman of quarter sessions, the county council, or the local authority concerned, within eight days from the settlement thereof, and is to be put into the Crown Paper for argument as if it were a case stated by justices under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43. Without attempting to give an exhaustive list of the reported cases decided under this section, the following may be mentioned: Ex parte Somerset C. C. (1889), 58 L. J. Q. B. 513; 54 J. P. 182; Ex parte Staffordshire Quarter Sessions (1889), 54 J. P. 72; 6 T. L. R. 45; Re West Riding C. C. (1890), 54 J. P. 533; 6 T. L. R. 265; Warminster L. B. v. Wilts C. C. (1890), 25 Q. B. PART II.

APPLICATION OF ACT TO BOROUGHS, THE METROPOLIS, AND CERTAIN SPECIAL COUNTIES.

Application of Act to Boroughs.

Certain large boroughs named in the Schedule to be county boroughs.

31. Each of the boroughs named in the Third Schedule to this Act being a borough which on the first day of June one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight, either had a population of not less than fifty thousand, or was a county of itself shall, from and after the appointed day, be for the purposes of this Act an administrative county of itself, and is in this Act referred to as a county borough.

Provided that for all other purposes a county borough shall continue to be part of the county (if any) in which it is situate at the passing of this Act, and if a separate commission of assize, oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery is not directed to be executed within the borough, the borough shall, for the purposes of any such commission, and of the service of jurors, and the making of jury lists, be part of the county in which it is specified in the said Schedule to be deemed for the purposes of this Act to be situate. Section 31.

The provisions of this Part of this Act as to its application to county boroughs and other boroughs are, for the most part, beyond the scope of the present Work. Accordingly, only those sections or parts of sections have been included here which affect the council of a borough regarded as an urban sanitary authority. In addition to the boroughs named in the Third Schedule, several new county boroughs have been created under s. 54 (1) (d) post, p. 769. See notes thereto.

The council of a county borough have all or nearly all the powers of a county council, but this only affects their position as an urban authority to the extent hereinafter noticed.

34.—(2) On the appointed day there shall be transferred to the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of each county borough all such bridges and approaches thereto, or parts thereof, situate within the borough as were previously repairable by the county or any hundred therein, and the costs of the council in repairing such bridges and approaches, or parts thereof, and in repairing any roads in the borough which by virtue of this Act or any Act applied by this Act are main roads, shall be payable out of the borough fund. Application of Act with modifications to county boroughs.

It is not clear whether the council of a county borough, who have the powers of a county council for most purposes, possess the power of declaring roads to be main roads under the Highway Act of 1878. It is the general opinion that they do not, and the editors have not, in practice, come across any road which has been "mained" in purported exercise of such a power. If the power exists, any roads so declared to be main roads, and roads which prior to the passing of this Act were already main roads, whether under s. 13 or s. 15 of the Highway Act, 1878, must be repaired at the expense of the borough fund, though the other highways in the borough may be repairable out of the general district rate under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 210, ante, p. 473, by the council in their capacity of urban authority.

It should be observed that some bridges in the borough may already have been repairable by the council under s. 119 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882: see R. v. Dorset (Inhabitants of) (1881), 45 L. T. 308; R. v. Southampton (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 424; 50 J. P. 773; R. v. Southampton (No. 2) (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 590.

(7) The powers and duties of the county authority under the Allotments Act, 1887, shall, as respects the borough, continue to be exercised and performed by the Local Government Board.

The Allotments Act, 1887, s. 16, provided that for the purposes of that Act the "county authority" should be any representative body elected by the inhabitants of the county which might be established under any future Act, and that until such representative body should be established, the powers and duties of the county authority should be exercised and performed by the L. G. B. County councils, therefore, became the county authorities under the Act, but this did not apply to county boroughs. By s. 20 (1) of the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1907, the powers of the L. G. B. under the Allotments Acts, except such of those powers as related to the finance of local authorities, were transferred to the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, now the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries (see 9 & 10 Geo.

Note to Section 34.

5, c. 91). These Acts were repealed by the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1908, which consolidated and amended the earlier Acts on the subject of allotments. See the Act in App. I., post, Vol. II. And see also the Land Settlement (Facilities) Act, 1919, also set out in the Appendix.

Application of Act to larger quarter sessions boroughs not county boroughs.

35. In the case of a quarter sessions borough, not being one of the boroughs named in the Third Schedule to this Act, but containing, according to the census of one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, a population of ten thousand or upwards, the following provisions shall, on and after the appointed day, apply:

(1) Nothing in this Act shall transfer to the county council any power of the council of the borough as local authority under any Act, or (save as in this Act expressly mentioned) alter the powers, duties, and liabilities of the council of the borough under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, but subject to the above provisions and to the savings hereinafter contained, the borough shall form part of the county for the purposes of this Act, and the parishes in the borough shall, subject to the exemptions hereinafter mentioned, be liable to be assessed to county contributions in like manner as the rest of the county.

In many cases, where the local authorities for the execution of Acts were in counties the quarter sessions, in boroughs the local authorities under the same Acts were the borough councils. In these cases, while the administrative powers of the quarter sessions are transferred to the county councils by this Act, the councils of the larger boroughs to which this section relates, under the provisions in the text, retain their powers as local authorities.

(3) Notwithstanding the last enactment (a) the borough shall, for the purposes of the provisions of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, respecting main roads (b), form part of the county, and the costs of maintaining, repairing, improving, enlarging, or otherwise dealing with any main road in the borough shall be paid out of the county fund, and the payment of the costs incurred in the execution of the provisions of this Act with respect to main roads shall be a general county purpose for which the parishes of the borough may be assessed to county contributions.

(a) This has reference to sub-s. (2), which provides that the borough shall not be liable to be assessed to county contributions for purposes to which it was not liable to be so assessed at the time of the passing of the Act. The exemption extends to the costs of new county bridges taken over by a county council under s. 6 (Bury St. Edmunds (Mayor, etc. of) v. West Suffolk C. C., [1898] 2 Q. B. 346; 62 J. P. 486).

(b) These provisions are set out in App. I., post, Vol. II. Formerly a quarter sessions borough was not a highway area, not being included in the definition of an "urban authority" in the Highway Act, 1878. Consequently, the provisions of that Act as to main roads did not apply to a quarter sessions borough. This is no longer the case. Main roads in such a borough vest in and are under the control of the county council under s. 11 (1), (6), unless the borough council have claimed the right to retain them under sub-s. (2) of that section. And the other provisions of that section apply as well within such a borough as in any other highway area.

(4) Provided that—

(a) The borough shall be deemed to be an urban sanitary district, within the meaning of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (a); and the council of the borough shall have the power under the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, of making byelaws respecting locomotives, and authorising locomotives to be used on any road within the borough (b); save that if any difference is made by such byelaws or authority between any main road maintained by the county council and the other roads in the borough, such authority and byelaws shall require the approval of the county council; and (a) See the notes to the preceding sub-section.

(b) The Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, s. 28, post, Vol. II., provides that the council of every borough having a separate court of quarter sessions may, on the application of the owner of any locomotive exceeding nine feet in width or fourteen tons in weight, authorise such locomotive to be used in any highway within the borough, or part of any such highway under such conditions (if any) as to them may appear desirable. By s. 31, it was formerly provided that a council of a quarter sessions borough might make byelaws as to the hours during which locomotives are not to pass over the turnpike roads or highways within the borough, the hours being in all cases consecutive hours, and no more than eight out of the twenty-four, and for regulating the use of locomotives upon any highway, or preventing such use upon every bridge when they are satisfied that such use would be attended with danger to the public. Section 35 required these byelaws to be confirmed by the Local Government Board. But s. 31 is now repealed by s. 18 of the Locomotives Act, 1898, post, Vol. II., subject, however, to certain savings for existing byelaws. And by ss. 5, 6, 9, and 17 of that Act, other provision is made for the regulating of locomotives on highways, for the restriction of locomotive traffic by byelaws, and for licensing locomotives.

Light locomotives were exempted from the provisions of the Act of 1878 by the Light Locomotives Act, 1896, and other provisions made by that Act for regulating the use of them on highways. See now also the Motor Car Acts, 1896 and 1903, and the Roads Act, 1920.

(b) The council of the borough shall have power as an urban authority to claim, in accordance with this Act, to retain the powers and duties of maintaining and repairing any main roads in the borough; and

This provision had reference to the claim which an urban authority might make under s. 11 (2), ante, p. 740. Its operation is now spent.

(c) The council of the borough may within two years after the passing of this Act apply to the county council to declare such roads in the borough as are mentioned in the application to be main roads within the meaning of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, and the county council shall consider such application and inquire whether such roads are or ought to be main roads within the meaning of the said Act, and shall make or refuse the declaration accordingly, and if the county council refuse to make the declaration, the council of the borough may within a reasonable time after such refusal apply to the Local Government Board, and that Board shall have power, if after a local inquiry they think it just so to do, to make the said declaration, which shall have the same effect as if made by the county council.

Immediately after this Act came into operation all roads which had been disturnpiked since December 31st, 1870, became main roads. No declaration was necessary in the case of such roads. By the text the council of the borough had until August 13th, 1890, power to apply to the county council to declare certain other roads to be main roads, i.e., such roads as might be declared main roads under the Highway Act, 1878, s. 15, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

Application of Act to smaller quarter sessions boroughs with population under 10,000.

38. Where a borough having a separate court of quarter sessions contained according to the census of one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one a population of less than ten thousand, the following provisions shall after the appointed day apply :

. . . . . .

(2) There shall be transferred to the county council the powers, duties, and liabilities of the council of the borough—

(a) As regards coroners ; and

(b) As regards the appointment of analysts under the Acts relating to the sale of foods and drugs (a) ; and

(c) Under the Acts relating to—

(i) Reformatory and industrial schools ; and

(ii) Fish conservancy ; and

(iii) Explosives ; and

(d) Under the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (b) :

Provided that the transfer by this section—

(a) Shall be subject to the provisions in this Act for the protection of existing officers and the continuance of existing contracts (c) ; and

(b) Shall not, save as respects the coroners, affect the powers, duties, and liabilities of the council of the borough under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 :

(a) By the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, s. 10, post, Vol. II., analysts were to be appointed by the town council of every borough having a separate court of quarter sessions. Such appointments are still made by the town councils of the larger quarter sessions boroughs, but they are no longer made by the town councils of the boroughs to which this section applies. As to enforcing appointments, see the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1899, s. 3, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

(b) These powers include those of authorising or licensing locomotives under ss. 28 and 31 of the Act of 1878 : see post, Vol. II.

(c) The provisions of this Act as to existing officers and the continuance of existing contracts are contained in ss. 118—120, 122, 125. The only officers affected by them whom it is here necessary to refer to are analysts of the boroughs, who by s. 119 became officers of the county council and continued to hold office by the same tenure, on the same terms and conditions and with the like remuneration as formerly. If their office is abolished they are entitled to compensation under s. 120 ; so also, if their fees or salary are diminished.

(3) The borough shall be an urban sanitary district within the meaning of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 :

(4) The council of the borough may within two years after the passing of this Act, apply to the county council to declare such roads in the borough as are mentioned in the application to be main roads within the meaning of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, and the county council shall consider such application, and inquire whether such roads are, or ought to be, main roads within the meaning of the said Act, and shall make or refuse the declaration accordingly, and if the county council refuse the declaration, the council of the borough may, within a reasonable time after such refusal, apply to the Local Government Board, and that Board, after a local inquiry, shall have power, if they think it just so to do, to make the said declaration, which shall have the same effect as if it had been made by the county council:

The foregoing sub-sections correspond to s. 35 (3) and (4). See those sub-sections and notes thereto.

(5) The area of the borough shall for the purposes of the above-mentioned Acts and all other administrative purposes of the county council be included in the county, as if the borough had not a separate court of quarter sessions, and accordingly shall be subject to the authority of the county council and the county coroners, and may be annexed by the county council to a coroner's district of the county, and the parishes in the borough shall be liable to be assessed to all county contributions:

This provision does not in any way affect the powers and duties of the borough council in their capacity of urban sanitary authority.

(7) It shall be lawful for her Majesty the Queen, on petition from the council of any borough to which this or the next succeeding section applies, by Order in Council, to revoke the grant of a court of quarter sessions to the borough, and by letters patent to revoke the grant of a commission of the peace for the borough, and to make such provision as to her Majesty seems proper for the protection of interests existing at the date of the revocation, and after the date of the revocation all enactments and laws relating to courts of quarter sessions and justices and their jurisdiction shall apply, as if such court of quarter sessions or commission of the peace, as the case may be, did not exist:

In the event of the revocation of a grant of quarter sessions, any appeal which would otherwise lie to the borough sessions, e.g., under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 269, ante, p. 599, would thereafter lie to the quarter sessions of the county. Another result would be that the county justices would acquire concurrent jurisdiction with the borough justices in the borough in those cases in which such jurisdiction had hitherto been excluded. See the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 154.

Concurrent jurisdiction of county and borough justices.

It is generally considered that county justices have concurrent jurisdiction out of quarter sessions with the borough justices—(a) in all boroughs having separate commissions of the peace but not separate courts of quarter sessions [except the boroughs of Coventry, Ramsgate, and Stratford-upon-Avon, where their jurisdiction is excluded by special statutes]; and (b) in all quarter sessions boroughs from which their jurisdiction is not excluded by the provisions of ancient charters. See a Paper issued from the Home Office in 1904, entitled "Courts of Summary Jurisdiction in England and Wales"; but see as to grants of quarter sessions since 1835, R. v. Warwickshire JJ., [1902] 2 K. B. 101. If the commission of the peace is revoked, the county justices alone will have jurisdiction within the borough. In neither case, however, will the council as urban authority be affected.

(8) A borough which is a county of a city or a county of a town shall, for the purposes of this and the next succeeding section, and if her Majesty revokes the grant of a court of quarter sessions or a commission of the peace to such borough, then also for all purposes of quarter sessions and justices, be deemed to be situate in and form part of the county of which it forms part for the purpose of parliamentary elections:

(9) Where this section applies to a cinque port it shall apply also to all the members thereof, and those members when not situate in a quarter sessions borough shall form part of the county for all purposes.

Application of Act to all boroughs with population under 10,000.

39.—(1) Where a borough, whether with or without a separate court of quarter sessions, contained according to the census of one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one a population of less than ten thousand, then after the appointed day all powers, duties, and liabilities of the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses, or council of the borough, or the watch committee of the borough in relation—

(a) To the police force of the borough, or

(b) To the appointment of analysts under the Acts relating to the sale of foods and drugs (a), or

(c) To the execution of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Acts, 1878 to 1886 (b), or the Destructive Insects Act, 1877 (c), or

(d) To gas meters, or

(e) To weights and measures, if the council exercise any jurisdiction in relation thereto, shall cease, and, subject to the provisions of this Act as to the members of the police force holding office on the said day, the area of the borough shall for all purposes of the Acts relating to the county police force, or other matters above in this section mentioned, form part of the county in like manner as if it were not a borough:

(a) As stated in the notes to the preceding section analysts were appointed by the town councils of boroughs having a separate court of quarter sessions. They were also appointed by the town council of every borough which had under any general or local Act of Parliament or otherwise a separate police establishment (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63, s. 10, in App. I., post, Vol. II.). No such appointments will in future be made by the councils of any such boroughs if they are within the provision in the text.

(b) Italicised words repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1908, because these Acts were repealed and consolidated by the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894; the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, has itself been in turn amended by the Diseases of Animals Acts, 1896, 1903, 1909, 1910, and the Poultry Act, 1911.

(c) This Act has been extended to all pests destructive to crops, trees or bushes: see the Destructive Insects and Pests Act, 1907.

(2) Provided that nothing in this section shall transfer to the county council any powers, duties, or liabilities under section thirty-four of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878, as amended by section nine of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1886.

This proviso had reference to 49 & 50 Vict. c. 32, s. 9, which transferred to urban and rural sanitary authorities the powers of local authorities under 41 & 42 Vict. c. 74, s. 34, with reference to dairies, cowsheds, and milkshops. These sections have themselves been repealed by the Milk and Dairies Act, 1914, 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 49, and the Milk and Dairies Act, 1915, 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 66 (see note on p. 734, ante). Note to Section 39.

PART III.

Boundaries.

50.—(1) The first council elected under this Act for any administrative county (a) shall, subject as hereinafter mentioned, be elected for the county at large as bounded at the passing of this Act for the purpose of the election of members to serve in Parliament for the county : Provided always that— Boundary of county for first election.

(b) Where any urban sanitary district is situate partly within and partly without the boundary of such county, the district shall be deemed to be within that county which contains the largest portion of the population of the district, according to the census of one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one (b).

(a) An administrative county is simply an area for which a county council are elected, but the term does not include a county borough.

(b) The importance of this provision is not at first sight obvious; but when read with the next sub-section and s. 59 (1), post, p. 773, its effect is to transfer for all purposes to one county, an urban district which previously was situate in two counties : see Re Staffordshire and Derbyshire County Councils (1890), 54 J. P. 566.

(2) The county council elected under this Act shall have for the purposes of this Act authority throughout the administrative county for which it is elected, and the administrative county as bounded for the purpose of the election shall, subject to alterations made in manner hereinafter mentioned, be for all the purposes of this Act the county of such county council.

See the note to the preceding sub-section.

(3) If any difference arises as to the county which contains the largest portion of the population of any such district as above in this section mentioned, such difference shall be referred to the Local Government Board, whose decision shall be final.

(4) This section applies to an administrative county within the meaning of this Act, save that it shall not apply to the administrative county of London, nor to any county borough, and any place which, though forming part of any such borough for the purposes of the election of members to serve in Parliament, is not within the municipal boundary of such borough shall, notwithstanding anything in the foregoing provisions of this section, form, for the purposes of this section, part of the county in which such place is situate.

* * * * * *

Provisional Order as respects boroughs and urban sanitary districts in same area.

52.—(1) The Local Government Board shall make Provisional Orders for dealing with every case where the council of a borough is not the urban sanitary authority for the whole of the area of such borough, and the area of the borough is either co-extensive with or is wholly or partly comprised in any urban sanitary district, and such Order shall determine whether the area of the borough or of the sanitary district, or an area comprising both the borough and the urban sanitary district, or a portion of such united area, shall, whether with or without any adjoining area, be the area of the county district for the purposes of this Act, so, however, that in either case the Order shall provide for the council of the borough becoming the district council, and the Order may for that purpose alter the boundaries of the borough, and may, if need be, alter the boundaries of the county; and if the population exceeds fifty thousand, the Order may constitute the borough into a county borough, and make such provisions as may be necessary for carrying this Act into effect as respects such county borough; and the provisions of this Act respecting county boroughs shall, subject to the provisions of the Order, apply.

The foregoing provision applied only to fourteen exceptional cases: Banbury, Blandford Forum, Calne, Cambridge, Chippenham, Faversham, Folkestone, Launceston, Lyme Regis, Lymington, Morpeth, Oxford, St. Ives (Hunts.), and Wenlock. Provisional Orders have been issued dealing with all these districts.

Acts confirming Provisional Orders under this section have been passed as follows:—Banbury, 52 & 53 Vict. c. cxvi.; Blandford Forum, 52 & 53 Vict. c. cxii.; Calne, 52 & 53 Vict. c. xlvi.; Cambridge, 52 & 53 Vict. c. cxvi. See also 57 & 58 Vict. c. lx.; Chippenham, 52 & 53 Vict. c. xlvi.; Faversham, 52 & 53 Vict. c. clxxii.; Launceston, 52 & 53 Vict. c. clxxii.; Lyme Regis, 52 & 53 Vict. c. cxii.; Lymington, 52 & 53 Vict. c. cxii.; Morpeth, 52 & 53 Vict. c. cxii.; Oxford, 52 & 53 Vict. c. xv.; also creating it a county borough under s. 54 (d), post, p. 769. And see 53 & 54 Vict. c. ccxxiii., and 59 & 60 Vict. c. cv.; St. Ives (Hunts), 52 & 53 Vict. c. clxxii.; Wenlock, 52 & 53 Vict. c. xxii.

The municipal borough of Folkestone is still partly within the urban district of Sandgate. The corporation are the sanitary authority for the other parts of the borough, being "the authority for executing the Folkestone Improvement Act, 1855." See also 56 & 57 Vict. c. lxxx.

(2) Where certain members of the sanitary authority for any such urban sanitary district are appointed by a university or any colleges therein, the Order may provide for the appointment by such university or colleges of members on the district council.

See Borough of Cambridge Order, 1889, Arts. V. and VI., and City of Oxford Order, 1889, Arts. VIII., XI., and XII.

(3) A Provisional Order under this section shall not be of any effect until it is confirmed by Parliament.

* * * * * *

Future alterations of boundaries.

54.—(1) Whenever it is represented by the council of any county or borough to the Local Government Board—

(a) that the alteration of the boundary of any county or borough (a) is desirable; or

(b) that the union, for all or any of the purposes of this Act, of a county borough with a county is desirable; or

(c) that the union, for all or any of the purposes of this Act, of any counties or boroughs or the division of any county is desirable ; or Section 54.

(d) that it is desirable to constitute any borough having a population of not less than fifty thousand into a county borough (b) ; or

(e) that the alteration of the boundary of any electoral division (c) of a county, or of the number of county councillors and electoral divisions in a county, is desirable ; or

(f) that the alteration of any area of local government (d) partly situate in their county or borough is desirable, the Local Government Board shall, unless for special reasons they think that the representation ought not to be entertained, cause to be made a local inquiry (e), and may make an Order (f) for the proposal contained in such representation, or for such other proposal as they may deem expedient, or may refuse such Order, and if they make the Order may by such Order divide or alter any electoral division.

(a) The Ministry of Health issue printed instructions annually as to representations in favour of the alteration of borough boundaries under this section. They must be carefully studied in connection with any proposal of this character, as the particulars required by the department are very numerous and involve much time in preparation. The representation must be made not later than the prescribed date, if it is hoped to obtain confirmation of the Provisional Order during the ensuing session. For a copy of the latest instructions, see App. II., post, Vol. II. See the Local Government (Adjustments) Act, 1913, post, p. 1082, and s. 62, p. 775, post, as to financial adjustments upon alteration of areas.

The M. corporation agreed to extend the city boundary so as to include the urban district of L. on certain definite terms. They duly promoted a Bill which contained, besides many other matters, a provision for the inclusion of the urban district upon the agreed terms. When the Bill was before the House of Lords, the committee inserted a provision for the payment of compensation by the corporation to the county council for loss of rateable value caused by the extension of the city. The provision did not affect the terms of the agreement as between the corporation and the district council. The corporation, however, decided to drop the clauses dealing with extension of boundaries, and the district council thereupon moved for an injunction to prevent them doing so. It was held, that, as one of the Houses of Parliament was insisting on terms which materially affected a matter which must have been in the contemplation of the parties, either party had a right to retire (Levenshulme U. D. C. v. Manchester Corporation (1908), 72 J. P. 470).

A bill was promoted in Parliament for the enlargement of a Royal borough by the inclusion of certain adjoining police boroughs. An item in the expenses charged to the common good was referred to as fees for professional expenses. It was alleged that the item included payments in respect of the election expenses of annexationist candidates for membership in the municipal councils of the borough sought to be annexed. It was held that such payments were against public policy as tending to interfere in the interests of the annexing borough with the municipal elections in the adjoining boroughs (Kemp v. Glasgow Corporation, [1920] A. C. 836 ; 84 J. P. 225).

(b) This presumably refers to a population as ascertained by some recent census. A seasonal population of over 50,000, such as that of a summer resort, would not satisfy the requirement. Population, however, is not fair as a test, for the effect on county government and other matters have to be considered by the department.

(c) The power to alter electoral divisions has been transferred to the Home Office by order in council dated May 27th, 1921. Section 2 of the Representation of the People Act, 1922 (12 & 13 Geo. 5, c. 12), post, p. 1122, amends this sub-section by empowering the Secretary of State to make an order without holding an inquiry unless petitions have been presented against the representation by any local authority in or for the county or any number of local government electors registered for any electoral division in the county not being less than one hundred or than one-sixth of the electors, whichever number is the smaller.

(d) An area of local government would include an urban or rural sanitary district. An urban district cannot now be situated in two counties (see ss. 50, 59), and as to rural districts, see the L. G. A., 1894, s. 36. As to the power still possessed, but not acted upon, by the L. G. B. (now M. of H.) to alter sanitary areas by Provisional Order under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 270, see ante, p. 608.

(e) Local inquiries are held as under the P. H. A., 1875 (s. 87, post, p. 782).

(f) This Order will be provisional in the cases mentioned in sub-s. (3); in other cases it will take effect upon the date fixed thereby without confirmation by Parliament. The Order will be conclusive: see s. 87, post, p. 782.

By Provisional Orders under this section or by local Acts, the Isle of Wight has been separated from Hampshire (52 & 53 Vict. c. clxxvii.) and the following new county boroughs have been created, viz., Oxford (52 & 53 Vict. c. xv); Grimsby (53 & 54 Vict. c. cciv); Newport (Mon.) (54 & 55 Vict. c. ccx); Bournemouth (62 & 63 Vict. c. cxlix); Burton-on-Trent (63 & 64 Vict. c. clxxviii); Warrington (63 & 64 Vict. c. clxxviii); Rotherham (2 Edw. 7, c. ccx); West Hartlepool (2 Edw. 7, c. ccx); Blackpool (4 Edw. 7, c. clxii); Tynemouth (4 Edw. 7, c. clxii); Southport (5 Edw. 7, c. cvii); Smethwick (6 Edw. 7, c. cv); Merthyr Tydfil (7 Edw. 7, c. clviii); Stoke-upon-Trent (comprising the former county borough of Hanley and other areas) (8 Edw. 7, c. clxiv); Barnsley (2 & 3 Geo. 5, c. cxxxviii); Carlisle (3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. cxxxiv); Dewsbury (2 & 3 Geo. 5, c. cxxxix); Eastbourne (10 Edw. 7 & 1 Geo. 5, c. cxxiii); Wallasey (2 & 3 Geo. 5, c. cxxxvii); Southend-on-Sea (3 & 4 Geo. 5, c. cv); East Ham (4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. iii).

(2) Provided that in default of such representation by the council of any county or borough before the first day of November, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, the Local Government Board may cause such local inquiry to be made, and thereupon may make such Order as they may deem expedient.

(3) Provided that if the Order alters the boundary of a county or borough, or provides for the union of a county borough with a county, or for the union of any counties or boroughs, or for the division of any county, or for constituting a borough into a county borough, it shall be provisional only, and shall not have effect unless confirmed by Parliament.

As to the making of Provisional Orders, see s. 87, post, p. 782.

(4) Where such Order alters the boundary of a borough, it may, as consequential upon such alteration, do all or any of the following things, increase or decrease the number of the wards in the borough, and alter the boundaries of such wards, and alter the apportionment of the number of councillors among the wards, and alter the total number of councillors, and in such case, make the proportionate alteration in the number of aldermen.

Future alterations of county districts and parishes and wards, and future establishment of urban districts.

57.—(1) Whenever a county council is satisfied that a primâ facie case is made out as respects any county district (a) not a borough, or as respects any parish, for a proposal for all or any of the following things that is to say—

(a) The alteration or definition of the boundary thereof;

(b) The division thereof or the union thereof (b) with any other such district or districts, parish or parishes, or the transfer of part of a parish to another parish (c);

(c) The conversion of any such district or part thereof, if it is a rural district, into an urban district (d), and if it is an urban district into a rural district, or the transfer of the whole or any part of any such district from one district to another, and the formation of new urban or rural districts;

Section 57.

(d) The division of an urban district into wards (e); and the county council may cause such inquiry (f) to be made in the locality, and such notice to be given, both in the locality, and to the Local Government Board, Education Department (g), or other Government Department as may be prescribed (h), and such other inquiry and notices (if any) as they think fit, and if satisfied that such proposal is desirable, may make an Order (i) for the same accordingly.

Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 270, the L. G. B. (now M. of H.) have power to form, dissolve, and alter urban districts, but that power is not now exercised in view of these later provisions: see p. 608, ante.

Forms for use under s. 57, supra, will be found in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. VIII., at pp. 147 et seq.

(a) The term "county district" means an urban or a rural sanitary district (s. 100, post, p. 785). As to areas in two counties, see the L. G. A., 1894, s. 36 (11), post, p. 950. See Kemp v. Glasgow Corporation, ante, p. 769.

(b) The union here referred to is a permanent union for all purposes, not one for special purposes such as may be made under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 279.

(c) Although this section gives no express power to a county council or to the M. of H., to alter the area of the poor law unions, yet an Order made under the section by a county council, and confirmed by the Board, adding a part of the parish situated in one union to another parish situated to another union, has the automatic effect of transferring such added area from the one union to the other, even though the areas of the union and rural district will not in such a case be coterminous (Bootle Union v. Whitehaven Union, [1903] 2 Ch. 142; 67 J. P. 325).

(d) The provisions of the L. G. A., 1894, s. 54, with reference to Orders made under the above section, must be carefully noted. The Ministry of Health do not favour the constitution of urban district councils for places which do not contain a considerable population and are not essentially urban in character. See the remarks in their annual report of 1904—1905 in regard to two Orders made by county councils for the conversion into urban districts of parishes having a population of 1,604 and 3,161 respectively. "Our experience of urban districts of a somewhat similar character makes us doubtful of the expediency of placing such small places under urban district councils. The sub-division of administrative districts often leads to increased expenditure, and in the case of areas having a small population and low assessable value, this increase of expenditure is not generally accompanied by a corresponding increase of administrative efficiency."

(e) Orders as to wards and members must now be sent to the Home Office under an Order of the M. of H., dated the 26th September, 1921 (S. R. and O., 1921, No. 1511).

(f) As to the expenses of such an inquiry see the L. G. A., 1894, s. 72 (4), post, p. 984.

(g) Now the Board of Education (see the Board of Education Act, 1899).

(i) As to this Order, see infra. It is important that the Order made should correspond with the proposal mentioned in the notice. For example, it is not competent to a county council after the issuing of a notice and the holding of an inquiry as to a proposal to convert part of a parish into an urban district, to make an Order forming the whole parish into an urban district. When some latitude is desired as to the character of the Order to be made, the notice may be framed so as to leave some discretion to the county council. The effect of an Order creating a new district is the same as if the district had been created under the P. H. A., 1875 (R. v. Barnes

Note to Section 57.

(Overseers of) (1896), 13 T. L. R. 25). As to the effect of the extension of an urban district in relation to the supply of water in the added area, see Huddersfield Corporation v. Ravensthorpe U. D. C., [1897] 2 Ch. 121; 61 J. P. 596, referred to at p. 125, ante, and see also Brighton Intercepting and Outfall Sewers Board v. Hove Corporation (1904), 68 J. P. 565; 20 T. L. R. 760. See also as to the effect of an extension in relation to local Acts in force in the original area, Hill v. Crediton U. D. C. (1899), 80 L. T. 861.

(2) Notice of the provisions of the Order shall be given, and copies thereof shall be supplied in the prescribed manner (a), and otherwise as the county council think fit, and if it relates to the division of a district into wards, or the alteration of the number of wards or of the boundaries of a ward, or of the number of the members of a district council, or of the apportionment of the members among the wards (b), shall come into operation upon being finally approved by the county council (c).

(b) These cases are those mentioned in sub-s. (1), clauses (d) and (e), ante, p. 771.

(c) It is not required that the Order of the county council shall be confirmed or approved by the L. G. B. or any other authority. The final approval by the county council is usually given by a further Order, but a resolution is sufficient.

(3) In any other case (a) the Order shall be submitted to the Local Government Board; and if within three months (b) after such notice of the provisions of the Order as the Local Government Board determine to be the first notice, the council of any district affected by the Order (c), or any number of county electors (d) registered in that district or in any ward of that district, not being less than one-sixth of the total number of electors in that district or ward, or if the Order relates only to a parish, any number of county electors registered in that parish, not being less than one-sixth of the total number of electors in that parish, petition the Local Government Board to disallow the Order, the Local Government Board shall cause to be made a local inquiry (e), and determine whether the Order is to be confirmed or not (f).

(a) I.e., in the cases mentioned in clauses (a), (b), and (c) of sub-s. (1), ante, p. 770.

(c) This will signify, in the case of an Order affecting any urban or rural district, such district.

(d) County electors are the persons who are registered to vote in the election of county councillors. The qualification of electors and the preparation of the lists of local government electors are now regulated by the Representation of the People Act, 1918, 8 Geo. 5, c. 64 post. Boards of Guardians affected by the Order may also petition against it under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 36 (10), post, p. 949.

(e) Local inquiries are regulated by s. 87, post, p. 782.

(f) The L. G. B. expressed an opinion that in confirming an Order they had no power to vary the area dealt with. But no doubt they might make modifications in matters of detail.

(4) If any such petition is not presented, or being presented is withdrawn, the Local Government Board shall confirm the Order.

When six months have elapsed after the confirmation of the Order, no objection can be taken to the validity of it: see the L. G. A., 1894, s. 42, post, p. 951, and R. v. Middlesex JJ., Ex parte Walsall Union, [1907] 2 K. B. 581; 71 J. P. 393. But it can be amended at any time under s. 59 (6), post, p. 775, by the same authority which made it.

The view taken by the L. G. B. and presumably by their successors, the Ministry of Health, is that they must confirm an Order under this sub-section even if they do not approve of it, as for example, when an Order is made for the constitution of an urban district with a very small population. Note to Section 57.

(5) The Local Government Board, on confirming an Order, may make such modifications therein as they consider necessary for carrying into effect the objects of the Order.

See note (f) to sub-section (3).

The L. G. B. state in their annual reports that the majority of Orders issued by county councils dealing with boundaries require modification in some respects. The modifications relate to such matters as the description of boundaries, the compensation of persons affected by the alterations, the arrangements for the election of new authorities, the continuance for a fixed period of existing byelaws, the operation of provisions in local Acts, and the status of residues or excluded portions of parishes for the purposes of the L. G. A., 1894, when parts of them have been included in urban districts. It is understood, however, that the Ministry of Health will assist a county council in framing Orders so as to reduce to a minimum the number of necessary modifications.

(6) An Order under this section, when confirmed by the Local Government Board, shall be forthwith laid upon the table of both Houses of Parliament, if Parliament be then sitting, and, if not, forthwith after the then next meeting of Parliament.

(7) This section shall be in addition to, and not in derogation of, any power of the Local Government Board in respect of the union or division or alteration of parishes.

It may be inferred from this provision that the section was intended to supersede the provisions of other statutes in respect of matters to which it relates. See first note to section.

59.—(1) A scheme or order under this Act may make such administrative and judicial arrangements incidental to or consequential on any alteration of boundaries, authorities, or other matters made by the scheme or order as may seem expedient. Supplemental provisions as to alteration of areas.

This will apply to Orders made under ss. 54 and 57, ante, pp. 768, 770; also to Orders concerning alteration of areas made under the L. G. A., 1894 (see s. 69 of that Act, post, p. 982). See also R. v. Middlesex JJ., [1906] 2 K. B. 365; 70 J. P. 385; affirmed on appeal on the ground that six months had elapsed after the confirmation of the Order there in question (see ante, p. 772).

(2) A place which is part of an administrative county for the purposes of this Act shall, subject as in this Act mentioned, form part of that county for all purposes (a), whether sheriff, lieutenant, custos rotulorum, justices, militia, coroner, or other; Provided that—

(a) Notwithstanding this enactment, each of the entire counties of York, Lincoln, Sussex, Suffolk, Northampton, and Cambridge shall continue to be one county for the said purposes so far as it is one county at the passing of this Act; and

(b) This enactment shall not affect the existing powers or privileges of any city or borough as respects the sheriff, lieutenant, militia, justices, or coroner; but, if any county borough is, at the passing of this Act, a part of any county for any of the above purposes, nothing in this Act shall prevent the same from continuing to be part of that county for that purpose; and

(c) This enactment shall not affect parliamentary elections nor the right to vote at the election of a member to serve in Parliament, nor land tax, tithes, or tithe rent-charge, nor the area within which any bishop, parson, or other ecclesiastical person has any cure of souls or jurisdiction.

(a) One result of this provision is to transfer an urban district previously situated in two counties to that county which contained the largest portion of the population according to the census of 1881. The case of Re Staffordshire and Derbyshire County Council (1890), 54 J. P. 566, may be mentioned as illustrating the effect of such a transfer.

The words "for all purposes" merely mean that a place shall form part of such county for the exercise therein of their respective offices by the officers named: see Ex parte London C. C., [1892] 1 Q. B. 33; 56 J. P. 279.

(4) Any scheme or order made in pursuance of this Act may, so far as may seem necessary or proper for the purposes of the scheme or order, provide for all or any of the following matters, that is to say,—

(a) May provide for the abolition, restriction, or establishment, or extension, of the jurisdiction of any local authority in or over any part of the area affected by the scheme or order, and for the adjustment or alteration of the boundaries of such area, and for the constitution of the local authorities therein, and may deal with the powers and duties of any council, local authorities, quarter sessions, justices of the peace, coroners, sheriff, lieutenant, custos rotulorum, clerk of the peace, and other officer therein, and with the costs of any such authorities, sessions, persons, or officers as aforesaid, and may determine the status of any such area as a component part of any larger area, and provide for the election of representatives in such area, and may extend to any altered area the provisions of any local Act which were previously in force in a portion of the area; and

(b) May make temporary provision for meeting the debts and liabilities of the various authorities affected by the scheme or order, for the management of their property, and for regulating the duties, position, and remuneration of officers affected by the scheme or order, and applying to them the provisions of this Act as to existing officers; and

(c) May provide for the transfer of any writs, process, records, and documents relating to or to be executed in any part of the area affected by the scheme or order, and for determining questions arising from such transfer; and

(d) May provide for all matters which appear necessary or proper for bringing into operation and giving full effect to the scheme or order; and

(e) May adjust any property, debts, and liabilities affected by the scheme or order.

The expression "local authority" in this sub-section includes a burial board (R. v. Durham C. C., Local Government Chronicle, 1897, p. 70. See also R. v.

Keighley Overseers, ibid., p. 47). As to provision for pending actions, see Jackson v. Plympton St. Mary R. D. C., post, p. 777. As to the application of the provisions as to existing officers, see West v. Wilts C. C. (1893), 10 T. L. R. 19. Note to Section 59.

As to adjustment, the county council appear by their Order to have power to provide for everything to which the parties may agree under s. 62, infra. In so far as the Order does not so provide it seems that s. 62 will apply (In re Sowerby U. D. C. and Mytholmroyd U. D. C. (1896), 74 L. T. 313).

For a discussion as to the powers of the county council under this sub-section, see R. v. Middlesex JJ., ante, p. 772.

(5) Where an alteration of boundaries of a county is made by this Act an Order for any of the above-mentioned matters may, if it appears to the Local Government Board desirable, be made by that Board, but such Order, if petitioned against by any council, sessions, or local authority affected thereby, within three months after notice of such Order is given in accordance with this Act, shall be provisional only, unless the petition is withdrawn or the Order is confirmed by Parliament.

Provisional Orders are regulated by s. 87, post, p. 782.

(6) A scheme or order may be made for amending any scheme or order previously made in pursuance of this Act, and may be made by the same authority and after the same procedure as the original scheme or order (a). Where a provision of this Act respecting a scheme or order requires the scheme or order to be laid before Parliament, or to be confirmed by Parliament (b), either in every case or if it is petitioned against, such scheme or order may amend any local and personal Act (c).

(a) This provision will apply to Orders made under ss. 54, 57, ante, pp. 768, 770. Such Orders may be amended by subsequent Orders as above described.

(b) An Order is provisional only if made under s. 54 (3) (ante, p. 770) and s. 59 (6).

(c) Such an amendment will be necessary in every case where an Order affects a district subject to a local Act. As to what is a local and personal Act within the meaning of this sub-section, see R. v. London C. C., [1893] 2 Q. B. 455; 58 J. P. 21; R. v. Watermen's and Lightermen's Co., [1897] 1 Q. B. 659.

Compare the provisions of s. 303 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 637.

60. In every alteration of boundaries effected under the authority of this Act, care shall be taken that, so far as practicable, the boundaries of an area of local government shall not intersect the boundaries of any other area of local government. General provisions as to alteration of boundaries.

Urban and rural districts are areas of local government within the meaning of the above section. The object is to provide, as far as possible, that every area shall be a distinct area for all purposes, although, in the meantime, it may be subject to different governing bodies for different purposes.

Section 36 of the L. G. A., 1894, post, p. 947, contains more explicit directions as to avoiding the overlapping of areas of local government.

62.—(1) Any councils and other authorities affected by this Act or by any scheme, order, or other thing made or done in pursuance of this Act, may from time to time make agreements for the purpose of adjusting any property, income, debts, liabilities, and expenses, so far as affected by this Act or such scheme, order, or thing, of the parties to the agreement, and the agreement and any other agreement authorised Adjustment of property and liabilities.

by this Act to be made for the purpose of the adjustment of any property, debts, liabilities, or financial relations, may provide for the transfer or retention of any property, debts, and liabilities, with or without any conditions, and for the joint use of any property, and for the transfer of any duties, and for payment by either party to the agreement in respect of property, debts, duties, and liabilities so transferred or retained, or of such joint user, and in respect of the salary, remuneration, or compensation payable to any officer or person, and that either by way of a capital sum, or of a terminable annuity for a period not exceeding that allowed by the Commissioners under this Act or the Local Government Board.

As to the power of the Ministry of Health to appoint an arbitrator in a case where an existing adjustment between a county and a county borough had become unequitable under s. 32 (6) of this Act, see R. v. Minister of Health, [1921] 1 K. B. 1; 85 J. P. 49.

A scheme or order may itself adjust any property debts and liabilities affected by it (s. 59 (4), ante, p. 774); but, if it does not do so, the text will apply: see note to sub-s. (2), post, p. 778.

See also the L. G. A., 1894, s. 68, as to adjustments required under that Act.

The authorities concerned are to make the adjustment by agreement if possible—for a form of agreement see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. X., p. 236—if they cannot agree the matter will go under the next sub-section to an arbitrator.

Later legislation as to "adjustments."

"Property," "liabilities," and "expenses" are defined by s. 100, post, p. 785. In deciding what matters form the subject of a legal claim upon an adjustment consequent upon an alteration of area and the principles to be followed by an arbitrator in making the adjustment, reference must now be made to the Local Government (Adjustments) Act, 1913, p. 1082, post, the main effect of which (so far as the present work is concerned) is to modify to a great extent the principles laid down in the Caterham and West Hartlepool decisions, infra. Various decisions under the present and similar sections prior to 1913 are briefly referred to below, but in view of the Caterham Case and the new statutory provisions, many of them are of little value. As to the construction of the Act of 1913, see the Act, post, and Queenborough Corporation v. Sheppey R. D. C., [1915] 1 K. B. 356; 79 J. P. 155.

Decisions as to adjustments.

In Re Llanwonno School Board and Ystradyfodwg School Board (1898), 62 J. P. 644, that part of the parish of L. which contained the school was transferred to Y., which was to take over all liabilities in respect of the school: it was held that an arbitrator could consider a claim by L. in respect of it having recently enlarged the school out of income. In Re Bucks C. C. and Herts C. C., [1899] 1 Q. B. 515; 63 J. P. 356, where a part of B. containing no main roads or county bridges was transferred to H., it was held that B. could claim in respect of a loss of area which contributed to the rates without calling for any outlay. In Re Rochdale and Haslingden Unions, [1899] 1 Q. B. 540, upon an alteration of the boundary of two unions it was held that any consideration bearing on the question whether the claimant union had been damaged financially by the change must be taken into account; see also to the same effect, St. Thomas R. D. C. v. Heavitree U. D. C. (1902), 66 J. P. 597; 86 L. T. 153. The Bucks Case and the Rochdale Case were, however, expressly overruled in Caterham U. D. C. v. Godstone R. D. C., [1904] A. C. 171; 68 J. P. 429. There a parish forming part of a rural district was converted into an urban district by an Order of the county council, confirmed by the L. G. B. Before such Order was made the rural district council received from rates levied in the parish for highway purposes sums greater than those expended in respect of the maintenance and repair of the highways in the parish. It was held that the loss of the surplus of the rates received over the sums expended upon the maintenance and repair of the roads within the parish was not a matter requiring adjustment under s. 62, supra. The adjustments to be made were to be limited to adjustments of ascertained and existing property, such as buildings, income derived from trust property or charities, or the proceeds of a rate already made, and of extant debts, liabilities, or expenses actually owing or incurred. The Caterham Case was followed and applied in West Hartlepool Corporation v. Durham C. C., [1907] A. C. 246; 71 J. P. 385, where on the creation of a new county borough it was held that the county had no claim against the borough in respect of its no longer contributing towards the cost of main roads, county bridges, salaries, law charges, registration expenses, etc., and that the borough had no counterclaim in respect of children in industrial schools and reformatories, subsidised roads and fines.

Part of a county was transferred to a burgh under an Act which provided for the apportionment of certain existing county debts; it was held that this express limited provision indicated a clear intention that no other debts should be apportioned (Inverness C. C. v. Inverness Magistrates, [1909] S. C. 386). The Caterham Case, supra, was distinguished in Midlothian C. C. v. Musselburgh Magistrates, [1911] S. C. 463, where it was held on the extension of a borough that an existing county loan was a "liability" which must be apportioned, and that a claim for such apportionment was not bad as being a claim for compensation for loss of area. In Lanark C. C. v. Motherwell Magistrates, [1912] S. C. 1251, it was held that an arbitrator need not necessarily make his apportionment according to the rateable values of the areas taken and retained, but might choose his own method so long as the court could not say that such method was clearly a wrong one.

See Wolstanton U. D. C. v. Tunstall U. D. C., [1911] 1 Ch. 229; 75 J. P. 203, for a case where an action between several councils as to their liabilities in respect of a joint hospital was referred to an arbitrator in order that he might make all necessary adjustments under this section; and see North Riding C. C. v. Middlesbrough Borough Council, [1914] 2 K. B. 847; 78 J. P. 257, as to the "redemption" of contributions under s. 32 (3) of this Act when a county borough is made a quarter sessions borough. See Glamorgan C. C. v. Cardiff and Swansea Corporations, [1915] 3 K. B. 438; 79 J. P. 505, and Re Northumberland C. C. and Tynemouth Corporation (1916), 80 J. P. 17, as to the consideration to be attached to the cost to the various areas of maintaining main roads in apportioning under s. 32 (6) the proceeds of the local taxation licences and estate duty grants.

The provisions for adjustment apply when an entirely new district is formed, as well as when the areas of two existing districts are altered (St. Thomas R. D. C. v. Heavitree U. D. C., ante, p. 776). Where part of a local government area is transferred to another area, the adjustment must be made as between the two new areas and not as between the old divided area and the transferred portion (In re Rochdale Union and Haslingden Union, supra).

As to when an agreement as to certain matters bars a claim for adjustment in respect of other matters, see St. Thomas R. D. C. v. Heavitree U. D. C., ante, p. 776.

A district which had previously formed part of a rural district was in 1900 constituted a separate urban district. After negotiations as to the adjustment of the property, income, debts, liabilities and expenses affected by the separation, under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 62, an agreement was come to whereby a considerable sum was to be paid by the urban council to the rural council in settlement of (among other claims) an estimated annual loss in income owing to the transfer of rateable area from the rural district to the urban district. The urban council afterwards brought an action against the rural council, in which they alleged that the agreement was ultra vires and not binding upon them, as, according to the decision in the Caterham Case, ante, p. 776, the rural council was not entitled to any payment as compensation for loss of area:—Held, that the agreement having been made bonâ fide between the councils in settlement of their respective claims, the fact that one of the claims put forward bonâ fide by one of the parties was not well founded in law was no ground for setting aside the compromise, and that the action failed:—Held, also, that the defendants were not entitled to costs as between solicitor and client, under the Public Authorities' Protection Act, 1893, the action not being brought by the plaintiffs for any act done by the defendants (Holsworthy U. D. C. v. Holsworthy R. D. C., [1907] 2 Ch. 62; 71 J. P. 330. See also on the main point, Att.-Gen. v. Essex C. C. (1907), 71 J. P. 557; 24 T. L. R. 22).

An action was commenced against a rural district council for an injunction to restrain the continuance of a nuisance caused by sewage matter passing into a stream which flowed through the plaintiff's grounds. Whilst it was pending that portion of the council's district in which the sewage arose and the sewer ran, was transferred to an adjoining borough by a Provisional Order which provided that any action then pending against the rural council might be continued against the corporation, and that all liabilities attaching exclusively to the added area should be transferred to the corporation. The plaintiff's grounds were not in the added area. The action was discontinued on an undertaking being given by the defendants, and a question arose as to who should bear the costs. It was held that the action was one pending in relation exclusively to the added area and that the costs be borne by the borough (Jackson v. Plympton St. Mary R. D. C. (1900), 64 J. P. 168).

Note to Section 62.

On a case stated under s. 29, ante, p. 759, the court has no jurisdiction to decide questions of adjustment under this section (In re Salop C. C. (1891), 65 L. T. 416).

The commissioners referred to in the text were appointed under s. 61. Their term of office expired on June 30th, 1892.

(2) In default of an agreement as to any matter requiring adjustment for the purpose of this Act, or any matter which, in case of difference, is to be referred to arbitration, then, if no other mode of making such adjustment or determining such difference is provided by this Act, such adjustment or difference may be made or determined by an arbitrator appointed by the parties, or in case of difference as to the appointment, appointed by the Local Government Board.

As to the power of the Ministry of Health to appoint an arbitrator in a case where an existing adjustment between a county and a county borough has become inequitable under s. 32 (6), see R. v. Minister of Health, [1921] 1 K. B. 1; 85 J. P. 49.

Where an order of a county council has not in fact provided for the adjustment of property, debts, and liabilities under s. 59 (4) (e), an arbitrator may be appointed under this sub-section (In re Sowerby U. D. C. and Mytholmroyd U. D. C. (1896), 74 L. T. 313; 12 T. L. R. 300). But semble if it provides for adjustment of certain liabilities it may be held to exclude by inference a claim in respect of any others (cf. Inverness C. C. v. Inverness Magistrates, p. 777, ante). See, as to arbitrations, the next sub-section.

(3) An arbitrator appointed under this Act shall be deemed to be an arbitrator within the meaning of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and the Acts amending the same, and the provisions of those Acts with respect to an arbitration shall apply accordingly; and, further, the arbitrator may state a special case, and notwithstanding anything in the said Acts, shall determine the amount of the costs, and shall have power to disallow as costs in the arbitration the costs of any witness whom he considers to have been called unnecessarily, and any other costs which he considers to have been incurred unnecessarily.

A single arbitrator is to be appointed. By the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, s. 25, his appointment is to be delivered to the arbitrator, and is to be deemed a submission to arbitration by the parties. Neither party can revoke the appointment without the consent of the other. By s. 26, if the arbitrator dies or becomes incapable, another may be appointed, and in such a case s. 29 provides that the new arbitrator shall begin de novo. By s. 32, the arbitrator may call for the production of documents by either party, and may examine witnesses on oath. By s. 33, before he enters on the arbitration, he must make the declaration therein mentioned, and such declaration is to be annexed to the award. Any act of an arbitrator contrary to the declaration is a misdemeanor. By s. 35, the arbitrator is to deliver his award in writing, and allow the parties to inspect it at any time. By s. 36, the award may be made a rule of court. The award must be made within twenty-one days from the arbitrator's appointment, unless the time is extended as provided by s. 31. By s. 37, no award is to be set aside for irregularity or error in matter of form. The provisions in the Lands Clauses Acts, as to costs, will not apply. The costs are to be determined by the arbitrator, who will, apparently, have a discretion in awarding them, and the text gives him full power to disallow certain costs. See the sections of the Lands Clauses Acts in extenso, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

The arbitrator should determine by his award by whom the costs of the reference as well as of the award should be paid. If the award deal with the costs of the award, but not of the reference, no action lies for the costs of the reference (South Mimms R. D. C. v. Barnet U. D. C. (1900), 82 L. T. 421). If an arbitrator, through ignorance of the law as to his power to award as to costs, fails to deal with the costs, the court may, on evidence before it of the arbitrator showing his error, remit the award for him to deal with the question of costs (In re Baxters and Midland Rail. Co. (1906), 70 J. P. 445; 95 L. T. 20).

(4) Any award or order made by the Commissioners or any arbitrator under this Act may provide for any matter for which an agreement might have provided. Section 62.

As to what may be provided for by agreement, see sub-s. (1), supra.

(5) Any sum required to be paid for the purpose of adjustment, or of any award or order made by the Commissioners, or an arbitrator under this Act, may be paid out of the county or borough fund or out of such other special fund as the council, with the approval of the Commissioners under this Act or of the Local Government Board, may direct.

The expression "council" apparently includes a district council, i.e., an urban or rural district council (see s. 100, post, p. 785).

(6) The payment of any capital sum required to be paid for the purposes of the adjustment or of an agreement under this Act, or of any award or order made upon any arbitration under this Act, shall be a purpose for which a council may borrow under this Act, or in the case of a borough council, under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, or any local Act, and such sum may be borrowed on the security of all or any of the funds, rates, and revenues of the council, and either by the creation of stock or in any other manner in which they are for the time being authorised to borrow, and such sum may be borrowed without the consent of the Treasury or any other authority, so that it be repaid within such period as the Local Government Board may sanction, by such method as is mentioned in Part Four of this Act for paying off a loan, or, if the sum is raised by stock under a local Act, by such method as is directed by that Act.

(7) Any capital sum paid to any council for the purpose of any adjustment, or in pursuance of any order or award of an arbitrator under this Act shall be treated as capital, and applied, with the sanction of the Local Government Board, either in the repayment of debt or for any other purpose for which capital money may be applied.

63. Where the Local Government Board are required in pursuance of this Act to decide any difference or other matter referred to arbitration in pursuance of this Act, the provisions of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1868, respecting arbitrations by the Board of Trade, and the enactments amending those provisions, shall apply as if they were herein re-enacted, and in terms made applicable to the Local Government Board and the decision of differences and matters under this Act. Arbitration by Local Government Board.

For the Local Government Board must now be read the Ministry of Health.

For the words in italics there must now, under the Local Government (Determination of Differences) Act, 1896, post, p. 1002, be substituted the words "determine as arbitrators": see the note to s. 11 (3), ante, p. 741.

The provisions of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1868, above referred to, are contained in ss. 30—32 of that Act, which are set out in full in App. I., post, Vol. II. Under these, as applied by the above section, the L. G. B. (now the M. of H.) may appoint an arbitrator whose award or decision may be that of the Board. The Board may fix the remuneration of the arbitrator. Section 32 incorporates the Railway Companies Arbitration Act, 1859, ss. 18—29, the effect of which is shortly as follows: Section 18 empowers the arbitrator to call for books and documents and to administer oaths. Section 19 gives him discretion as to the manner of proceeding with the arbitration. Section 20 enables him to proceed in the absence of parties. Section 21 enables him to make several awards each on part of the matters referred. Section 22 makes the award conclusive. Section 23 gives the arbitrator power to extend the time for making an award. Section 24 prevents the setting aside of an award for irregularity. Section 25 provides that parties shall obey award. Section 26, that all courts shall give effect to awards. Section 27, that costs shall be in the discretion of the arbitrator. Section 28, that in the absence of any order, costs are to be borne by parties equally. Section 29, that submission may be made a rule of court.

FINANCE.

* * * * * *

Local Financial Year and Annual Budget.

Fixing of local financial year and consequent adjustments.

73.—(1) After the appointed day, not being more than three years after the passing of this Act (a), the local financial year shall be the twelve months ending the thirty-first day of March, and the accounts of the receipts and expenditure of every county council shall be made up for that year, but until the appointed day the local financial year shall be the twelve months ending the twenty-fifth day of March, and the said accounts shall be made up for that year.

(a) The appointed day was defined by s. 109, post, p. 787. Words italicised were repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1903.

(2) All enactments relating to accounts of local authorities, or the audit thereof, or to returns touching their receipts and expenditure, or to meetings, or other matters, shall be modified so far as is necessary for adapting them to the provisions of this section, and the Local Government Board shall from time to time give such orders and make such arrangements as appear to the Board to be necessary or proper for effecting such adaptation, and giving effect to the provisions of this section.

The above provision applies to urban and rural district councils.

Accounts of district councils, and of their committees and officers, are required to be made up yearly to March 31st, or in the case of accounts which are required to be audited half-yearly, then half-yearly to that date and September 30th in each year and in such form as the L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health) prescribe (L. G. A. 1894, s. 58).

SUPPLEMENTAL.

* * * * * *

Regulations for Bicycles, etc.

Regulations for bicycles, etc.

85.—(1) The provisions of section twenty-six, sub-section five, of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, and section twenty-three, sub-section one, of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, in so far as it gives power to the council to make byelaws regulating the use of carriages herein referred to, and all other provisions of any public or private Acts, in so far as they give power to any local authority to make byelaws for regulating the use of bicycles, tricycles, velocipedes, and other similar machines, are hereby repealed (a), and bicycles, tricycles, velocipedes, and other similar machines (b) are hereby declared to be carriages within the meaning of the Highway Acts (c); and the following additional regulations (d) shall be observed by any person or persons riding or being upon such carriage: Section 85.

(a) During the period between one hour after sunset and one hour before sunrise, every person riding or being upon such carriage shall carry attached to the carriage a lamp, which shall be so constructed and placed as to exhibit a light in the direction in which he is proceeding, and so lighted and kept lighted, as to afford adequate means of signalling the approach or position of the carriage;

(b) Upon overtaking any cart or carriage, or any horse, mule, or other beast of burden, or any foot passenger, being on or proceeding along the carriageway, every such person shall within a reasonable distance from and before passing such cart or carriage, horse, mule, or other beast of burden, or such foot passenger, by sounding a bell or whistle, or otherwise, give audible and sufficient warning of the approach of the carriage.

(2) Any person summarily convicted of offending against the regulations made by this section, shall for each and every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding forty shillings (e).

(a) Italicised words repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1908. The Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, s. 26 (5), enabled a county authority to make byelaws regulating the use of bicycles. The Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 23, enables the council of a borough to make byelaws for the good rule and government of the borough, and for the prevention and suppression of nuisances not otherwise summarily punishable in the borough; and under this section byelaws regulating the use of bicycles and tricycles were made in many boroughs. These byelaws varied greatly; not only were they different in different counties, but county byelaws were in many cases different from those in force in the various boroughs within the county, and these again from one another. The text repeals the above sections so far as regards the power to make byelaws for bicycles, tricycles, etc., and substitutes a general enactment for the byelaws previously in force. And it is to be observed that when a byelaw is made under an Act the repeal of the Act abrogates the byelaw unless it is preserved by means of a saving clause or otherwise. Thus a byelaw relating to bicycles made under a local Act was held to be repealed by the provision in the text (Watson v. Winch, [1916] 1 K. B. 688; 80 J. P. 149).

By the Lights on Vehicles Act, 1907, existing byelaws with regard to the lighting of vehicles (other than, inter alia, bicycles, tricycles, or velocipedes), which varied considerably in different districts, were replaced by a statutory requirement applying uniformly throughout the country.

(b) The Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, s. 26, referred only to bicycles, and it was generally understood that the county byelaws did not extend to tricycles. The text avoids possibility of doubt on the subject.

(c) It had already been held that a bicycle was a carriage within the meaning of the Highway Act, 1835, s. 78, and that its rider might be convicted under that section of furious "driving" of it (Taylor v. Goodwin (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 228; 43 J. P. 653). But in a later case it was held that a bicycle was not a carriage liable to toll under a Turnpike Act (Williams v. Ellis (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 175; 44 J. P. 394). Cf. Parkyns

Note to Section 85.

v. Priest (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 313; 45 J. P. 751. The text now expressly declares that they shall be deemed to be carriages within the meaning of the Highway Acts. As such they are subject to various provisions which impose penalties for such offences as negligently, or by wilful misbehaviour, causing hurt to any person, horse, cattle, or goods; not keeping the left or near side of the road on meeting any other carriage; negligently, or by wilful misbehaviour, preventing the free passage of any person, carriage, etc.; driving furiously so as to endanger the life or limb of any passenger. See McKee v. McGrath (1892), 30 L. R. Ir. 41; Yeldham v. Carpenter (1913), 47 Ir. L. T. 186; and Chatterton v. Parker, [1914] W. N. 206, as to furious driving; and cf. the Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896, s. 1 (1) (b), as to light locomotives; Smith v. Boon (1901), 65 J. P. 486; 84 L. T. 593; and Mayhew v. Sutton (1901), 71 L. J. K. B. 46; 86 L. T. 18.

The provision in the text does not, however, remove difficulties which arise in the construction of private Acts. See Cannan v. Abingdon (Earl of), [1900] 2 Q. B. 66; 64 J. P. 505; Simpson v. Teignmouth and Shaldon Bridge Co., [1903] 1 K. B. 405; 67 J. P. 65; Smith v. Kynnersley, [1903] 1 K. B. 788; 67 J. P. 125.

A bicycle has been held to be a "vehicle" within the meaning of a local Act against the use of vehicles for the display of advertisements without the consent of the local authority (Ellis v. Nott Bower (1896), 60 J. P. 760; 13 T. L. R. 35); and within the meaning of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861, s. 35 (R. v. Parker (1895), 59 J. P. 793).

It has been held that a motor bicycle is a carriage within the meaning of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1888, s. 4 (3) (O'Donoghue v. Moon (1904), 68 J. P. 349; 90 L. T. 843).

(d) These additional regulations are of universal application, and supersede the provisions of the repealed byelaws. There is no power to arrest without warrant for breach of these regulations (Hatton v. Treeby, [1897] 2 Q. B. 452; 61 J. P. 586). Sunset and sunrise are to be taken according to local time, not Greenwich mean time (Gordon v. Cann (1899), 68 L. J. Q. B. 434; 63 J. P. 324). Cf. the Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896, ss. 2, 3, as to light locomotives.

(e) This penalty will be recoverable by conviction on information before a court of summary jurisdiction.

Adaptation of Acts.

Application of provisions of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, as to local inquiries and Provisional Orders.

87.—(1) Where the Local Government Board are authorised by this Act to make any inquiry, to determine any difference, to make or confirm any order, to frame any scheme, or to give any consent, sanction or approval to any matter, or otherwise to act under this Act, they may cause to be made a local inquiry, and in that case, and also in a case where they are required by this Act to cause to be made a local inquiry sections two hundred and ninety-three to two hundred and ninety-six, both inclusive, of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall apply as if they were herein re-enacted, and in terms made applicable to this Act.

See the sections above referred to, ante, pp. 626—629, and the Local Government (Determination of Differences) Act, 1896, post, p. 1002.

This sub-section and sub-s. (5), infra, are applied by the Education Act, 1902, s. 23 (9), to any order, consent, sanction or approval which the L. G. B., now the Ministry of Health, are authorised to make or give under that Act. The same sub-sections are made applicable by the Local Authorities (Treasury Powers) Act, 1900, s. 1 (4), with a view of enabling the L. G. B. (now the M. of H.) to carry out the powers transferred to them by that Act.

(2) Sections two hundred and ninety-seven and two hundred and ninety-eight of the Public Health Act, 1875 (which relate to the making of Provisional Orders by the Local Government Board), shall apply for the purposes of this Act as if they were herein re-enacted, and in terms made applicable thereto. Section 87.

See the sections above referred to, ante, pp. 629, 632.

It was held that the above sub-section had the effect of bringing the costs incurred in opposing a Provisional Order Bill within the saving enacted by the Borough Funds Act, 1872, s. 8 (Brooks, Jenkins & Co. v. Torquay Corporation, ante, p. 403). See now the Borough Funds Act, 1903, s. 7 (1), as to the power to oppose Bills.

It is understood that in the opinion of the L. G. B. the costs of parish councils as well as those of urban and rural district councils in opposing Provisional Orders under the Act of 1888 must now be allowed by the L. G. B., now the Ministry of Health, before being paid.

(4) Where any matter is authorised or required by this Act to be prescribed, and no other provision is made declaring how the same is to be prescribed, the same shall be prescribed from time to time by the Local Government Board.

See for example, s. 57 (1), (2), ante, pp. 770, 772.

(5) Where the Board cause any local inquiry to be held under this Act, the costs incurred in relation to such inquiry, including the salary of any inspector or officer of the Board engaged in such inquiry, not exceeding three guineas a day, shall be paid by the councils and other authorities concerned in such inquiry, or by such of them and in such proportions as the Board may direct, and the Board may certify the amount of the costs incurred, and any sum so certified and directed by the Board to be paid by any council or authority shall be a debt to the Crown from such council or authority.

As to the payment of these expenses, see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 298, ante, p. 632.

Savings.

97. Nothing in this Act with respect to main roads shall alter the liability of any person or body of persons, corporate or unincorporate, not being a highway authority, to maintain and repair any road or part of a road. Saving as to liability for main roads.

This section was inserted to preserve the liability of persons or corporations to repair roads which have or may become main roads, when such roads were previously repairable by them ratione tenuræ or by prescription, or under an Act of Parliament, such as the Railway Clauses Acts, which impose on railway companies the duty of repairing roads in some cases.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (BUILDINGS IN STREETS) ACT, 1888.

Section 1.

An Act to amend the Public Health Acts in relation to Buildings in Streets. [24th December 1888.]

Whereas the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875, with respect to bringing forward houses or buildings in streets are defective, and it is expedient to make further provisions in relation thereto:

Short titles and construction.

1. This Act may be cited as the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, and this Act and the Public Health Act, 1875, and the Public Health (Water) Act, 1878, and the Public Health (Interments) Act, 1879, and the Public Health (Fruit Pickers' Lodgings) Act, 1882, and the Public Health Act, 1875 (Support of Sewers), Amendment Act, 1883, and the Public Health (Confirmation of Byelaws) Act, 1884, and the Public Health (Officers) Act, 1884, and the Public Health (Ships, etc.) Act, 1885, and the Public Health (Members and Officers) Act, 1885, may be cited together as the Public Health Acts, and this Act shall be construed as one with the Public Health Act, 1875.

The Act is simply a single enactment to replace s. 156 of the P. H. A., 1875, which, as the preamble states, had been found to be defective. The collective title "the Public Health Acts" is now more comprehensive: see the Short Titles Act, 1896. The effect of the provision that the Act is to be construed as one with the P. H. A., 1875, would appear to be to keep alive the exemption contained in s. 157 of the last-mentioned Act in favour of "buildings belonging to any railway company and used for the purposes of such railway under any Act of Parliament."

If a rural district council desire to have the powers of this Act they must apply to the Ministry of Health for the necessary order under s. 276 of the Act of 1875.

See also the note to s. 156 of that Act, p. 327.

Interpretation.

2. In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires, words and expressions to which meanings are assigned by the Public Health Act, 1875, have in this Act the same respective meanings.

The effect of this provision is to give words used in this Act the meanings assigned to them by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 4, ante, p. 3. See, however, note (c) to the next section.

Buildings not to be brought forward.

3. Section one hundred and fifty-six of the Public Health Act, 1875, is, save as hereinafter mentioned, hereby repealed (a), and in lieu thereof it is hereby enacted that it shall not be lawful in any urban district, without the written consent of the urban authority, to erect or bring forward any house or building (b) in any street (c), or any part of such house or building, beyond the front main wall of the house or building on either side thereof in the same street (d), nor to build any addition to any house or building beyond the front main wall of the house or building on either side of the same.

Any person offending against this enactment shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings for every day during which the offence is continued after written notice in this behalf from the urban authority (e).

Provided that the repeal by this Act enacted shall not affect anything duly done or suffered, or any right or liability acquired, accrued, or incurred, or any security given under the section hereby repealed, or any penalty, forfeiture, or punishment incurred in respect of any offence committed against such section, or any investigation, legal proceeding, or remedy in respect of any such right, liability, security, penalty, forfeiture, or punishment as aforesaid; and any such investigation, legal proceeding, and remedy may be carried on as if this Act had not been passed.

(a) Section 156 of the P. H. A., 1875, provided as follows: It shall not be lawful in any urban district, without the written consent of the urban authority, to bring forward any house or building forming part of any street or any part thereof, beyond the front wall of the house or building on either side thereof, nor to build any addition thereto beyond the front of the house or building on either side of the same. Any person offending against this enactment shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings for every day during which the offence is continued after written notice in this behalf from the urban authority. It was held, with reference to this section, that the expression "house or building" did not include new buildings in course of erection upon land never before built upon (Williams v. Wallasey L. B. (1886), 16 Q. B. D. 718; 59 J. P. 582); and in consequence of this decision the enactment in the text was passed. It may be taken that this enactment has no application to cases coming within s. 155 of the P. H. A., 1875 (see Lord Auckland v. Westminster District Board of Works (1872), L. R. 7 Ch. 597); but, semble, that section does not apply where after buildings have been taken down the site has been so long left vacant that it appears that the intention of rebuilding has been abandoned (Worley v. St. Mary Abbots, Kensington (Vestry of), [1892] 2 Ch. 404).

Consent.

(b) A local authority could not justify making a charge for giving their consent (Southwark Borough Council v. Partington Advertising Co. (1905), 69 J. P. 183; 3 L. G. R. 505).

It should be observed that mere acquiescence does not amount to a written consent for purposes of this section. See per JESSEL, M.R., in Kerr v. Corporation of Preston (1876), 6 Ch. D. at p. 468. The written consent need not be under seal. Where plans showing that the building line was infringed were passed, and stamped as approved, by a committee whose proceedings were subsequently ratified by the council, it was held that this was a sufficient consent for the purposes of the section (Mullis v. Hubbard [1903] 2 Ch. 431; 67 J. P. 281). And if projections beyond the line are shown on the plans approved by the council, the approval may be considered a written consent within the section, although the attention of the council was not specifically called to the projections (Merrett v. Charlton Kings U. D. C. (1903), 67 J. P. 419). The fact however, that an official of the council has led a builder to think that his building will be consented to will not avail the builder if the council disregard the advice of their official and refuse consent: see Att.-Gen. v. Wimbledon House Estate Co., post, p. 794.

"House or building."

By the P. H. A., 1875, s. 4, which must be read into this Act (see s. 2, ante, p. 789) the expression "house" includes schools, also factories and other buildings in which persons are employed. There is no definition of the word "building." See decisions as to what is a house or a building, ante, p. 20. Whether a structure is a building within the meaning of the present section or not is a question of fact to be determined by the justices, provided the thing erected is of such a nature that it is capable of being a building. A wooden structure used for advertising purposes was 9 feet 6 inches long, 3 feet wide, and 7 feet high; was roofed over, and had a glass front, and a door by which to enter; and was fastened to the ground by four posts, sunk to the depth of 9 to 12 inches; it was held to be of such a nature that it was capable of being a building within the meaning of this section (Brown v. Leicester (Mayor, etc. of) (1892), 62 L. J. M. C. 22; 57 J. P. 70); see also R. v. Gregory on p. 22, ante. As to hoardings, see Paddington Borough Council v. Att.-Gen., [1906] A. C. 1; 70 J. P. 4; referred to at p. 24, ante; in the judgment of BUCKLEY, J., in this case the previous authorities are cited and discussed (see Boyce v. Paddington Borough Council, [1903] 1 Ch. 109; 67 J. P. 23).

The owner of a house, which was situate in a street in an urban district, and had a small garden in front, erected, without consent, in front of the door a porch of wood and glass and roofed with felt, projecting 6 feet 6 inches beyond the front main wall the house. The porch was not attached to the house, and stood on wheels. The owner was summoned under this section for building an "addition to the house" without consent, etc., but the magistrates dismissed the summons on the ground that the porch did not constitute an addition to the house. It was held, that the court could not say that in so deciding the magistrates had gone wrong in law, and that therefore their decision must stand (Sunderland Corporation v. Charlton (1913), 77 J. P. 126; 11 L. G. R. 484).

There have been many cases as to whether particular erections were "buildings or structures" within the meaning of the London Building Act, 1894, s. 22. A glass and iron portico or shelter which projected beyond the general line of the street, and was dovetailed into the main structure of the building, was held to be such a building or structure (Coburg Hotel Co. v. London C. C. (1899), 63 J. P. 805; 81 L. T. 450). An advertising company affixed upon the front wall of a building advertisement cases, constructed of iron and supported by iron supports pinned through the wall. The outer sides were covered with wooden frames carrying canvas lined with advertisements, and provision was made for illuminating the interiors with electric light. The cases, which varied in width and height, projected ten inches in front of the front wall of the building beyond the building line, but less than the existing cornice over the shop, which was two feet beyond the building line: it was held (WILLS, J., dissentiente), that the cases were not structures within the meaning of s. 22, supra (London C. C. v. Illuminated Advertisements Co., [1904] 2 K. B. 886; 68 J. P. 445). The last-mentioned case was followed where the erection complained of was a shelter hung from the front wall of a building by two stay rods, and secured to the wall at the bottom by six bolts. The shelter consisted of an iron framework filled in on the front and sides with leaded glass, and covered on the top with zinc. There were letters on the glass made visible by night by lights arranged within the shelter (London C. C. v. Schewzik, [1905] 2 K. B. 695; 69 J. P. 409; and it was again followed where a firm of milliners erected on the steps and landing leading to the front door in the front main wall of their premises a show case which took the place of a shop front and projected beyond the general line of buildings. The houses in this part of the street had bay windows in front of the general line of buildings and the show case was slightly in front of the bays (London C. C. v. Hancock and James, [1907] 2 K. B. 45; 71 J. P. 268). See also Tunmer v. Partington Advertising Co. (1904), 68 J. P. 318; and see Hull v. London C. C., [1901] 1 K. B. 580; 65 J. P. 309, to the effect that advertisement cases are not "projections" within the meaning of the London Building Act, 1894, s. 73 (8). As to the section of the street which may be taken into account in defining the general line of buildings in a block forming part of the street, see L. C. C. v. Galsworthy, [1918] A. C. 851; 82 J. P. 297.

"Street."

(c) The word "street," as defined by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 4, ante, p. 15, includes any highway (not being a turnpike road), and any public bridge (not being a county bridge), and any road, lane, footway, square, court, alley, or passage, whether a thoroughfare or not. This definition is incorporated by s. 2, ante, p. 789, and consequently the Act might be construed as applying to any road, public or private, whether it has acquired the character of a street in the ordinary acceptation of the term or not. Indeed, it was the very object of the Act to enable an urban authority to exercise some control over the line of buildings in new streets. It has, however, apparently been decided that the question whether a road is a street within the meaning of the section is one of fact and also of degree, as it may be a street at one end, though at the other still a country road (Att.-Gen. v. Siddall (1898), Times, June 24th); and in the repealed s. 156 the word street had its ordinary signification, not the wider meaning (see R. v. Fullford (1864), 33 L. J. M. C. 122; 28 J. P. 357). The Act is defective to this extent, that there will be no control over the earliest buildings in the street, and these may really fix the line for the rest of the street. Thus in R. v. Middlesbrough Corporation (1890), Times, July 7th, Lord COLERIDGE, C.J., and WILLS, J., granted a mandamus to the corporation to approve plans for a house to be erected in a new street where there were no other houses on either side thereof in the same street except one at a distance of 800 feet. See, however, as to the granting of a mandamus, R. v. Eastbourne Corporation and R. v. Chiswick U. D. C., post, p. 793.

A house at the corner of two streets may be in both streets for the purposes of this enactment (Gilbert v. Wandsworth District Board of Works (1888), 53 J. P. 229; 60 L. T. 149: see also London C. C. v. Lawrance, [1893] 2 Q. B. 228; 57 J. P. 617).

Front main wall of house on either side

(d) The respondent began to erect the front main wall of a new house in a street. At that time B. had raised the front main wall of a new house, which he was erecting on the same side of the street to the height of five inches above the ground. It did not appear to what extent the other walls of B.'s house had been built, or that they were connected with the front main wall. There was a distance of about 300 or 400 feet between the two houses, and there was no other house between them. The front main wall of the respondent's house was six feet nearer the roadway than that of B.'s house. It was held that the respondent had not committed an offence against this enactment (Ravensthorpe L. B. v. Hinchcliffe (1889), 24 Q. B. D. 168; 54 J. P. 421). The grounds of this decision were: (1) that there was not, when the respondent began to build, any front main wall of a house or building on B.'s land; and (2) that the words "house on either side thereof" mean "a house within some near distance, within some degree of proximity, and not one standing some considerable distance away": per FRY, L.J. See, as to the second point, Barlow v. Kensington (Vestry of) (1885), 11 App. Cas. 257. And see R. v. Middlesbrough Corporation, supra; Ellis and Ruislip Northwood U. D. C., In re, [1920] 1 K. B. 343; 83 J. P. 273.

At the junction of the O. and C. roads a house was erected abutting on the footpath of C. road. The main entrance of the house was in O. road. At a distance of sixty-four feet from the back wall of the premises attached to the house in C. road was situated a row of eleven small cottages set back eight feet from C. road. The justices on an information against the owner of the house, under this Act, held that the house in question was in both C. and O. roads, that the cottages were buildings on one side of the house within the meaning of the section, and convicted the owner. It was held that it was a question of fact for the justices whether the house in question was or was not in both roads, and also whether the cottages were sufficiently near to the house to be on one side thereof within the meaning of the Act, and that the conviction must be affirmed (Warren v. Mustard (1891), 61 L. J. M. C. 18; 56 J. P. 502).

In considering what is the front main wall of a house or building for the purposes of this section, and whether such house or building is on either side of, or in the same street as, a house or building in course of erection, all the circumstances of the case must be taken into consideration. The building must be looked at as a whole: its character, its position, its distance from the house or building which is being erected or brought forward in alleged contravention of the section must be considered; a particular wing or other projection must not be selected, the front of which is to be treated as the front main wall which is to give the governing line; nor are two buildings necessarily in the same street because one faces the same road or street, or a continuation of the same road or street, as the other (Att.-Gen. v. Edwards, [1891] 1 Ch. 194).

As the section prohibits a house or building being brought forward beyond the front main wall of the house or building "on either side thereof," this includes a case where there are buildings only on one side of the proposed new house or building (Leyton L. B. v. Causton (1893), 57 J. P. 135). The occupier of a corner house put up a shop front (in front of his own main wall) which projected beyond the front main wall of the house on one side of it, but did not project beyond the front main wall of the house on the other side, which was separated from the corner house in question by a cross street. It was held that the provisions of this section had been contravened (Anderson v. Richards (1906), 70 J. P. 231; 4 L. G. R. 404). See also London C. C. v. Lawrance, ante, p. 791. Every case under the section must be determined with regard to its own particular circumstances. In 1856, a road was laid out on a building estate and from time to time houses were built on the east side of the road so as to form a continuous line of buildings close up to that side of the road. In 1893, T. built a house on the west side of the road, set back more than ten feet from the roadway, and in 1894 he bought a strip of land along the west side of the road to the north of his house, with the object of erecting cottages on it. The building plans showed that the cottages would be ninety feet distant from T.'s house and would be set back ten feet from the roadway, but nearer thereto than his house. The local board refused to approve of the plans for that reason. It was held that a rule nisi for a mandamus to the board to approve the plans must be made absolute, as there was no necessity that the cottages should under the circumstances be in a line with T.'s house (R. v. Ormesby L. B. (1894), 43 W. R. 96). It is immaterial that adjoining property may be injured by the erection of the proposed buildings if the section is inapplicable upon the facts as to the buildings. Thus, where houses on one side of a proposed new building were set back sixty-two feet from the roadway, and it was proposed to erect a new house at a distance of twenty-one feet only from the roadway so as to project in front of the other houses which would considerably diminish their value, the court, holding that they were not on the facts houses in the same street on the side of the proposed new house, made absolute a rule directing the local board to approve of the plans for the proposed new house (R. v. Fulwood L. B.; Ex parte Livesey (1895), 59 J. P. 311; 72 L. T. 592). It has now, however, been decided that a mandamus will not be granted to compel a local authority to approve plans of a proposed building which the local authority has in good faith refused to approve on the ground that the building would contravene the provisions of this Act (R. v. Eastbourne Corporation (1900), 64 J. P. 724; 83 L. T. 338; followed in R. v. Chiswick U. D. C. (1908), 72 J. P. 165). See also R. v. Tynemouth Corporation, [1911] 2 K. B. 361; 75 J. P. 420; in that case a plan for the erection of buildings and the laying out of new streets submitted for approval showed that the greater part of a new street was to be laid out on a field. The authority were advised that the field must, under certain covenants, be kept for ever as arable or pasture land, or as lawns, shrubberies or gardens, and for no other purpose whatsoever, and they disapproved the plan on the ground (inter alia) that it was not practicable to lay out the street as shown in the plan. It was held that they had jurisdiction to refuse to approve on the ground that in view of the restrictive covenants the plan could not in fact be carried out.

Note to Section 3.

Where a railway company acting under a special Act erected a station beyond the general line of buildings in a street in the metropolis, and the station was necessary for the railway and was within the limits of deviation, it was held that the provisions of the Metropolis Management Acts as to the building line did not apply (City and S. L. Rail. Co. v. London C. C., [1891] 2 Q. B. 513; 56 J. P. 6). This decision has been followed in London C. C. v. London School Board, [1892] 2 Q. B. 606; 56 J. P. 791. See also Surrey Commercial Dock Co. v. Bermondsey Borough Council, [1904] 1 K. B. 474; 68 J. P. 155; Stretford U. D. C. v. Manchester South Junction and Altrincham Rail. Co. (1903), 68 J. P. 59; 1 L. G. R. 683; Lewis and Solome v. Charing Cross, etc. Rail. Co., [1906] 1 Ch. 508; 70 J. P. 221; Met. Rail. Co. v. London C. C., [1913] 2 K. B. 249; 77 J. P. 190.

Special Acts.

This Act is an Act for improving the sanitary condition of towns and populous districts within the meaning of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, s. 93. Therefore, if the Act of 1847 is incorporated by the special Act of a water company, the company is liable for erecting a building in a street beyond the front main wall of the house, or building, on either side thereof in the same street (Grand Junction Waterworks v. Hampton U. D. C. (No. 2), (1898), 67 L. J. Q. B. 903; 79 L. T. 176; cf. Uckfield R. D. C. v. Crowborough Water Co., and London C. C. v. Wandsworth and Putney Gas Co., ante, p. 329).

(e) Want of notice is fatal, but if a summons is dismissed for want of notice, notice may be afterwards given, and a fresh summons taken out, and the defendant convicted thereon (Jenkins v. Merthyr Tydfil U. D. C. (1899), 80 L. T. 600).

Penalty for contravention of section.

For the procedure to be adopted when the justices at the hearing are equally divided, see the cases collected in the note under s. 251, at p. 556, ante.

It will be observed that the urban authority are not empowered to demolish a building erected contrary to this section, nor has a justice power to make an order to that effect, unless, perhaps, if the highway is obstructed: see Bagshaw v. Buxton L. B. (1875), 1 Ch. D. 220; 40 J. P. 197, and Reynolds v. Presteign U. D. C., ante, p. 265.

The plaintiffs, owners of a house and area situate in and fronting a street, altered the front of the house by throwing out bay windows projecting beyond the street line of frontage, but not beyond the limits of the area. After the completion of the work the defendants, the local authority, threatened the plaintiffs with summary proceedings under the repealed s. 156. The plaintiffs then moved ex parte for an injunction to restrain the defendants from taking these proceedings, alleging—(1) that as the alteration had been made over their own property, the defendants in threatening proceedings were acting ultra vires; (2) that the defendants, having had notice of the plaintiffs' intention to make the alterations, were bound by acquiescence; and (3) that the justices had no jurisdiction, as the defendants had not made their complaint within six months. The motion was refused on the ground that the court could not restrain criminal proceedings, and that the grounds suggested for interference were matters of defence to be used before the magistrates (Kerr v. Preston Corporation (1876), 6 Ch. D. 463).

The legislature having provided by the text a particular mode of proceeding in case of offence, the court will be very slow to exercise its jurisdiction (if it has any) to restrain the local authority from pursuing the statutory remedy, or to make a declaration inconsistent with the right to pursue such remedy, unless it is proved that any trespass is threatened or intended by the local authority (Grand Junction Waterworks v. Hampton U. D. C., [1898] 2 Ch. 331; 62 J. P. 566; followed in Williams v. Weston-super-Mare U. D. C. (No. 2) (1910), 74 J. P. 370; 103 L. T. 9; and Merrick v. Liverpool Corporation, [1910] 2 Ch. 449; 74 J. P. 445; and cf. Dyson v. Att.-Gen., [1912] 1 Ch. 158).

The words of this paragraph are similar to those of the repealed s. 156. It was held, with reference to that section, that an offence to which the penalty was applicable continued as long as the addition to the house was maintained after written notice from the urban authority, notwithstanding that the addition was completed before the notice was given (Rumball v. Schmidt (1882), 8 Q. B. D. 603; 46 J. P. 567). It has also been held that under s. 3, supra, a penalty may be imposed time after time if the offence is continued (see Att.-Gen. v. Wimbledon House Estate Co., infra).

The penalty will be recoverable summarily under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 251, ante, p. 551.

The notice will be given and authenticated as provided by ss. 266 and 267 of the last-mentioned Act.

A person purchased a house from a builder who had in building it committed an offence under s. 3. It was held that the purchaser did not commit an offence against the section by maintaining the house after notice from the urban authority in the same state as it was in at the time he bought it (Blackpool Corporation v. Johnson, [1902] 1 K. B. 646).

The offence prohibited by the section is one compound offence, consisting of building without consent, and continuing after notice, for which a penalty is imposed to be exacted by the urban authority. Therefore, a private individual has no cause of action against a neighbour who erects a building in advance of the building line (Mullis v. Hubbard, ante, p. 790). Nor will an indictment lie (ibid.). A summary remedy is not, however, the only remedy available. Defendants commenced to erect a building contrary to the provisions of s. 3, and, after due notice, were summoned by the urban authority and fined. The defendants paid the fine and continued, and threatened to complete, the erection of the building. The Attorney-General, at the relation of the urban authority, moved for a mandatory injunction to compel the pulling down of so much of the building as infringed the statute. The defendants objected to the action on the double ground that the only remedy was the one given by statute, that if there was a double remedy by proceedings before the justices and an injunction, only one could be adopted, and further, that there had been laches. It was held that it was lawful for the Attorney-General to take action, although there was also a statutory remedy; that as the offence was a continuing one, the Attorney-General could sue for an injunction, although proceedings had been taken before the justices; that, in fact, there had been no laches, and, there having been a breach of the statute, a mandatory injunction must be granted (Att.-Gen. v. Wimbledon House Estate Co., [1904] 2 Ch. 34; 68 J. P. 341).

THE PUBLIC BODIES CORRUPT PRACTICES ACT, 1889.

(52 & 53 VICT. c. 69 (z).)

An Act for the more effectual Prevention and Punishment of Bribery and Corruption of and by Members, Officers, or Servants of Corporations, Councils, Boards, Commissions, or other Public Bodies.

Whereas it is expedient more effectually to provide for the prevention and punishment of bribery and corruption of and by members, officers, or servants of corporations, councils, boards, commissions, and other public bodies:

(z) This Act with the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, and the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1916, are to be cited together as the Prevention of Corruption Acts, 1889 to 1916.

1.—(1) Every person who shall by himself or by or in conjunction with any other person, corruptly solicit or receive, or agree to receive (a), for himself, or for any other person, any gift, loan, fee, reward, or advantage (b) whatever as an inducement to, or reward for, or otherwise on account of any member, officer, or servant of a public body as in this Act defined (b), doing or forbearing to do anything in respect of any matter or transaction whatsoever, actual or proposed, in which the said public body is concerned, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor (c). Section 1. Corruption in office a misdemeanor.

(a) This sub-section applies to the person bribed or corrupted; the next deals with the person bribing. It was held not necessary on an indictment under this sub-section to prove that the accused was himself a member, officer, or servant of a public body as defined by the Act, the alleged offence being an attempt to obtain a sum of money for abstaining, or inducing other persons to abstain, from giving evidence on an application to the London County Council for a music and dancing licence (R. v. Edwards (1895), 59 J. P. 88).

(c) This misdemeanour may be tried on indictment at quarter sessions (s. 6). The penalty is prescribed by s. 2.

Reference should also be made to the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, post, which provides for the punishment of corrupt transactions with "agents," a term which includes persons serving under any corporation or any borough, county, or district council or any board of guardians.

It should be mentioned that it is a misdemeanour at common law for a public officer, whether judicial or ministerial, to accept a bribe as an inducement to him to show favour or forbear to show disfavour to any person towards whom the impartial discharge of the officer's duty demands that he should show no favour or that he should show disfavour. It is also a misdemeanour at common law for such an officer to conspire with others that he shall receive such a bribe (R. v. Whitaker, [1914] 3 K. B. 1283; 79 J. P. 28.

(2) Every person (a) who shall by himself or by or in conjunction with any other person corruptly give, promise, or offer any gift, loan, fee, reward, or advantage (b) whatsoever to any person, whether for the benefit of that person or of another person, as an inducement to or reward for or otherwise on account of any member, officer, or servant of any public body as in this Act defined (b), doing or forbearing to do anything in respect of any matter or transaction whatsoever, actual or proposed, in which such public body as aforesaid is concerned, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor (c).

(a) The word "person" includes a body of persons, such as a firm or joint stock company. See s. 7.

(c) See note (c) to the preceding sub-section.

2. Any person on conviction for offending as aforesaid shall, at the discretion of the court before which he is convicted (a)— Penalty for offences.

(a) be liable to be imprisoned for any period not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or to pay a fine not exceeding five hundred pounds, or to both such imprisonment and such fine (b); and

(b) in addition, be liable to be ordered to pay to such body (c), and in such manner as the court directs, the amount or value of any gift, loan, fee, or reward received by him or any part thereof; and

Section 2.

(c) be liable to be adjudged incapable of being elected or appointed to any public office (d) for seven years from the date of his conviction, and to forfeit any such office held by him at the time of his conviction; and

(d) in the event of a second conviction for a like offence he shall, in addition to the foregoing penalties, be liable to be adjudged to be for ever incapable of holding any public office (d), and to be incapable for seven years of being registered as an elector, or voting at an election either of members to serve in Parliament or of members of any public body, and the enactments for preventing the voting and registration of persons declared by reason of corrupt practices to be incapable of voting shall apply to a person adjudged in pursuance of this section to be incapable of voting (e); and

(e) if such person is an officer or servant in the employ of any public body upon such conviction (f) he shall, at the discretion of the court, be liable to forfeit his right and claim to any compensation or pension to which he would otherwise have been entitled.

(a) The court will be either the court of quarter sessions (see s. 6), or the assizes, or Central Criminal Court. The offence is not punishable summarily.

(b) A person convicted on indictment for a misdemeanor under this Act shall, where the matter or transaction in relation to which the offence was committed was a contract or proposal for a contract with His Majesty or any government department or any public body, or a sub-contract to execute any work comprised in such a contract, be liable to penal servitude for a term not exceeding three years: provided that nothing in the section in recital shall prevent the infliction in addition to penal servitude of such punishment as under the above section may be inflicted in addition to imprisonment, or prevent the infliction in lieu of penal servitude of any punishment which may be inflicted under the section or under the Act of 1906 already mentioned in the note to the preamble. See the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1916, 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 64, s. 1, post.

(c) That is, the public body, as defined by s. 7, of which he is a member, an officer, or a servant.

(e) By the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, s. 37, every person who, in consequence of conviction, or of the report of an election court under that Act, or the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, Part IV., or under any other Act for the time being in force, relating to corrupt practices at an election for any public office, has become incapable of voting at any election, whether a parliamentary election or an election to any public office, is prohibited from voting at any such election, and his vote shall be void. By s. 39, the registration officer (i.e., the clerk of the county council or town clerk) in every county and borough is required annually to make out a list of persons disqualified to vote by reason of corrupt practices. By the Representation of the People Act, 1918, 8 Geo. 5, c. 64, Sched. I., r. 8, he is required to publish such list. By the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, s. 24, the town clerk of every municipal borough is required annually, in July, to make out a list of persons disqualified by corrupt practices to vote at a municipal election in the borough, and to send a copy to the overseers of every parish in the borough, and the overseers must omit the names of the persons named therein from the burgess list. It seems to follow from the text that the lists prepared by clerks of the peace and town clerks under these enactments must include the names of all persons convicted under this Act.

(f) This consequence will apparently follow, whether the conviction is for a first or a subsequent conviction.

3.—(1) Where an offence under this Act is also punishable under any other enactment, or at common law, such offence may be prosecuted and punished either under this Act, or under the other enactment, or at common law, but so that no person shall be punished twice for the same offence. Section 3. Savings.

Repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1908. See the Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 33.

It appears from Com. Dig. "Officer (N.)," that all officers, whether such by the common law, or made pursuant to statute, are punishable for corruption or oppressive proceedings, according to the nature and heinousness of the offence, either by indictment, attachment, action at the suit of the party injured, loss of their offices, etc. It is also stated that bribery of an officer is punishable at common law by fine and imprisonment. It is unlikely, however, that any offence within the terms of this Act will be dealt with otherwise than as herein provided.

See also the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, referred to in the note to s. 1 (1), ante, p. 795.

(2) A person shall not be exempt from punishment under this Act by reason of the invalidity of the appointment or election of a person to a public office.

In other words, the Act applies to the corrupt acts of members, officers, or servants who are such de facto, though the validity of their election or appointment may be open to question.

4.—(1) A prosecution for an offence under this Act shall not be instituted except by or with the consent of the Attorney-General. Restriction on prosecution.

It is entirely in the discretion of the Attorney-General to grant or refuse his consent (see Ex parte Hurter (1883), 47 J. P. 724; 15 Cox, C. C. 166).

(2) In this section the expression "Attorney-General" means the Attorney or Solicitor General for England, and as respects Scotland means the Lord Advocate, and as respects Ireland, means the Attorney or Solicitor General for Ireland.

5. The expenses of the prosecution of an offence against this Act shall be defrayed in like manner as in the case of a felony. Expenses of prosecution.

See now the Costs in Criminal Cases Act, 1908, which repealed this section.

6. A court of general or quarter sessions shall in England have jurisdiction to inquire of, hear, and determine an offence under this Act. Jurisdiction of quarter sessions.

It seems doubtful whether any such provision was necessary to give jurisdiction to quarter sessions. The general rule with regard to indictable offences newly created by statute, is that quarter sessions have jurisdiction unless it is otherwise expressly provided (Archbold's Quarter Sessions, 6th ed., p. 462; Com. Dig. Justices of Peace, B. (3); and see R. v. Cock (1815), 4 M. & S. 71). It should be observed, however, that quarter sessions have no jurisdiction with regard to offences under the Act of 1906. See s. 2 (5) of that Act, post.

7. In this Act— Interpretation.

The expression "public body" means any council of a county or county of a city or town, any council of a municipal borough, also any board, commissioners, select vestry, or other body which has power to act under and for the purposes of any Act relating to local government, or the public health, or to poor law or otherwise to administer money raised by rates in pursuance of any public general Act, but does not include any public body as above defined existing elsewhere than in the United Kingdom (a):

Section 7.

The expression " public office " means any office or employment of a person as a member, officer, or servant of such public body:

The expression " person " includes a body of persons, corporate or unincorporate:

The expression " advantage " includes any office or dignity, and any forbearance to demand any money or money's worth or valuable thing, and includes any aid, vote, consent, or influence, or pretended aid, vote, consent, or influence, and also includes any promise or procurement of or agreement or endeavour to procure, or the holding out of any expectation of any gift, loan, fee, reward, or advantage, as before defined.

(a) This definition includes all sanitary authorities, urban and rural. The Act of 1916, s. 4 (2), post, provides that the expression " public body " shall include, in addition to the bodies mentioned in the above section, local and public authorities of all descriptions.

THE INFECTIOUS DISEASE (NOTIFICATION) ACT, 1889.

An Act to provide for the Notification of Infectious Disease to Local Authorities. [30th August 1889.]

Short title.

1. This Act may be cited as the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889.

Extent of Act.

2. This Act shall extend—

. . . . . .

(b) To any urban, rural, or port sanitary district after the adoption thereof.

This section has been repealed in so far as it relates to London, and re-enacted by the P. H. (London) A., 1891.

The words in italics in clause (b) were repealed by the Infectious Disease (Notification) Extension Act, 1899, post, p. 1008, by which this Act was extended to every urban, rural, and port sanitary district in England and Wales, whether therein previously adopted or not.

Notification of infectious disease.

3.—(1) Where an inmate of any building (a) used for human habitation within a district to which this Act extends is suffering from an infectious disease to which this Act applies (b), then, unless such building is a hospital in which persons suffering from an infectious disease are received, the following provisions shall have effect, that is to say:

(a) The head of the family to which such inmate (in this Act referred to as the patient) belongs, and in his default the nearest relatives of the patient present in the building or being in attendance on the patient, and in default of such relatives every person in charge of or in attendance on the patient, and in default of any such person the occupier of the building (c) shall, as soon as he becomes aware that the patient is suffering from an infectious disease to which this Act applies, send notice thereof to the medical officer of health of the district (d) :

(b) Every medical practitioner attending on or called in to visit the patient shall forthwith, on becoming aware that the patient is suffering from an infectious disease to which this Act applies, send to the medical officer of health for the district a certificate (e) stating the name of the patient, the situation of the building, and the infectious disease from which, in the opinion of such medical practitioner, the patient is suffering.

(2) Every person required by this section to give a notice or certificate who fails to give the same, shall be liable on summary conviction in manner provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts to a fine not exceeding forty shillings ;

Provided that if a person is not required to give notice in the first instance, but only in default of some other person, he shall not be liable to any fine if he satisfies the court that he had reasonable cause to suppose that the notice had been duly given (f).

Forms for use under this Act will be found in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. X., at p. 393.

Further provision as to the notification of infectious diseases has been made by the P. H. A., 1907, Part IV., post, p. 1053. Section 54 imposes upon dairymen the duty of notifying infectious diseases existing among their servants; and s. 64 imposes upon the owners or drivers of public vehicles the duty of notifying that they have conveyed infected persons. These sections will, however, only be operative if declared by the L. G. B. or the Ministry of Health to be in force in the district, and will only apply subject to such conditions or adaptations as may be specified in the Order of the Board or Ministry.

(a) The word "building" includes ships, vessels, boats, tents, vans, sheds, or similar structures used for human habitation (see s. 13, post, p. 804).

(b) The diseases to which the Act applies are enumerated in s. 6; but it may be extended to certain other diseases under s. 7.

(c) The persons upon whom the obligation is laid are—(1) the head of the family ; (2) the nearest relative in the building or in attendance on the patient; (3) the person in charge of the patient; and (4) the occupier of the building. (As to the definition of occupier, see s. 16.) A notice by one of these persons avails for all enumerated later in the foregoing list, but apparently not for any enumerated earlier (see sub-s. (2)). Thus, a notice given by the head of the family renders it unnecessary for the relatives to give a notice. But a notice given by the relatives does not free the head of the family from the consequences of himself failing to give the notice. As to the manner in which notices may be sent, see s. 8.

(d) There is no provision here, as in s. 4 (3), for the case where there are two or more medical officers.

The L. G. B. have stated that they consider it to be both unnecessary and undesirable that a medical officer of health should, in general, make a personal examination of cases of infectious disease notified to him under the provisions of the Act in order to test the accuracy of the certificates. They also point out that if in any special case, as where the disease which has been notified is one which would threathen unusual danger to the community, or where the attendant circumstances might call for exceptional action, the medical officer of health, in order to be better able to advise his council, deems it desirable that he should make a personal examination of the patient, it must be remembered that this can only be done with the consent of the patient, and that in any circumstances the medical practitioner in attendance on the case should always be communicated with, and his co-operation secured if possible.

(e) As to the form of the certificate, see s. 4; as to the manner in which the certificate may be sent, see s. 8.

In reply to an inquiry the L. G. B. stated that they were advised that if more than one medical practitioner is attending on or called in to visit the patient, each practitioner is bound to send a certificate, and is entitled to the prescribed fee.

With regard to the question of requiring medical practitioners to state the ages of the patients whom they notify to the medical officer of health as suffering from infectious disease, the L. G. B. have stated that the certificates of notification must be strictly in the form prescribed by the Order of September 12th, 1889, but that the Board see no objection to the addition to the form of a footnote requesting certifying practitioners to give further particulars, such as the age of the sufferer or the name of the school which is attended by a child. The Board, however, added that it must be made clear on the face of the form that the supply of this information is optional.

Inquiry was made of the Board as to whether a medical practitioner is entitled to be paid a fee by a district council in respect of his notification of a case as one of diphtheria which, as the result of a bacteriological examination, is stated to be not of that disease. In reply, the Board stated that it appeared to them that the certificate should be paid for unless, in view of the results of the bacteriological examination, the notification is withdrawn by the medical practitioner who gave it. The Board at the same time, without expressing an opinion upon the nature of any particular case, stated generally that they did not consider that the careful clinical observations of a medical practitioner in charge of a case should be set aside without his consent solely on the ground of a negative result yielded by a single bacteriological examination.

Where a medical officer does not become aware that a person has been suffering from infectious disease until after death has taken place, he is not required to notify such a case under this Act, and cannot be paid a fee for such notification.

(f) See note (c), supra.

As to forms and case of several medical practitioners.

4.—(1) The Local Government Board may from time to time prescribe forms for the purpose of certificates under this Act, and any forms so prescribed shall be used in all cases to which they apply (a).

(2) The local authority shall gratuitously supply forms of certificate to any medical practitioner residing or practising in their district who applies for the same, and shall pay to every medical practitioner for each certificate duly sent by him in accordance with this Act a fee of two shillings and sixpence if the case occurs in his private practice, and of one shilling if the case occurs in his practice as medical officer of any public body or institution (b).

(3) Where in any district of a local authority there are two or more medical officers of health of such authority a certificate under this Act shall be given to such one of those officers as has charge of the area in which is the patient referred to in the certificate, or to such other of those officers as the local authority may from time to time direct.

(a) A form has been prescribed: see Order of the L. G. B., dated September 12th 1889, in App. II., post, Vol. II. See also notes to previous section.

(b) Questions have arisen as to what constitutes a public body or institution. The expression, no doubt, includes a public hospital or infirmary, and a workhouse, but not it is submitted, a private hospital to which patients are admitted for payment, nor a medical club or provident dispensary.

An urban council sought the opinion of the L. G. B. as to their power to require medical practitioners to render to them statements of the fees payable in respect of notifications of cases of infectious disease under the Act. The Board, in reply, pointed out that the Act requires the council to pay "for each certificate duly sent," and stated that they are not aware of any legal obligation resting upon practitioners to send to the council a statement of fees apart from the certificates themselves. The Board added that they thought that where such a statement is required by the council, no trouble is saved to them or to their officers, since it would have to be checked by comparison with the certificates actually received.

Note to Section 4.

The Local Government (Emergency Provisions) Act, 1916, 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 12, s. 5, reduced the fee payable to the medical practitioner to one shilling. It also provided for the notification of disease occurring in any building, tent, van, or similar structure in the occupation of H.M. Forces, etc., and for the payment of one shilling for each such notification. But s. 24 provides that the Act shall be in force only during the continuance of the war and for such period or periods not exceeding one year as the L. G. B. (or Ministry of Health) may fix.

5. [Adoption of Act in urban or rural district.]

6. In this Act the expression "infectious disease to which this Act applies" means any of the following diseases, namely, small pox, cholera (a), diphtheria, membranous croup, erysipelas, the disease known as scarlatina or scarlet fever, and the fevers known by any of the following names, typhus, typhoid, enteric, relapsing, continued, or puerperal, and includes as respects any particular district any infectious disease to which this Act has been applied by the local authority of the district in manner provided by this Act (b).

Definition of "infectious disease."

(a) With reference to this disease the L. G. B. have stated that they are not empowered to authoritatively interpret the word. Where a certificate notifying a case is received by the medical officer of health it is to be assumed that the case is one for investigation. The addition of the qualification "English" does not remove the case from the list of diseases properly notifiable and would not in itself be a sufficient ground for withholding the usual fee. In this connection regard should be had to the age of the patient, to the severity and character of the symptoms, and the tendency to rapidly fatal result.

Regulations have been made under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 130, and the P. H. A., 1896, with reference to the notification of other diseases. The regulations in force will be found in Appendix II.

(b) The manner provided by this Act is stated in the next section.

7.—(1) The local authority of any district to which this Act extends may, from time to time, by a resolution passed at a meeting of such authority where the like special notice of the meeting and of the intention to propose the resolution has been given as is required in the case of a meeting held for adopting this Act (a), order that this Act shall apply in their district to any infectious disease other than a disease specifically mentioned in this Act (b).

Power to local authority to extend definition of "infectious disease."

Forms for use under this section will be found in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. X., at pp. 394—399. See also a Memorandum of the L. G. B., dated Dec. 12th, 1911, as to the procedure to be followed.

(a) The special notice formerly required by s. 5 in the case of a meeting held for adopting this Act was a notice given to every member of the local authority fourteen clear days at least before the meeting. Such notice was to be deemed to have been duly given if it was either (a) given in the mode in which notices to attend meetings of the local authority are usually given; or (b) where there is no such mode, then signed by the clerk of the local authority and delivered to the member or left at his usual or last known place of abode in England, or forwarded by post in a prepaid letter addressed to the member at his usual or last known place of abode in England. But see sub-s. (6), infra, as to cases of emergency.

(b) This provision enables a local authority to include in the definition of infectious disease a disease not mentioned in s. 6, such as measles. This has been done in some cases of epidemic. The order must be confirmed by the L. G. B. or Ministry of Health.

Note to Section 7.

See sub-s. (3), infra. In some districts cerebro-spinal fever, acute poliomyelitis, and ophthalmia neonatorum were made notifiable under this section.

The L. G. B. have refused to extend the provisions of the Act to cases of cancer. They state that until more is known than at present of the etiology of that disease nothing can be attempted in the way of measures of prevention with any prospect of success sufficient to counterbalance the grave inconveniences which the compulsory notification of the disease would entail.

(2) Any such order may be permanent or temporary, and, if temporary, the period during which it is to continue in force shall be specified therein, and any such order may be revoked or varied by the local authority which made the same.

(3) An order under this section and the revocation and variation of any such order shall not be of any validity until approved by the Local Government Board.

To this general statement there is an important exception, viz., in cases of emergency. See sub-s. (6), infra.

(4) When it is so approved, the local authority shall give public notice thereof by advertisement in a local newspaper and by handbills, and otherwise in such manner as the local authority think sufficient for giving information to all persons interested. They shall also send a copy thereof to each registered medical practitioner whom, after due inquiry, they ascertain to be residing or practising in their district.

The authority have a duty cast upon them to ascertain the names of all medical practitioners in their district, whether practising or only residing there. The names of those practising will be readily ascertained from the notices sent in by them under the Act; but this hardly applies to medical men residing but not practising in the district.

(5) The said order shall come into operation at such date not earlier than one week after the publication of the first advertisement of the approved order as the local authority may fix, and upon such order coming into operation, and during the continuance thereof, an infectious disease mentioned in such order shall, within the district of the authority be an infectious disease to which this Act applies.

And notices of this disease must be given under this Act as in the case of one of the diseases specified in s. 6, ante, p. 801.

(6) In the case of emergency three clear days' notice under this section (a) shall be sufficient, and the resolution shall declare the cause of such emergency and shall be for a temporary order, and a copy thereof shall be forthwith sent to the Local Government Board and advertised (b), and the order shall come into operation at the expiration of one week from the date of such advertisement, but unless approved by the Local Government Board shall cease to be in force at the expiration of one month after it is passed, or any earlier date fixed by the Local Government Board.

(a) Instead of a fourteen clear days' notice such as is required under s. 7 (1), three clear days' notice of the meeting and of the intention to propose the resolution will be sufficient, but the resolution must declare the cause of the emergency, such as the outbreak or extent of an epidemic of measles, etc.

(b) The approval of the L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health) is not required except as afterwards provided in the sub-section. The advertisement must be forthwith, not after approval, as in the ordinary case under sub-s. (4). Note to Section 7.

(7) The approval of the Local Government Board shall be conclusive evidence that the case was one of emergency.

This approval of the L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health) is not absolutely necessary except for the purpose of keeping the order in force after a month. But if such approval is given, the order will remain in force, and the fact of emergency cannot be disputed in any way.

Notices and certificates.

8.—(1) A notice or certificate for the purposes of this Act shall be in writing or print, or partly in writing and partly in print; and for the purposes of this Act the expression "print" includes any mechanical mode of reproducing words.

See also s. 20 of the Interpretation Act, 1889, and note that although that Act was passed on the same day as this Act, it did not come into operation until January 1st, 1890. See s. 42. See also notes to ss. 3, 4.

(2) A notice or certificate to be sent to a medical officer of health in pursuance of this Act may be sent by being delivered to the officer or being left at his office or residence, or may be sent by post addressed to him at his office or at his residence.

This refers to the notices given by private persons and the certificate sent by medical practitioners under s. 3. If the notice is sent by post the letter need not be registered, but it may be prudent to register the letter, in order that proof of the posting may be forthcoming if required (see the Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 26).

Expenses.

9. Any expenses incurred by a local authority in the execution of this Act shall be paid as part of the expenses of such authority in the execution of the Acts relating to public health and in the case of a rural authority shall be general expenses.

In the case of an urban authority, the expenses will be payable out of the general district fund. In the case of a rural authority, the expenses will be paid out of the common fund of the whole district, as to which see s. 229 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 510.

10. [Repayment of expenses, etc.]

This section applied only to London, and was repealed and re-enacted by the P. H. (London) A., 1891.

Non-disqualification of medical officer by receipt of fees.

11. A payment made to any medical practitioner in pursuance of this Act shall not disqualify that practitioner for serving as member of the council of any county or borough, or as member of a sanitary authority, or as guardian of a union, or in any municipal or parochial office (a).

Where a medical practitioner attending on a patient is himself the medical officer of health of the district, he shall be entitled to the fee to which he would be entitled if he were not such medical officer.

(a) But for this provision a medical practitioner, who was a member of a sanitary authority, might have been brought within the provisions which forbid a member of such authority to accept or hold any office or place of profit under it, or to be concerned

Note to Section 11. in any contract with it. See, for example, the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 12, and the L. G. A., 1894, s. 46.

12. [Application of Act to Woolwich.]

Repealed and re-enacted by the P. H. (London) A., 1891.

Application of Act to vessels, tents, etc.

13.—(1) The provisions of this Act shall apply to every ship, vessel, boat, tent, van, shed, or similar structure used for human habitation, in like manner as nearly as may be as if it were a building (a).

(2) A ship, vessel, or boat, lying in any river, harbour, or other water not within the district of any local authority within the meaning of this Act shall be deemed for the purposes of this Act to be within the district of such local authority as may be fixed by the Local Government Board, and where no local authority has been fixed, then of the local authority of the district which nearest adjoins the place where such ship, vessel, or boat is lying (b).

(a) See, however, s. 15, infra, which exempts Crown ships and buildings; and see sub-s. (3), infra.

(b) The words of this sub-section are very similar to those of the P. H. A., 1875, s. 110, ante, p. 210. It seems doubtful whether they apply to a ship on the sea.

(3) This section shall not apply to any ship, vessel, or boat belonging to any foreign government.

Saving for local Act.

14. Where this Act is put in force in any district in which there is a local Act for the like purpose as this Act, the enactments of such local Act, so far as they relate to that purpose, shall cease to be in operation.

Notwithstanding this section, it was on the extension of this Act by the Infectious Disease (Notification) Extension Act, 1899, post, p. 1008, specially provided by s. 2 of that Act that nothing in it should be construed to repeal, alter, or affect the provisions of any local Act which immediately before its passing was in force within the county borough of Huddersfield. But subject to that saving all local Acts for the like purpose may now be regarded as superseded.

Exemption of Crown buildings.

15. Nothing in this Act shall extend to any building, ship, vessel, boat, tent, van, shed, or similar structure belonging to her Majesty the Queen, or to any inmate thereof.

As to the application of the Act to ships, tents, etc., see s. 13, supra.

Definitions.

16. In this Act—

The expression "local authority" means each of the following authorities; that is to say,—

. . . . . .

(c) An urban or rural sanitary authority in England within the meaning of the Public Health Acts; and

(d) The port sanitary authority of any port sanitary district in England (a).

The expression "urban or rural district" means the district for which any such urban or rural sanitary authority is elected:

The expression "port sanitary district" means the port sanitary district of London (b) and any port or part of a port for which a port sanitary authority has been constituted under the Public Health Acts, and any such port sanitary district shall form no part, for the purposes of this Act, of any urban or rural district:

The expression "occupier" includes a person having the charge, management, or control of a building (c), or of the part of a building in which the patient is, and in the case of a house the whole of which is let out (d) in separate tenements, or in the case of a lodging-house the whole of which is let (d) to lodgers, the person receiving the rent payable by the tenants or lodgers either as [sic] his own account or as the agent of another person (e), and in the case of a ship, vessel, or boat, the master or other person in charge thereof.

The portions of this section which related to London have been repealed (with the exception of the reference to the port of London) by the P. H. (London) A., 1891. It is set out above in so far as it is still in force.

(a) As to the constitution of port sanitary districts, see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 287, ante, p. 622.

(b) See now, as to the port sanitary district of London, the P. H. (London) A., 1891, s. 111, which re-enacts s. 291 of the P. H. A., 1875, now repealed.

(c) As to what is included in the term "building," see s. 13, supra.

(d) Semble, the expression "the whole of which is let" means "the whole of which is ordinarily let" (whether any part may happen at the moment to be vacant or not). In such cases the owner or his agent is deemed to be the occupier of the whole; where, however, an owner is only in the habit of letting part, then the tenant or lodger occupying such part is the occupier thereof.

(e) As to rent collectors, receivers, etc., see cases on p. 14, ante.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (RATING OF ORCHARDS) ACT, 1890.

An Act to amend the Laws relating to the Rating of Orchards for Sanitary Purposes. [25th July 1890.]

Whereas it is enacted by section two hundred and eleven (1) (b) and section two hundred and thirty of the Public Health Act, 1875, that "the occupier of any land used as arable, meadow, or pasture ground only, or as woodlands, market gardens, or nursery grounds," shall be assessed to the general district rate in an urban district or to a separate rate levied in respect of special expenses within the meaning of the said Act in a rural district, in the proportion of one-fourth part only of the net annual value or rateable value of such land:

And whereas doubts have arisen whether orchards are or are not included among the lands to which the aforesaid exemptions apply:

Section 1.

And whereas it is expedient to remove such doubts, and to render the practice of assessment uniform, and to relieve orchards from all liability to be assessed for sanitary purposes at a higher rate than other cultivated lands:

Amendment of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 211 (1) (b) and s. 230.

1. From and after the first day of October one thousand eight hundred and ninety section two hundred and eleven, sub-section one (a), and section two hundred and thirty (a) of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall be read and construed as if the word "orchards" was inserted in each of those sections after the word "woodlands." Provided that nothing in this Act shall apply to any rate made under either of the said sections on or before the first day of October one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Italicised words repealed by S. L. R. A., 1908.

(a) The P. H. A., 1875, s. 211, ante, p. 478, is the section which deals with the assessment and levying of general district rates by urban authorities. It provides that such rates shall be made and levied on the occupier of all kinds of property for the time being by law assessable to any rate for the relief of the poor, and shall be assessed on the full net annual value of such property ascertained by the valuation list for the time being in force: but this general provision is subject to certain exceptions, one of which (sub-s. (1) (b)) is as follows: The owner of any tithes, or of any tithe commutation rent-charge, or the occupier of any land used as arable meadow or pasture ground only, or as woodlands, market gardens or nursery grounds, and the occupier of any land covered with water, or used only as a canal or towing path for the same, or as a railway constructed under the powers of any Act of Parliament for public conveyance, shall be assessed in respect of the same in the proportion of one-fourth part only of such net annual value thereof.

The P. H. A., 1875, s. 230, ante, p. 514, provides for the mode in which a rural authority are to raise contributions from the several parishes and contributory places within their district. Precepts are issued to the overseers requiring them to pay so much for general expenses chargeable equally on the whole district, and so much for special expenses chargeable only upon one or more contributory places. The section goes on to provide as follows: The overseers shall comply with the requisitions of such precept by paying the contribution required in respect of general expenses out of the poor rate of their respective parishes, and with respect to special expenses by raising the contribution required by the levy (in the case of an entire parish on the whole of such parish, and in the case of a contributory place or part of a contributory place forming part of a parish, by the levy on such place, or such part thereof, exclusive of the rest of the parish) of a separate rate in the same manner as if it were a rate for the relief of the poor, with this exception: (namely,) That the owner of any tithes, or of any tithe commutation rent-charge, or the occupier of any land used as arable meadow or pasture ground only, or as woodlands, market gardens or nursery grounds, and the occupier of any land covered with water, or used as a canal or towing path for the same, or as a railway constructed under the powers of any Act of Parliament for public conveyance, shall, where a special assessment is made for the purpose of such rate, be assessed in respect of one-fourth part only of the rateable value thereof, or where no special assessment is made, shall pay in respect of the said property one-fourth part only of the rate in the pound payable in respect of houses and other property.

The present Act has simply the effect of inserting the word "orchards" after "woodlands" in these two sections.

2. This Act may be cited as the Public Health (Rating of Orchards) Act, 1890.

THE INFECTIOUS DISEASE (PREVENTION) ACT, 1890.

An Act to prevent the spread of Infectious Disease. [4th August 1890.]

1. This Act may be cited as the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890. Short title.

2. Expressions used in this Act shall, unless the context otherwise requires, have the same meaning as the like expressions used in the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889 (a); and the provisions of this Act shall apply to the infectious diseases specifically mentioned in that Act (b), and may be applied to any other infectious disease in the same manner as that Act may be applied to such disease (c). Definitions.

In this Act—

"Dairy" shall include any farm, farmhouse, cowshed, milk-store, milk-shop, or other place from which milk is supplied, or in which milk is kept for purposes of sale (d):

"Dairyman" shall include any cowkeeper, purveyor of milk, or occupier of a dairy:

"Medical officer of health" shall include any person duly authorised to act temporarily as medical officer of health (d):

. . . . . .

(a) See that Act, ante, p. 798. Section 13 extends the definition of "a building" to shops, vessels, boats, tents, vans, etc., used for human habitation. Section 16 is the interpretation clause.

(b) These are small-pox, cholera, diphtheria, membranous croup, erysipelas, the diseases known as scarlatina or scarlet fever, and the fevers known by any of the following names: Typhus, typhoid, enteric, relapsing, continued, or puerperal.

(c) As to the application of that Act to other diseases, see s. 7, ante, p. 801.

(d) See now the definitions in s. 19 of the Milk and Dairies (Consolidation) Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 66, post. See note on p. 734). The rest of this section applied to Woolwich, and is now repealed by the P. H. (London) A., 1891.

3. The provisions of this Act shall extend (a)— Extent of Act.

(b) To any urban or rural sanitary district after the adoption thereof; and the local authority of any urban or rural sanitary district may adopt all or any of the sections of this Act (b) by a resolution passed at a meeting of such authority. Fourteen clear days at least (c) before such meeting special notice of the meeting, and of the intention to propose such resolution (d), shall be given to every member of the local authority, and the notice shall be deemed to have been duly given to a member if it is either—

(a) given in the mode in which notices to attend meetings of the local authority are usually given (e); or

(b) where there is no such mode (f), then signed by the clerk of the local authority and delivered to the member or left at his usual or last known place of abode in England, or forwarded by post in a prepaid letter addressed to the member at his usual or last known place of abode in England.

Every such resolution shall be published by advertisement in a local newspaper, and by handbills, and otherwise in such manner as the local authority think sufficient for giving notice thereof to all persons interested, and shall come into operation at such time, not less than one month after the first publication of the advertisement of the resolution, as the local authority may fix; and upon its coming into operation such of the sections of this Act as are mentioned in such resolution shall extend to the district.

A copy of the resolution shall be sent to the Local Government Board when it is published.

A copy of the advertisement shall be conclusive evidence of the resolution having been passed, unless the contrary be shown; and no objection to the effect of the resolution, on the ground that notice of the intention to propose the same was not duly given, or on the ground that the resolution was not sufficiently published, shall be made after three months from the date of the first advertisement (g).

Extensive additional powers in connection with the prevention of infectious diseases may, on the application of any local authority, be given to it by the Ministry of Health under the powers conferred by the P. H. A., 1907, Part IV., post, p. 1053.

(a) The provisions by which the Act was extended to London districts were repealed by the P. H. (London) A., 1891.

By the Public Health (Ports) Act, 1896, s. 1, post, p. 1006, the L. G. B., now the Ministry of Health, may by order assign to any port sanitary authority any powers, rights, duties, capacities, and obligations under this Act with the necessary modifications. See Order of August, 1912, referred to in the notes to that Act, p. 1006, post.

(b) The local authority need not adopt the whole of the Act. They can adopt one or more sections, if they think fit. In this respect the present enactment differs from the corresponding provisions of the P. H. A., 1890, post, p. 819.

(c) This means fourteen days exclusive of the day of giving notice and of the date of the meeting. Thus, if a meeting were to be held on the 31st, the last day upon which notice for that meeting could be given would be the 16th: see Zouch v. Empsey (1821), 4 B. & A. 522; R. v. Salop JJ. (1838), 8 A. & E. 173; 7 L. J. M. C. 56.

(d) As a resolution cannot be proposed except by a member, it might be inferred that the notice must be given by the member intending to propose it; but it is to be gathered from the rest of the section that the member is to give notice of his intention to the clerk, and the clerk is to send out the notice to the other members.

(e) Notice to attend meetings of the local authority is given in various ways. If the authority is a municipal corporation, the notice is given in the manner provided by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, Sched. II., r. 1, i.e., by summons to attend the meeting, specifying the business to be transacted, and left or delivered by post in a registered letter at the usual place of abode of every member of the council. In the case of an urban district council, other than a town council, the summoning and notice of a meeting depends upon the regulations of the council made under the P. H. A., 1875, Sched. I., r. 1, ante, p. 669, and s. 59 of the L. G. A., 1894, post, p. 974.

(f) It is difficult to suggest any case to which these words can apply.

(g) This paragraph contains a most useful provision. The words "copy of the advertisement" probably mean a copy of the newspaper containing the advertisement. It seems that the objection to the resolution mentioned in the paragraph may be raised within the three months following the first advertisement.

Inspection of dairies in certain cases:

4. In case the medical officer of health (a) is in possession of evidence that any person in the district is suffering from infectious disease (b) attributable to milk supplied within the district from any dairy (c) power to prohibit supply of milk.

situate within or without the district, or that the consumption of milk from such dairy is likely to cause infectious disease to any person residing in the district, such medical officer shall, if authorised in that behalf by an order of a justice having jurisdiction in the place where such dairy is situate (d), have power to inspect such dairy, and if accompanied by a veterinary inspector (e) or some other properly qualified veterinary surgeon (f) to inspect the animals therein, and if on such inspection the medical officer of health shall be of opinion that infectious disease is caused from consumption of the milk supplied therefrom, he shall report thereon to the local authority, and his report shall be accompanied by any report furnished to him by the said veterinary inspector or veterinary surgeon, and the local authority may thereupon give notice to the dairyman (g) to appear before them within such time, not less than twenty-four hours, as may be specified in the notice, to show cause why an order should not be made requiring him not to supply any milk therefrom within the district until such order has been withdrawn by the local authority, and if, in the opinion of the local authority, he fails to show such cause, then the local authority may make such order as aforesaid (h) ; and the local authority shall forthwith give notice of the facts to the sanitary authority and county council (if any) of the district or county in which such dairy is situate (i), and also to the Local Government Board. An order made by a local authority in pursuance of this section shall be forthwith withdrawn on the local authority or the medical officer of health on its behalf being satisfied that the milk supply has been changed, or that the cause of the infection has been removed (k). Any person refusing to permit the medical officer of health on the production of such order as aforesaid to inspect any dairy, or if so accompanied as aforesaid to inspect the animals kept there, or after any such order not to supply milk as aforesaid has been given, supplying any milk within the district in contravention of such order, or selling it for consumption therein, shall be deemed guilty of an offence against this Act (l). Provided always, that proceedings in respect of such offence shall be taken before the justices of the peace having jurisdiction in the place where the said dairy is situate (m). Provided also, that no dairyman shall be liable to an action for breach of contract if the breach be due to an order from the local authority under this Act (n).

This section is one of the enactments saved by the Milk and Dairies (Consolidation) Act, 1915, 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 66, post. But that Act gives further powers to local authorities in regard to the matters dealt with in this section.

The power of an authority over dairymen will be increased if the Ministry of Health shall declare s. 53 of the P. H. A., 1907, to be in force in their district. That section, subject to any conditions or adaptations which may be specified in the Order, will enable the authority to require dairymen to furnish lists of the sources of supply of milk. See the section, post, p. 1053, and see also s. 54 as to the notification by dairymen of infectious diseases existing among their servants, a section which will also not be operative unless applied by an Order of the L. G. B. (now the M. of H.).

(b) As to the diseases included under this term, see notes (b) and (c) to s. 2.

(c) As to the definition of dairy, see s. 2.

(d) The dairy may be in another county, and the order must in that case be made by a justice of that county.

Note to Section 4.

(e) The Diseases of Animals Acts, 1894, s. 59, provides that the expression "inspector of the Board of Agriculture" or "inspector of a local authority" means a person appointed to be an inspector for purposes of the Act, by the Privy Council, or the Board of Agriculture, or by a local authority, as the case may be; and "inspector" used alone, means such a person, by whichever authority appointed; "veterinary inspector" means an inspector being a member of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, or any veterinary practitioner qualified as approved by the Board of Agriculture. This enactment seems to explain the term used in the text. As to the remuneration of the veterinary inspector or surgeon, see s. 20, post, p. 818. It may be mentioned that the local authorities for the purposes of the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, are now, by s. 3 of that Act (i) for each borough not being a borough to which the L. G. A., 1888, s. 39, applies, the borough council; (ii) for the residue of each administrative county, the county council. But in the city of London, the corporation are the local authority.

(f) This means a person whose name is on the register of members of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons (44 & 45 Vict. c. 52): see Veterinary College v. Robinson, [1892] 1 Q. B. 557; 56 J. P. 313; Veterinary College v. Groves (1893), 57 J. P. 505.

(g) For the definition of a "dairyman," see s. 2, ante, p. 807.

(h) The order will forbid the dairyman to supply milk from the dairy within the district of the local authority until the order is withdrawn.

(i) As already pointed out, the dairy may be in another sanitary district and in another county. If it is in another district, notice must be given to the sanitary authority of that district, and, in any case, notice must be given to the county council of the county in which the dairy is situate.

(k) The change of the milk supply can only occur in the case of a seller of milk who buys the milk he sells. When there is a change in the milk supply or when the cause of the infection has been removed, the section imposes a duty on the local authority to withdraw the order forthwith.

(l) As to the penalties for these offences and their recovery, see ss. 16, 18, post, pp. 817, 818.

(m) See note (d), supra.

(n) The meaning of this proviso appears to be that if a dairyman is under a contract to supply milk within the district and he is prevented from fulfilling his contract by an order under this section, he is not to be liable to pay damages for breach of contract.

Cleansing and disinfecting of premises, etc.

5. . . . (a) Section one hundred and twenty of the Public Health Act, 1875, so far as it applies to any urban or rural sanitary district in which this section is adopted (b), shall be repealed, and the following provisions shall be in force instead thereof, viz.:

(1) Where the medical officer of health of any local authority (c), or any other registered medical practitioner (d), certifies that the cleansing and disinfecting of any house (e), or part thereof, and of any articles therein likely to retain infection, would tend to prevent or check infectious disease (f), the clerk to the local authority (g) shall give notice in writing to the owner or occupier (h) of such house or part thereof that the same and any such articles therein will be cleansed and disinfected by the local authority at the cost of such owner or occupier, unless he informs the local authority within twenty-four hours from the receipt of the notice that he will cleanse and disinfect the house or part thereof and any such articles therein to the satisfaction of the medical officer of health (i), within a time fixed in the notice (k).

This section now applies to port sanitary districts: see note to the Public Health (Ports) Act, 1896, post, p. 1006.

Note to Section 5.

The powers of a local authority in this direction may be extended if the P. H. A., 1907, s. 56 ("filthy and dangerous articles to be purified"), and s. 66 ("cleansing and disinfecting of premises, etc."), be applied to their district by an Order of the L. G. B. (now M. of H.). See that Act, post, p. 1019.

(a) The opening words of the section which applied only to London, were repealed by the P. H. (London) A., 1891, and the section is here set out only so far as it is still in force. As to London, see s. 60 of the Act of 1891.

(b) If the adoption is rescinded, s. 120 will again be in force in the district.

(c) The medical officer may be the person temporarily acting as such (see s. 2, ante, p. 807). For the definition of the local authority, see 52 & 53 Vict. c. 72, s. 16, ante, p. 804, which is applied to this Act by s. 2.

(d) See the note to 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 18, ante, p. 752.

(e) There is no provision extending the meaning of the term "house" to tents, vans, or sheds, as in 52 & 53 Vict. c. 72, s. 13. But by reason of the reference to an occupier later on in the section, an occupier being a person defined by s. 16 of that Act (see s. 2, ante, p. 807), the section may apply to a ship, the master being the occupier.

With reference to the disinfection of public elementary schools after an outbreak of infectious disease, the L. G. B. have stated that under the general law the responsibility for carrying out whatever measures of disinfection may be necessary at such schools devolves in ordinary circumstances upon the local education authority rather than the sanitary authority. In any district in which the provisions of s. 5 of the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, are in force, the district council possess statutory powers as regards disinfection, and the Board are advised that a school may properly be regarded as a "house" within the meaning of this section. The expense of the disinfection of a public elementary school provided by the local education authority seems to the Board to be legally payable by that authority. As regards non-provided schools, s. 29 of the Education Act, 1921, may be thought to impose the liability for the expense upon the local education authority; but this is a point which, in the event of a question arising in any individual instance, could be determined by the Board of Education under s. 29 (9) of the Act. Cf. Gillow v. Durham C. C., [1913] A. C. 54; 77 J. P. 105.

(f) It should be borne in mind that there are other provisions in the P. H. A., 1875, the object of which is to prevent or check infectious disease by means of the cleansing or disinfection of premises. Thus, s. 46, ante, p. 115, contains provisions for the cleansing of houses in a filthy condition, where on the certificate of any two medical practitioners it appears to the local authority that the health of any person is affected or endangered, or when such cleansing would tend to prevent or check infectious diseases; under s. 80, ante, p. 156, the local authority may make byelaws for taking precautions in the case of an infectious disease in a common lodging-house, and such byelaws may provide for cleansing and disinfection; and similar byelaws for houses let in lodgings may be made under s. 90, ante, p. 161. See also s. 52 of the P. H. A., 1907, as to an infected person not being allowed to engage in any occupation; s. 55 as to sending infected clothes to laundries; s. 57 as to the keeping from school of children who have been suffering from infectious disease or been exposed to infection; s. 58 as to furnishing list of scholars where a scholar in a school is suffering from an infectious disease; s. 59 as to the use of books from public libraries by infected persons; s. 63 as to the conveyance of infected persons in public vehicles; s. 64 as to the disinfection of public vehicles which have been exposed to infection; and s. 68 as to the holding of wakes over the bodies of persons dying of infectious disease; and see ss. 53, 54, 56, 60—62, 65, 66, and 67 of the same Act. The whole Act is set out post, p. 1019. No section will be operative until it has been applied in any district by an Order of the M. of H. See also s. 109 of the Factory and Workshops Act, 1901, in App. I., post, Vol. II., as to penalties for allowing wearing apparel to be made in a place where there is scarlet fever or small-pox, and s. 110 as to prohibition of home work in places where there is infectious disease. As to closing, or excluding particular children from, public elementary schools reference may be made to a lengthy memorandum (October, 1909) prepared by the medical officers of the L. G. B. and Board of Education.

(g) The P. H. A., 1875, s. 120, ante, p. 227, provides for the giving of the notice by the local authority. As such a notice would in any case be authenticated by the clerk's signature under s. 266, it would appear at first sight that the express reference to the clerk involved no change. In reality it involves an important change, for while the giving of the notice by the authority requires a direction by them at a meeting, the clerk must now act without reference to the authority, and without waiting for a meeting.

(h) See the definition of "occupier" in 52 & 53 Vict. c. 72, s. 16, ante, p. 805, incorporated by s. 2 of this Act.

(i) The opinion of the L. G. B. was sought as to whether a medical officer of health should, as part of his duties, inspect premises after disinfection to see that the work was properly carried out. This Act had been adopted by the urban district council, and consequently s. 120 of the P. H. A., 1875, was not in force in the district, having been superseded by s. 5 of this Act. The Board stated that it seemed to them that the provisions of s. 5 must, in the absence of any express enactment to the contrary, be construed as leaving to the medical officer of health the responsibility of determining what action on his part is necessary for satisfying himself as to the sufficiency of any particular cleansing and disinfection.

(k) Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 120, ante, p. 227, the notice required the owner or occupier to cleanse within a specified time. The text requires him to say within twenty-four hours of receipt of the notice whether or no he intends to cleanse within the specified time.

(2) If, within twenty-four hours from the receipt of the notice, the person to whom the notice is given does not inform the local authority as aforesaid, or if, having so informed the local authority, he fails to have the house or part thereof and any such articles disinfected as aforesaid within the time fixed in the notice, the house or part thereof and articles shall be cleansed and disinfected by the officers of the local authority (a) under the superintendence of the medical officer of health, and the expenses incurred may be recovered from the owner or occupier in a summary manner (b).

(a) Section 17, post, p. 818, gives a power of entry to the officers upon producing an authority in writing. Obstruction of the officers is an offence punishable under s. 16. As to the provision of temporary shelter or house accommodation for the members of a family who have been compelled to leave their dwelling, to enable it to be disinfected, see s. 15, post, p. 817.

(b) I.e., by summary proceedings before a court of summary jurisdiction. The expenses will be a civil debt within the meaning of the S. J. A., 1879, ss. 6, 35.

Inasmuch as this Act is not directed to be read as one with the Act of 1875, and as no compensation clause is contained in this Act, it would appear that if articles are unavoidably damaged whilst being disinfected under this or the next sub-section, no compensation will be payable, though there would be a right of action should damage ensue from negligence.

(3) Provided that where the owner or occupier of any such house or part thereof is unable in the opinion of the local authority, or of their medical officer of health, effectually to cleanse and disinfect such house or part thereof, and any article therein likely to retain infection, the same may without any such notice being given as aforesaid, but with the consent of such owner or occupier, be cleansed and disinfected by the officers of and at the cost of the local authority.

This proviso is very similar to that contained in s. 120 of the P. H. A., 1875. The inability to cleanse, etc., need not arise from poverty; it may arise from want of proper appliances.

As to the fund out of which the expenses of the local authority will be defrayed, see s. 20, post, p. 818.

See the note to the last sub-section as to articles damaged during disinfection.

Section 6. Disinfection of bedding, etc.

6. Any local authority (a), or the medical officer of health (b) of any local authority generally empowered by the authority in that behalf (c), may by notice in writing require the owner of any bedding, clothing, or other articles which have been exposed to the infection of any infectious disease (d) to cause the same to be delivered over to an officer of the local authority for removal for the purpose of disinfection; and any person who fails to comply with such a requirement shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds (e).

The bedding, clothing, and articles shall be disinfected by the authority, and shall be brought back and delivered to the owner free of charge, and if any of them suffer any unnecessary damage (f) the authority shall compensate the owner for the same and the amount of compensation shall be recoverable in, and in case of dispute shall be settled by, a court of summary jurisdiction (g).

This section does not on adoption, like the preceding section, repeal s. 120 of the Act of 1875; it merely modifies it.

See also ss. 56 and 66 of the P. H. A., 1907, post, pp. 1055, 1059.

(b) See s. 2, ante, p. 807.

(c) This means that if the authority give a general power to act under this section, he may give the notice without waiting for any express sanction.

(d) As to the definition of "infectious disease," see s. 2, ante, p. 807, and the notes thereto.

(e) As to the recovery of this penalty, see s. 18, post, p. 818.

(f) This expression implies that the authority are not to be liable for all damage which may be done by the removal and disinfection of the bedding, etc., but only for such damage as may have been unnecessary, i.e., such as might with reasonable care have been avoided. This section, it should be observed, does not interfere with the power of the authority to direct the destruction of bedding, etc., on payment of compensation under s. 121 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 229.

(g) For the definition of a "court of summary jurisdiction," see the Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 13 (11).

Penalty on persons ceasing to occupy houses without previous disinfection or giving notice to owner or persons making false answers.

7. (a) Every person who shall cease to occupy any house, room, or part of a house in which any person has within six weeks previously been suffering from any infectious disease (b) without having such house, room, or part of a house, and all articles therein liable to retain infection, disinfected to the satisfaction of a registered medical practitioner (c), as testified by a certificate signed by him (d), or without first giving to the owner of such house, room, or part of a house, notice of the previous existence of such disease, and every person ceasing to occupy any house, room, or part of a house, and who, on being questioned by the owner thereof, or by any person negotiating for the hire of such house, room, or part of a house, as to the fact of there having within six weeks previously been therein any person suffering from any infectious disease knowingly makes a false answer to such question shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds (e).

It should be observed that there is no implied warranty on the taking of furnished lodgings that the intended tenant is a fit and proper person to occupy them and is not suffering from an infectious disease (Humphreys v. Miller, [1917] 2 K. B. 122. And see the cases cited in the note to s. 28 of the Housing Act, 1919, post, Vol. II.

(a) Where this section of the Act is in force, the authority are required by s. 14,

Note to Section 7.

post, p. 817, to give notice of its provisions to the occupier of any house in which they are aware that there is a person suffering from an infectious disease.

(b) For the definition of "infectious disease," see s. 2, ante, p. 807, and the note thereto.

(c) The practitioner may be any registered medical man, not necessarily the medical officer of health; he will generally be the doctor who has been in attendance on the patient.

(d) The section does not provide that the practitioner must give such certificate even when so satisfied. If a certificate is refused, the outgoing tenant can only satisfy the terms of the section by giving notice to the owner. If after such notice the owner lets the house, etc., without previous disinfection, he may be liable to conviction under s. 128 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 235, if the disease was a "dangerous infectious disorder."

(e) As to the recovery of this penalty, see s. 18, post, p. 818.

Prohibiting retention of dead bodies in certain cases.

8. No person without the sanction in writing of the medical officer of health or of a registered medical practitioner, shall retain unburied elsewhere than in a public mortuary (a) or in a room not used at the time as a dwelling-place, sleeping-place, or workroom (b), for more than forty-eight hours, the body of any person who has died of any infectious disease (c).

(a) A public mortuary may be provided by a sanitary authority under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 141, and by ibid., s. 142, where the body of one who has died of an infectious disease is retained in a room in which persons live or sleep, or any dead body which is in such a state as to endanger the health of the inmates of the same house or room is retained in such house or room, any justice may, on a certificate signed by a legally qualified medical practitioner, order the body to be removed, at the cost of the local authority, to any mortuary provided by such authority, and direct the same to be buried within a time to be limited in such order, and unless the friends or relations of the deceased undertake to bury the body within the time so limited, and do bury the same, it shall be the duty of the relieving officer to bury such body at the expense of the poor rate; but any expense so incurred may be recovered by the relieving officer in a summary manner from any person legally liable to pay the expense of such burial.

A mortuary may also be provided by a burial board with the consent of the vestry under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, s. 42: see p. 250, ante.

The text applies to any public mortuary, however provided.

(b) This section will have no application where the body is not kept in a room used as a dwelling-place, sleeping-place, or workroom. It was intended to provide for cases in which the family of the deceased have no place to keep the body, except a place where they live, or sleep, or work.

(c) See the definition of "infectious disease" in s. 2, ante, p. 807. For the penalty for contravening this section and recovery thereof, see ss. 16 and 18, post, pp. 817, 818.

Where a local Act provided that "any person who being in charge of the body of any person who has died from any infectious disorder or infectious disease shall permit or allow any other person unnecessarily to come into contact with such body shall be liable to a penalty," it was held that in order to constitute an offence under the Act it was not necessary to prove that there had been actual physical contact with the dead body: it was sufficient if there was evidence that a person had been in such close proximity to the dead body as necessarily to expose such person to the risk of contagion (Kitchen v. Douglas (1916), 85 L. J. K. B. 462; 80 J. P. 47).

Bodies of persons dying of infectious diseases in hospital, etc., to be removed only for burial.

9. If any person shall die from any infectious disease (a) in any hospital or place of temporary accommodation for the sick, and the medical officer of health, or any other registered medical practitioner, certifies that in his opinion it is desirable, in order to prevent the risk of communicating any infectious disease or of spreading infection, that the body shall not be removed from such hospital or place except for the purpose of being forthwith buried, it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to remove such body from such hospital or place except for the last-mentioned purpose; and when the body is taken out of such hospital for that purpose it shall be forthwith carried or taken direct to some cemetery of place of burial, and shall be forthwith there buried; and any person wilfully offending against this section shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds (b). Nothing in this Act shall prevent the removal of any dead body from any hospital or temporary place of accommodation for the sick to any mortuary (c), and such mortuary shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed part of such hospital or place as aforesaid.

(c) See the notes to s. 8, ante, p. 814.

Justices may in certain cases order dead bodies to be buried.

10. Where the body of any person who has died from any infectious disease (a) remains unburied elsewhere than in a mortuary (b) or in a room not used at the time as a dwelling-place, sleeping-place, or work-room, for more than forty-eight hours after death without the sanction of the medical officer of health or of a registered medical practitioner, or where the dead body of any person is retained in any house or building so as to endanger the health of the inmates of such house or building, or of any adjoining or neighbouring house or building (c), any justice may, on the application of the medical officer of health, order the body to be removed at the cost of the local authority to any available mortuary, and direct the same to be buried within a time to be limited in the order; and any justice may, in the case of the body of any person who has died of any infectious disease, or in any case in which he shall consider immediate burial necessary, direct the body to be so buried. Unless the friends or relatives of the deceased undertake to bury and do bury the body within the time limited by such order, it shall be the duty of the relieving officer of the relief district from which the body has been removed to the mortuary, or in which the body shall be, if it has not been so removed, to bury such body, and any expense so incurred may be charged by the relieving officer in his accounts, and may be recovered by the board of guardians in a summary manner from any person legally liable to pay the expenses of such burial (d).

(b) See the notes to s. 8, ante, p. 814.
(c) This clause applies generally to the keeping of a dead body in any place whatsoever so as to endanger the health of the persons in the house or in adjoining or neighbouring houses; and it applies to any dead body, not merely to the body of a person who has died of an infectious disease.
(d) Compare the provisions of the P. H. A., 1875, s. 142, ante, p. 251.

The person in whose house the dead body lies is bound by common law to inter the body decently (R. v. Price (1884), 12 Q. B. D., at p. 252). On this ground it was held that the authorities of a public hospital, and not the guardians, were liable to bury a person who had died in the hospital (R. v. Stewart (1841), 10 L. J. M. C. 40; 12 A. & E. 773). An executor is liable to pay funeral expenses (Brice v. Wilson, cited in Green v. Salmon (1838), 8 A. & E. 348; Rogers v. Price (1829), 3 Y. & J. 28). A husband is liable for the expenses of burying his wife (Jenkins v. Tucker (1788),

Note to Section 10.

1 H. Bl. 91; Ambrose v. Kerrison (1851), 20 L. J. C. P. 135; 10 C. B. 776; Bradshaw v. Beard (1862), 12 C. B. (N.S.) 344; 6 L. T. 458. And see In re McMyn, Lightbown v. McMyn (1886), 33 Ch. D. 575). A parent is bound to provide for the burial of his child if he has the means, but not if he has no means, nor is he bound to apply for relief by way of loan from the guardians to enable him to do so (R. v. Vann (1851), 21 L. J. M. C. 39; 2 Den. C. C. 325).

Disinfection of public conveyances if used for carrying corpses.

11. (a) Any person who hires or uses a public conveyance (b) other than a hearse for the conveyance of the body of a person who has died from any infectious disease (c), without previously notifying to the owner or driver of such public conveyance that the person whose body is or is intended to be so conveyed has died from infectious disease, and after any such notification as aforesaid, any owner or driver of a public conveyance, other than a hearse, which has been used for conveying the body of a person who has died from infectious disease, who shall not immediately afterwards provide for the disinfection of such conveyance, shall be guilty of an offence under this Act (d).

Further obligations are imposed in respect of public vehicles in districts to which the L. G. B. or the Ministry of Health have applied the P. H. A., 1907, s. 63 ("Prohibiting conveyance of infected persons in public vehicles") or s. 64 ("Driver, etc., of infected person to give notice"). See these sections, post, p. 1058.

(b) A public conveyance means one which plies for hire, such as a hackney or stage carriage; it is not quite clear that it would include a carriage hired from an innkeeper, jobmaster, or undertaker; see, however, Hawkins v. Edwards, [1901] 2 K. B. 169; 65 J. P. 423.

(c) See the definition in s. 2, ante, p. 807.

(d) As to the penalty for the offence and its recovery, see ss. 16, 18, post, pp. 817, 818.

Detention of infected person without proper lodging in hospital by order of justice.

12. Any justice of the peace acting in and for the district of the local authority (a), upon proper cause shown to him, may make an order directing the detention in hospital at the cost of the local authority of any person suffering from any infectious disease (b), who is then in an hospital for infectious disease and would not on leaving such hospital be provided with lodging or accommodation in which proper precautions could be taken to prevent the spreading of the disorder by such person (c). Any order so to be made by any such justice may be limited to some specific time, but with full power to any justice to enlarge such time as often as may appear to him to be necessary. It shall be lawful for any officer of the local authority or inspector of police acting in the district, or for any officer of the hospital, on any such order being made to take all necessary measures and do all necessary acts for enforcing the execution thereof (d).

(a) Since the passing of the L. G. A., 1888, an urban district cannot be in two counties (see ibid., s. 50, ante, p. 767). If it is a borough having a separate commission of the peace and separate quarter sessions, it may be that the borough justices alone will have jurisdiction in the borough; if it has no separate quarter sessions, the county and borough justices will usually have concurrent jurisdiction. See the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 154, and note to the L. G. A., 1888, s. 38 (7), ante, p. 765.

It should be borne in mind that a county justice has, generally speaking, jurisdiction throughout his entire county, not merely in the division in which he resides or usually acts (see R. v. Beckley (1887), 20 Q. B. D. 187; 52 J. P. 120; Caistor R. D. C. v. Taylor (1907), 71 J. P. 310; 97 L. T. 281; R. v. Beacontree JJ., [1915] 3 K. B. 388; 79 J. P. 461).

(b) See the definition in s. 2, ante, p. 807.

Note to Section 12.

(c) Guardians have power to detain in a workhouse persons therein suffering from infectious or contagious disease under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 106, s. 22. The provision in the text applies to sick persons who are in the hospital for infectious disease.

(d) This means that the officer of the local authority, inspector of police, or hospital officer may, if necessary, forcibly detain the sick person.

Infectious rubbish thrown into ashpits, etc., to be disinfected.

13. (a) Any person who shall knowingly cast, or cause or permit to be cast, into any ashpit, ashtub, or other receptacle for the deposit of refuse matter any infectious rubbish (b) without previous disinfection, shall be guilty of an offence under this Act (c).

(a) When this section is in force notice of its provisions must be given to the occupier of any house in which there is a person suffering from infectious disease. See the next section.

(b) It is difficult to say what is infectious rubbish. It would seem to include everything which comes from the room of a person suffering from infectious disease which might, in the ordinary course, be thrown into the ashpit if the disease were not infectious, such as poultices, rags, etc.

(c) As to the penalty for this offence and its recovery, see ss. 16, 18, post, pp. 817, 818.

Notice of certain provisions.

14. Where sections seven and thirteen of this Act, or either of them, are in force in any district, the local authority shall give notice of the provisions thereof to the occupier of any house in which they are aware that there is a person suffering from an infectious disease.

An authority can conveniently fulfil this requirement by having leaflets printed stating the effect of the sections, and by delivering these to occupiers when necessary. It is submitted that an authority's neglect will not excuse an occupier for breach of s. 7 or s. 13. Cf. Duncan v. Knill (1907), 71 J. P. 287; 96 L. T. 911.

Temporary shelter, etc.

15. The local authority shall from time to time provide, free of charge, temporary shelter or house accommodation with any necessary attendants for the members of any family in which any infectious disease has appeared, who have been compelled to leave their dwellings for the purpose of enabling such dwellings to be disinfected by the local authority.

This applies to cases where a dwelling has to be disinfected under s. 5, ante, p. 810. When s. 61 of the P. H. A., 1907, has been applied to any district by the L. G. B., or the Ministry of Health, the powers of the local authority in this direction will be increased. See that section, post, p. 1057.

Penalties.

16. Every person who shall wilfully obstruct any duly authorised officer of the local authority in carrying out the provisions of this Act, or who shall obstruct the carrying out of an order made by a justice under this Act (a), or who shall offend against any enactment of this Act for the time being in force in any district by which no penalty is specifically imposed (b), shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds, and if the offence is a continuing one, to a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings a day so long as the offence continues (c).

This section and sections 17, 18, 20, infra, apply to port sanitary districts so far as they relate to powers, etc., under s. 5, ante, p. 810, assigned to port sanitary authorities by the Order referred to on p. 808, ante.

(a) A justices' order may be made under ss. 4, 10, 12.

(b) See ss. 4, 8, 11, 13.

Note to Section 16. (c) As to the recovery of penalties, see s. 18, infra. See also definition of "daily penalty" by s. 11 (3) of the P. H. A., 1890, post, p. 826, and note thereto.

Power of entry for purposes of s. 5.

17. For the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of section five (a) of this Act the local authority may, by any officer appointed in that behalf, who shall produce his authority in writing (b), enter on any premises between the hours of ten o'clock of the forenoon and six o'clock of the afternoon.

See first note to s. 16, supra.

(a) Section 5, ante, p. 810, provides for the cleansing and disinfection of premises, etc.

(b) This authority may apparently be authenticated by the signature of the clerk (see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 266, ante, p. 593). If not, it must be under seal, as a local authority can give no authority except under seal. It may be inferred from the language in the text that a special authority must be given in each case.

Recovery and application of penalties.

18. Every penalty imposed by this Act shall be recoverable in a court of summary jurisdiction on the information or complaint of the local authority, or of their duly authorised officer, but not otherwise, and shall be paid to the local authority.

See first note to s. 16, supra.

The effect of the provision in the text is to make the penalties recoverable by summary proceedings before justices (see the S. J. A., 1879, s. 41).

A common informer cannot proceed for penalties under this Act. It will apparently be sufficient to give to an officer, e.g., the clerk, a general authority to lay information under this Act on behalf of the authority.

Superseding in certain cases of provisions in local Acts.

19. Where a provision of this Act is put in force in any district in which there is any similar provision in force contained in any local Act, such last-mentioned provision shall cease to be in operation.

Many local Acts contain provisions similar to those of this Act. Such provisions will, for the time being, be superseded if the corresponding sections of this Act are adopted. Compare s. 14 of the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, ante, p. 804.

Expenses.

20. Any expenses incurred by a local authority in the execution of any of the provisions of this Act, including the reasonable remuneration of any veterinary inspector or surgeon employed under section four, shall be paid as part of the expenses of such authority in the execution of the Acts relating to public health, and in the case of a rural authority shall be general expenses.

See first note to s. 16, supra.

The expenses of an urban authority will be paid as provided by the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 207, 208, ante, pp. 469, 472, i.e., in general out of the general district fund.

General expenses of a rural authority are paid under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 230, ante, p. 514, out of the poor rates of all the parishes in the district.

Power of local authority to rescind adoption of Act.

21. Any resolution adopting all or any of the sections of this Act may be rescinded, either wholly or as regards any of the adopted sections, by resolution of the local authority, but notice of the meeting at which such resolution is to be proposed, and of the intention to propose the same, shall be given, and such resolution shall be published, and shall come into operation, in like manner and at such time as is hereinbefore provided with respect to resolutions adopting this Act, and a copy of the resolution shall be sent to the Local Government Board when it is published (a). Section 21.

On the resolution coming into effect the sections of this Act, the adoption of which is thereby rescinded, shall cease to extend to the district.

The provision hereinbefore contained, as to evidence of and objections to the effect of a resolution adopting this Act, shall apply to any resolution rescinding such adoption (b).

(a) In order to rescind the adoption of the Act or of any section of it, it will be necessary to follow the procedure prescribed by s. 3. Fourteen clear days' notice of the meeting and of the intention to propose the rescinding resolution must be given to each member of the local authority. The resolution, if passed, must be published by advertisement in a local newspaper and by handbills, etc., and it will come into operation on the day fixed by the local authority, not being less than a month after the first publication of the advertisement.

(b) The provisions here referred to are those contained in the concluding paragraph of s. 3.

22. This Act shall not apply to Scotland. Extent of Act.

23. [Application to Ireland.]

24. Nothing in or done under this Act, shall interfere with the operation or effect of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Acts, 1878 to 1886, or of any Order, licence, or act of her Majesty's Privy Council or the Local Government Board made, granted, or done, or to be made, granted, or done, thereunder; or of any Order, regulation, licence, or act of a local authority made, granted, or done under any such Order of the Privy Council or the Local Government Board; or exempt any dairy, or building, or thing whatsoever, or any body or person from the provisions of any general Act relating to dairies, milk, or animals, already passed, or to be passed in this or any future session of Parliament. Saving for Acts relating to dairies, animals, etc.

The Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1886, s. 9, transferred from the Privy Council and the local authorities for the administration of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Acts to the L. G. B. and the sanitary authorities throughout the country the powers given to the former by the 41 & 42 Vict. c. 74, s. 34, with reference to dairies, cowsheds, and milkshops. The provisions of this section were repealed by the Milk and Dairies (Consolidation) Act, 1915, 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 66. All the other provisions of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Acts, 1878 to 1886, are now repealed and replaced by the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, which has been amended by the Diseases of Animals Acts, 1896, 1903, 1909, and 1910, and the Poultry Act, 1911.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACTS AMENDMENT ACT, 1890.

An Act to amend the Public Health Acts. [18th August 1890.]

PART I.

GENERAL.

1. This Act is divided into Parts as follows: Division of Act into Parts.

Part I.—General.

Part II.—Telegraph, etc. wires.

Section 1.

Part III.—Sanitary and other provisions.
Part IV.—Music and dancing.
Part V.—Stock.

Short title, construction and extent of Act.

2.—(1) This Act shall be construed as one with the Public Health Acts (a).

(2) Part One of this Act shall extend to England and Wales and Ireland, exclusive of the administrative county of London. Parts Two, Three, Four, and Five shall extend to any district in which they are respectively adopted under the provisions of this Act (b).

(3) This Act may be cited as the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890, and this Act and the Public Health Acts may be cited together as the Public Health Acts (a).

(a) There is no definition in this Act of the expression "Public Health Acts" so far as it relates to England and Wales. There is, however, a definition in the Short Titles Act, 1896, and see the list in 51 & 52 Vict. c. 52, s. 1, ante, p. 789.

As to the effect of the provision that the Act shall be construed as one with earlier Acts, see Read v. Joannon (1890), 25 Q. B. D., per COLERIDGE, C.J., at p. 304; Charing Cross Electricity Supply Co. v. Hydraulic Power Co., [1914] 3 K. B., per Lord SUMNER, at p. 782; R. v. Essex JJ., Ex parte Barking U. D. C., [1916] 2 K. B. 406; 80 J. P. 345.

(b) The adoption of these parts of the Act is provided for by the next section.

Ad option of Act by local authorities.

3. The following provisions shall have effect with regard to the adoption of the Parts of this Act, which are adoptive, by local authorities:

(1) An urban authority may adopt all or any of such Parts (a).

(2) A rural authority may adopt Part Three so far as it is declared by this Act to be applicable to such authority (b), without prejudice to the provisions of this Act relating to the investing of rural authorities with urban powers (a).

(a) Notice that the whole of a Part must be adopted so far as it is applicable. Particular sections cannot be adopted to the exclusion of the others, as under the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, s. 3, ante, p. 807. If, however, a rural council desire to obtain the powers of one or more sections of Part III. without putting into operation other provisions contained in that Part, or require the additional powers for part of their district only, they can apply to the Ministry of Health for an order under s. 5. By such an order a rural council may also obtain powers under sections comprised in other parts of the Act.

Where at the time of the formation of part of a rural district into an urban district certain of the adoptive Acts were in force in the rural district, a question arose as to whether the Acts would continue to be in operation in the newly formed district. The L. G. B. disclaimed authority to determine the question, but stated that it appeared to them to be desirable that fresh proceedings for the adoption of the Acts should be taken in each case. This is now generally provided for in the order for the formation of the district.

(b) The provisions of Part III., which are applicable in rural sanitary districts, are those mentioned in s. 50, post, p. 860. Mention is made in the notes to each section whether it is or is not so applicable.

(3) The adoption shall be by a resolution passed at a meeting (a) of the local authority; and one calendar month at least before such meeting special notice of the meeting and of the intention to propose such resolution shall be given to every member of the authority, and the notice shall be deemed to have been duly given to a member of it, if it is either—

(a) Given in the mode in which notices to attend meetings of the authority are usually given; or

(b) Where there is no such mode, then signed by the clerk of the authority, and delivered to the member or left at his usual or last known place of abode in England, or forwarded by post in a prepaid letter, addressed to the member at his usual or last known place of abode in England (b).

(a) The meeting need not be a special meeting; the resolution may be passed at an ordinary meeting so long as the special notice is given as provided by the text. See form of resolution in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. X., p. 508.

(b) The provisions of this sub-section are similar to those in 53 & 54 Vict. c. 34, s. 3, ante, p. 807, except that the notice must be a month's notice. As to the manner in which the notices should be given, see the notes to that section. For a form of notice see the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. X., at p. 507.

(4) Such resolution shall be published by advertisement in some one or more newspapers circulating within the district of the authority and by causing notice thereof to be affixed to the principal doors of every church and chapel in the place to which notices are usually fixed (a), and otherwise in such manner as the authority think sufficient for giving notice thereof to all persons interested, and shall come into operation at such time not less than one month (b) after the first publication of the advertisement of the resolution as the authority may by the resolution fix (b), and upon its coming into operation such Parts of the Act as are adopted shall extend to that district.

It is not quite clear that the notices need be fixed to the doors of Nonconformist chapels. It has been held under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 45, s. 2, which requires notices of vestry meetings to be affixed "on or near the door of all the churches and chapels within such parish or place," that such notices need not be affixed to churches or chapels other than those of the Church of England (Ormerod v. Chadwick (1847), 11 J. P. 138; 16 M. & W. 367; Ex parte Warblington (1854), 18 Jur. 494; R. v. Whipp (1843), 4 Q. B. 141; 12 L. J. M. C. 64; Edwards v. Hatton (1866), L. R. 1 Ad. & Ec. 21; 30 J. P. 211; R. v. Wolferstan, [1893] 2 Q. B. 451). Compare the provisions in 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 23, where there is express mention of chapels not belonging to the Established Church.

(b) The L. G. B. have expressed the view that where the resolution does not fix a definite date on which it shall come into operation the validity of the resolution is very doubtful, and in such cases they have suggested that proceedings for adoption shall be begun afresh. The Board do not consider that the date when the resolution for the adoption is to come into force can be fixed by a resolution of the council passed at a later meeting.

The expression "one month" means "one calendar month" (see the Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 3). In a case where a resolution was fixed to come into operation at a time equivalent to four weeks from its first advertisement, the L. G. B. expressed the opinion that proceedings should be commenced afresh.

(5) A copy of the resolution shall be sent—

(a) Where any Part of the Act is adopted, to the Local Government Board;

Section 3.

(b) Where Part Two is adopted, to the Board of Trade;
(c) Where Part Four is adopted, to a Secretary of State.

In any case a copy must be sent to the L. G. B., now the Ministry of Health. When Part II. is adopted a copy must also be sent to the Board of Trade, which is the controlling body with regard to telegraph wires. And for a similar reason, when Part IV. is adopted, a copy must also be sent to the Secretary of State.

(6) A copy of the advertisement shall be conclusive evidence of the resolution having been passed, unless the contrary be shown; and no objection to the effect of the resolution, on the ground that notice of the intention to propose the same was not duly given, or on the ground that the resolution was not sufficiently published, shall be made after three months from the date of the first publication of the advertisement.

This sub-section is practically identical with the concluding clause of 53 & 54 Vict. c. 34, s. 3. See the notes to that section, ante, p. 808.

Expenses of local authority.

4. All expenses incurred or payable by a local authority in the execution of this Act, and not otherwise provided for, may be charged and defrayed in the case of an urban authority as part of the expenses incurred by them in the execution of the Public Health Acts, and in the case of a rural authority as part of their general expenses under the Public Health Acts.

As to the expenses of an urban authority, see ss. 207 et seq of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 469. Such expenses will in general be paid out of the general district fund. As to the general expenses of a rural authority, see ss. 229, 230 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, pp. 510, 514.

Power to Local Government Board to extend particular provisions to rural districts.

5. The Local Government Board may declare that any of the provisions contained in any Part of this Act which are not in force in any rural sanitary district (a) shall be in force in that district, or any part thereof, and may invest a rural sanitary authority with any of the powers, rights, duties, capacities, liabilities, and obligations which an urban authority may acquire by adoption of any Part of this Act, in like manner, and subject to the same provisions as they are enabled to invest rural sanitary authorities with the powers of urban sanitary authorities under the provisions of section two hundred and seventy-six of the Public Health Act, 1875, and in such case the date of the declaration of the Local Government Board under this section shall be substituted for the date of the adoption of this Act or any Part thereof (b).

(a) The provisions of this Act, which are not in force in, and which cannot be adopted in, a rural district, are those contained in Parts II., IV., and V., and those sections and parts of sections in Part III. which are not mentioned in s. 50, post, p. 860.

The effect of this section, as incorporated by the text, is to enable a rural sanitary authority (now rural district council), or ratepayers whose assessments are equal to one-tenth of the rateable value of the district or contributory place, to apply to the L. G. B., now the Ministry of Health, for an Order investing the rural authority with powers under the Act. The Order must be published in the London Gazette.

Under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25, application may also be made by a parish council or county council (for urban powers to be conferred upon a rural district council).

The practice of the Ministry of Health in regard to applications for powers under the present Act for rural parishes is explained in many cases in the notes to the various sections.

Note to Section 5.

A difficulty occurs in many cases in the matter of the incidence of expenses. The Ministry frequently insert a provision in Orders under s. 276 of the Act of 1875 declaring the expenses to be incurred thereunder to be chargeable as special expenses. Such a provision cannot, however, be made in the case of Orders under s. 5 of the present Act, having in view the provisions of the latter part of s. 4 of the Act, unless section 49 is in force. See that section and the notes thereto.

See also note (a) to s. 3.

6. Offences under this Act may be prosecuted, and penalties, forfeitures, costs, and expenses recovered in like manner and subject to the same provisions as offences which may be prosecuted and penalties, forfeitures, costs, and expenses which may be recovered in a summary manner under the Public Health Acts.

Legal proceedings, etc.

Offences under byelaws made under this Act may also be similarly prosecuted. See the P. H. A., 1907, s. 6, post, p. 1023.

The provisions of the P. H. A., 1875, as to the prosecution of offences and the recovery of penalties, etc., are contained in Part VII. of that Act, ante, p. 551. The procedure is that prescribed by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts before a court of summary jurisdiction being a petty sessional court (s. 251). Proceedings must be taken within the period of six months after the matter of information or complaint arose (47 & 48 Vict. c. 43, repealing and substituting for s. 252 the corresponding provisions of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts). The proceedings can be taken only by the local authority, or a party aggrieved, or a person having the written consent of the Attorney-General (s. 253). The penalties are to be paid to the local authority, but if there is an informer he is to receive one-half (s. 254). A justice may act though he is a member of the local authority (s. 258). The local authority may appear by their clerk or any member or officer generally or specially authorised (s. 259). Demands below £50 may be recovered in the county court (s. 261). The proceedings are not to be quashed on certiorari (s. 262).

7.—(1) Any person aggrieved—

Appeals to quarter sessions.

(a) By any order, judgment, determination, or requirement of a local authority under this Act;

(b) By the withholding of any order, certificate, licence, consent, or approval, which may be made, granted, or given by a local authority under this Act;

(c) By any conviction or order of a court of summary jurisdiction under any provision of this Act;

may appeal in manner provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts to a court of quarter sessions.

The expression "this Act" means not merely this Act, but includes the Public Health Acts, with which this Act is to be read as one. See s. 2, ante, p. 820 (R. v. Essex JJ., Ex parte Barking U. D. C., [1916] 2 K. B. 406; 80 J. P. 345.

This general provision is subject to the qualification contained in the next subsection. The cases in which an appeal will lie under this provision are indicated in the notes to the several sections. The existence of a right of appeal against the order, etc., of a local authority will not affect the duty of that authority to hear judicially the application for such order. As to this duty, see R. v. London C. C., [1918] 1 K. B. 68.

The provisions of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts as to appeals to quarter sessions are contained in 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 31, set out in the notes to s. 269 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 602. In cases where a right of appeal to quarter sessions already existed under earlier Acts, a question may arise whether the procedure prescribed under those Acts is repealed by the substitution of the procedure under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts. See Edelsten v. London C. C., [1918] 1 K. B. 81; 81 J. P. 294.

A regulation was made under s. 4 of the London Hackney Carriages Act, 1850, which does not provide any penalty for breach of a regulation so made. The London

Note to Section 7.

Hackney Carriage Act, 1853, provides by s. 19 that for every offence against the provisions of that Act, for which no special penalty is appointed, the offender shall be liable to a penalty of 40s., and by s. 21 that the Act is to be construed as one with the London Hackney Carriages Acts, 1843, 1850. It was held, that the effect of ss. 19 and 21 was to create one code of law for the regulation of hackney carriages; that s. 21 was a general penalty section which would apply to a breach of any provision of the three Acts which was not specifically provided for elsewhere; and that a breach of a regulation made under an Act was a breach of the Act itself (Willingale v. Norris, [1909] 1 K. B. 57; 72 J. P. 495).

In Hornsey Corporation v. Kershaw (1909), 73 J. P. 335, a court of quarter sessions held that a local authority could appeal where justices refused an order for payment of expenses incurred by the authority in repairing an alleged "single private drain" (see s. 19, post, p. 832).

(2) This section shall not apply in cases where there is an appeal to the Local Government Board under section two hundred and sixty-eight of the Public Health Act, 1875.

See s. 268 of the P. H. A., 1875, and the notes thereto, ante, p. 595. For the L. G. B. must now be read the Ministry of Health.

It is not clear whether this sub-section bars an appeal to quarter sessions against an order of justices by a defendant who might at an earlier stage have appealed under s. 268 to the L. G. B. against the "decision" of the authority; but semble it does. If so, it is still less clear whether in such a case it bars an appeal by the authority. The point does not seem to have been raised in Hornsey Corporation v. Kershaw, supra.

More than one sum in one summons, etc.

8. Any information, complaint, warrant, or summons made or issued for the purposes of this Act, or of the Public Health Acts, may contain in the body thereof or in a schedule thereto several sums.

It is difficult to suggest what is the object of this provision, or what its effect is. The general rule is that an information or complaint must be confined to one offence or matter of complaint (see 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 10). Under the above provision one complaint and summons may be used for the recovery of several sums. It would appear to have no application to the case of penalties. As to rates, see 25 & 26 Vict. c. 82, and R. v. Glover, ante, p. 506.

Byelaws.

9. All the provisions with respect to byelaws contained in sections one hundred and eighty-two to one hundred and eighty-six of the Public Health Act, 1875, and any enactment amending or extending those sections, shall apply to all byelaws from time to time made by a local authority under the powers of this Act, except byelaws made under Part Two of this Act.

See ss. 182—187 of the P. H. A., 1875, and the notes thereto, ante, pp. 432—446.

Byelaws made under ss. 20, 23, 26, 40, and 44 of this Act must be confirmed by the L. G. B., now the Ministry of Health, under s. 184 of the P. H. A., 1875; byelaws under Part II. must be confirmed by the Board of Trade (see s. 13, post, p. 827).

Powers of Act cumulative.

10.—(1) All powers given to a local authority under this Act shall be deemed to be in addition to and not in derogation of any other powers conferred upon such local authority by any Act of Parliament, law, or custom, and such other powers may be exercised in the same manner as if this Act had not been passed.

See the P. H. A., 1875, s. 341, ante, p. 666. Notwithstanding this provision, the Act itself creates certain exceptions to it. Thus, where s. 22 is in force, s. 38 of the P. H. A., 1875, is repealed; and where s. 34 is in force, the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, s. 80, is repealed. But the Act does not repeal or supersede local Acts.

(2) Nothing in this Act shall exempt any person from any penalty to which he would have been liable if this Act had not been passed, provided that no person shall be liable to pay, except in the case of a daily penalty, more than one penalty in respect of the same offence. Section 10.

The expression "daily penalty" is defined in s. 11 (3), post, p. 826.

11.—(1) The expression "ashpit" in the Public Health Acts and in this Act shall for the purposes of the execution of those Acts and of this Act include any ashtub or other receptacle for the deposit of ashes, fæcal matter, or refuse. Interpretation.

The P. H. A., 1875, s. 35, ante, p. 96, provides that every newly-erected house must have an ashpit furnished with proper doors and coverings. By s. 36, if a house is without a sufficient ashpit, the owner may be required to provide one. By s. 39, an urban authority may provide ashpits for public accommodation. By s. 40, an ashpit must be constructed and kept so as not to be a nuisance or injurious to health. By s. 41, provision is made for the abatement of a nuisance arising from any defect in an ashpit. Sections 42—44 deal with the cleansing of ashpits. Section 91, ante, p. 165, and subsequent sections include, under the definition of nuisances, any ashpit so foul or in such a state as to be a nuisance or injurious to health. In all these sections the expression "ashpit" will have the extended meaning above assigned to it. It seems from the language of the text that an ashpit may be a movable receptacle.

(2) A street or part of a street which has been asphalted or paved with wood, tar paving, or artificial stone, or other improved paving of any kind shall be deemed to have been paved within the meaning of any provision of the Public Health Acts.

Provided that a street shall not be deemed to be paved to the satisfaction of an urban authority unless it is paved with such kind as well as with such quality of paving as the local authority shall consider suitable for the street.

The first part of this sub-section appears to have been intended to meet a dictum of JESSEL, M.R., who, in Att.-Gen. v. Bidder (1881), 47 J. P. 263, said that a road paved with wood was not "paved" within the meaning of s. 152 of the P. H. A., 1875. See further as to this case the notes to s. 41, post, p. 885.

The second part of the sub-section is an amendment of ss. 150, 152 of the P. H. A., 1875. Section 150 of that Act, ante, p. 286, provides that when a street, not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, is not (inter alia) paved to the satisfaction of the urban authority, notice may be served on the owners of property fronting the street to pave it, and in their default the urban authority may pave the street, and recover the expenses from the owners. The effect of this sub-section is that an authority may require the road to be asphalted or paved with wood, etc., and that though properly paved in one way, it shall not be deemed to be paved to the satisfaction of the authority unless they also consider the kind of paving suitable for the street. Section 152, ante, p. 319, provides that when a street is (inter alia) paved to the satisfaction of an urban authority, they may declare it to be a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. Having regard to the text, they have now a discretion as to the kind of paving which they deem suitable for the street. See the notes to s. 41, post, p. 855.

See further on this subject the Private Street Works Act, 1892, post, p. 870.

(3) In this Act, if not inconsistent with the context (a)—

The expression "local authority" means an urban sanitary authority or a rural sanitary authority, as the case may be, under the Public Health Acts, and the expressions "urban authority" and "rural authority" mean respectively an urban sanitary authority and a rural sanitary authority under those Acts (b).

Section 11.

The expressions "urban sanitary district" and "rural sanitary district" mean respectively an urban sanitary district and a rural sanitary district under the Public Health Acts (b).

The expression "sanitary convenience" includes urinals, water-closets, earth-closets, privies, ashpits, and any similar convenience (c).

The expression "daily penalty" means a penalty for each day on which any offence is continued after conviction therefor (d).

The expressions "surveyor," "lands," "premises," "owner," "street," "house," "drain," "sewer" have respectively the same meaning as in the Public Health Acts (e).

(a) See as to these words the cases mentioned in notes to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 4, ante, p. 3. In a case in the House of Lords, Lord SELBORNE said: "An interpretation clause of this kind is not meant to prevent the word receiving its ordinary, popular, and natural sense, whenever that would be properly applicable; but to enable the word, as used in the Act, when there is nothing in the context or the subject-matter to the contrary, to be applied to some things to which it would not ordinarily be applicable" (Robinson v. Barton Eccles L. B. (1883), 8 App. Cas. 798; 48 J. P. 276).

(b) These expressions are defined in the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 6, 9. See, however, the notes to those sections and Part II. of the L. G. A., 1894, post, p. 923.

(c) The expression "sanitary convenience" is a convenient one, including as it does a number of things which are generally grouped together in the P. H. A., 1875. See, for example, ss. 35, 36, 39 of that Act, ante, pp. 96, 102. The word "ashpit" has now an extended meaning (see sub-s. (1), ante, p. 825).

(d) This definition obviates a difficulty which has often been felt where a daily penalty is imposed for every day an offence continues, the question being in such cases whether the daily penalty is incurred before as well as after conviction; see, for example, the P. H. A., 1875, s. 86, ante, p. 159.

(e) In the P. H. A., 1875, s. 4, all these expressions are defined: see the notes to that section, ante, p. 3. It is not clear that the definitions were necessary regard being had to the provision in s. 2 (1), ante, p. 820, that this Act is to be read as one with the Public Health Acts.

12. [Application to Ireland.]

PART II.

TELEGRAPH, ETC. WIRES (a).

Byelaws for prevention of danger from telegraph wires, etc.

13.—(1) An urban authority may from time to time make, alter, and repeal byelaws (b) for prevention of danger or obstruction to the public from posts, wires, tubes, or any other apparatus stretched or placed above, over, along, or across any street (c) (whether before or after the adoption of this Part of this Act) (d) for the purpose of any telegraph, telephone, lighting, railway signalling, or other purpose (e).

(a) This Part of the Act may be adopted by an urban authority. It cannot be adopted by a rural council, but it is open to such a council to apply to the Ministry of Health for an order under s. 5 declaring it to be operative in their district or in some part thereof. Instances will presumably be rare in which the powers are required in rural districts and the views of the Board of Trade will probably be required in such a case. See also notes to ss. 3 and 5. When this Part is adopted by an urban authority in manner provided by s. 3, the resolution must be forwarded to the Ministry of Health, and to the Board of Trade, as provided by s. 3 (5), ante, p. 821.

(b) The provisions of the Public Health Acts do not apply to these byelaws (see s. 9, ante, p. 824).

Note to Section 13.

The byelaws made under this section are only for the prevention of danger or obstruction to the public. The observance of them will not necessarily make it lawful to erect wires for the purposes above mentioned. The byelaws will not in any way enable the promoters of any undertaking to erect wires upon or over private property where that cannot otherwise be legally done.

(c) For the definition of "street," see s. 11 (3), and notes thereto.

It should be observed that apart from the provisions of this section an urban authority have no power to prevent the suspension of overhead wires above a street unless the wires interfere with its ordinary user as a street: see cases on pp. 278, 279, ante, and Levy v. National Telephone Co. (1897), Times, Dec. 18th (wires above private house).

For disputes as to the laying or erection of telephone wires by the Postmaster-General or his licensees (mainly as to whether the lines should be overhead or underground), see Wandsworth District Board v. P. M. G. (1884), 4 Ry. and Can. Cas. 301; P. M. G. v. Corporation of London (1898), 62 J. P. 390; 78 L. T. 120; P. M. G. v. Corporation of Glasgow (1900), 10 Ry. and Can. Cas. 238; P. M. G. v. Corporation of Edinburgh (1899), 10 Ry. and Can. Cas. 247; Tunbridge Wells Corporation v. National Telephone Co. (1900), 83 L. T. 525; In re P. M. G. and Watford U. D. C. (1908), 72 J. P. 184; 52 Sol. J. 302; In re P. M. G. and Woolwich Borough Council (1908), 72 J. P. 186; 6 L. G. R. 509; P. M. G. v. Tottenham U. D. C. (1910), 8 L. G. R. 791; Croydon Corporation v. P. M. G. (1910), 74 J. P. 424; 8 L. G. R. 1005; P. M. G. v. Hendon U. D. C., [1914] 1 K. B. 564; 78 J. P. 145; Dublin C. C. v. P. M. G., [1914] 2 I. R. 208; P. M. G. v. Hutchings, [1916] 1 K. B. 774; 80 J. P. 246, and county court cases at 77 J. P. N. 412, 605. Cf. the Telegraph (Arbitration) Act, 1909.

(d) The byelaws will apply to wires already erected as well as to those erected after the adoption of this Part of the Act; see, however, sub-s. (6), infra.

(e) See the partial exemption of apparatus belonging to a railway or canal company in sub-s. (7), infra.

The byelaws will not apply to post office wires, or electric lighting wires erected under the Electric Lighting Acts (see s. 15, post, p. 829, and the notes thereto).

(2) By such byelaws provisions may be made for the inspection and examination by the urban authority of any such posts, wires, tubes, or other apparatus, and for the prohibition of any such posts, wires, tubes, or other apparatus being or continuing to be stretched or placed as aforesaid in such manner as to be dangerous or to cause obstruction to the public.

(3) Offenders against such byelaws shall be liable to such penalties as may be thereby prescribed not exceeding five pounds for each offence, and a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings, and the court in addition to awarding any penalty may order the removal of any post, wire, tube, or other apparatus stretched or placed in contravention of any such byelaw made under this section.

The byelaws must themselves prescribe the penalties. For the definition of a daily penalty, see s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826. The proceedings will be under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, and an appeal against a conviction or order will lie to quarter sessions under s. 7 (1), ante, p. 823.

(4) Byelaws made under this section and any alteration or repeal of any such byelaw shall not take effect unless and until they have been submitted to and confirmed by the Board of Trade, which Board is hereby empowered to allow or disallow or to modify or amend the same as it may think proper.

The form of byelaws generally approved by the Board of Trade under this section will be found in Shiress Will's Law relating to Electric Lighting and Energy. One of the chief causes of danger is the liability of the wires to be blown down or broken by snow; these byelaws provide for such a cause of danger.

(5) Reasonable notice of the intended submission for confirmation of any such byelaw, alteration, or repeal shall be given by the urban authority by advertisement in one or more local newspapers circulating in the district to which such byelaws relate, and by circular letter to any company or person owning or leasing any post, wire, tube, or other apparatus to which any byelaw is intended to apply, and such company or person shall be entitled to appear before the Board of Trade and object to the confirmation, alteration, or repeal of any byelaw, and all costs incurred by any parties in reference to the application for or objection to the confirmation, alteration, or repeal of any such byelaw shall be in the discretion of the Board of Trade.

The circular letter must be sent to all owners or lessees of existing posts, wires, etc., other than those mentioned in s. 15, post, p. 829. Such owners and lessees will send in their objections, if any, and may appear before the Board of Trade in support of them.

(6) The Board of Trade may exempt from the operation of any such byelaw, alteration, or repeal, for such period as they think proper, not exceeding five years from the confirmation thereof, any post, wire, tube, or other apparatus which shall have been stretched or placed, in the case of a new byelaw, before the confirmation thereof, and in the case of the alteration or repeal of a byelaw, in accordance with such byelaw.

Unless such exemption is made, the byelaws will extend to existing wires as well as to those to be erected after the adoption of this Part of the Act.

(7) Nothing in such byelaws shall extend to or include any apparatus belonging to any railway or canal company, or used by them in connection with their business, and which now is or hereafter shall be fixed or placed by any such company across, over, or along any railway or the towing-path of any canal, provided such apparatus do not project or be not stretched or placed beyond such railway or towing-path over any street, or be not stretched or placed over any street crossing over such railway other than streets crossing any railway on the level.

When a railway crosses above a street, the byelaws will not apply to wires on such railway so long as these do not project beyond the property of the company. Where the street is carried over the railway, the byelaws will not apply to railway wires unless these are carried above the street. When a street crosses a railway on the level, the byelaws will not apply to the railway wires even if they do cross the street.

Danger from exempted telegraph wires.

14.—(1) If any post, wire, tube, or other apparatus so exempted as aforesaid (a) is during the period of such exemption in the opinion of the surveyor of the urban authority in such a state or position that immediate danger to any person is to be apprehended (b), he may give information to any justice, who may thereupon summon the owner or lessee thereof or other person interested therein forthwith to appear before a court of summary jurisdiction.

(a) The exemptions here referred to are those mentioned in sub-ss. (6), (7), of the preceding section. Note to Section 14.

(b) This does not necessarily mean when danger is apprehended to a particular person. This section will apply if immediate danger is apprehended to any person passing along a street.

(2) The court may thereupon—

(a) Make an order requiring such owner, lessee, or other person, or all or any of them, to remove or remedy the source of danger; or

(b) Make an order authorising the surveyor to do so at the expense of such owner, lessee, or other person, or of all or any of them; or

(c) Make such other order as may appear to the court under all the circumstances of the case to be necessary and proper.

An appeal against such an order will lie to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823. The expense incurred under clause (b) will apparently be recoverable summarily (see s. 6, ante, p. 823).

15.—(1) Nothing contained in this Part of this Act shall— Savings.

(a) Extend to any post, wire, tube, or other apparatus or property of the Postmaster-General:

(b) Extend to any works of any undertakers within the meaning of the Electric Lighting Acts, 1882 to 1888, to which the provisions of those Acts apply.

The Electric Lighting Acts (45 & 46 Vict. c. 56, 51 & 52 Vict. c. 12, 9 Edw. 7, c. 34, and 9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 100) which are set out in App. I., post, Vol. II., contain important restrictions with regard to the erection of overhead wires: see s. 14 of the Act of 1882, s. 4 of the Act of 1888, and ss. 21 & 22 of the Act of 1919, and the regulations made under these Acts.

The Electricity (Supply) Act, 1919 (9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 100), s. 21, provides that where the consent of the Board of Trade is obtained to the placing of any electrical line above ground in any case, the consent of the local authority shall not be required, but the Board of Trade before giving their consent shall give the local authority an opportunity of being heard. See the section in extenso, post.

(2) Nothing contained in this Part of this Act shall limit or interfere with the working of any mines or minerals lying under or adjacent to any street along or across which any posts, wires, tubes, or other apparatus shall be stretched or placed, nor shall the owner, lessee, or occupier of those mines or minerals be liable for any damage which may be occasioned by the working thereof in the ordinary course to such posts, wires, tubes, or apparatus.

As to the right of an owner to work minerals under a street vested in the urban authority, see s. 27 of the Highway Act, 1878, in App. I., post, Vol. II. The object of the above provision appears to be to prevent the owners of posts, wires, etc., erected in compliance with the byelaws from acquiring any right thereby against the owner of mines or minerals under the street in or over which the posts, wires, etc., are placed. It may be doubted whether the provision was required.

Section 16.

PART III.

SANITARY AND OTHER PROVISIONS (a).

Injurious matters not to pass into sewers.

16.—(1) It shall not be lawful for any person to throw, or suffer to be thrown, or to pass into any sewer of a local authority or any drain communicating therewith, any matter or substance by which the free flow of the sewage or surface or storm water may be interfered with, or by which any such sewer or drain may be injured (b).

(a) This part of the Act may be adopted in its entirety by an urban authority. It can only be adopted by a rural authority to the extent mentioned in s. 50. See also note (a) to s. 3.

(b) This section is made applicable to rural authorities who have adopted Part III. (see s. 50, post, p. 860).

The provisions of the section will apply to the sending of injurious matter into sewers from house drains as well as from factories.

(2) Every person offending against this enactment shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds, and to a daily penalty not exceeding twenty shillings.

As to the recovery of the penalty, see s. 6. Appeal against a conviction will lie to quarter sessions under s. 7. For the definition of a daily penalty, see s. 11 (3).

Chemical refuse, steam, etc., not to be turned into sewers.

17. (a)—(1) Every person who turns or permits to enter into any sewer of a local authority or any drain communicating therewith—

(a) Any chemical refuse, or

(b) Any waste steam, condensing water, heated water, or other liquid (such water or other liquid being of a higher temperature than one hundred and ten degrees of Fahrenheit), which, either alone or in combination with the sewage, causes a nuisance or is dangerous or injurious to health (b), shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds, and to a daily penalty not exceeding five pounds (c).

(a) This section is made applicable to rural authorities who have adopted Part III. (see s. 50, post, p. 860).

(b) See the provisions of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876, s. 7, which will be found in App. I., post, Vol. II. That section requires facilities to be given for the sending of liquid refuse from factories into sewers. No facilities can be required to be given for sending solid refuse into sewers, and if any solid refuse is sent into a sewer a remedy may be found in the provisions of s. 16, supra. Even if facilities are given for receiving liquid refuse, the text will prevent these being sent into a sewer in the cases above mentioned.

In connection with this subject, reference may be made to St. Helens Chemical Co. v. St. Helens (Mayor, etc., of) (1876), 1 Ex. D. 196; 40 J. P. 471. There the appellants, owners of chemical works, were entitled to discharge refuse by two separate drains into a public sewer. By one drain liquid impregnated with muriatic acid was discharged, and by the other liquid impregnated with sulphur. Upon their combination in the sewer sulphuretted hydrogen gas was produced, which escaped in sufficient quantities to be injurious to the public health. No nuisance existed in the drains. The respondents had not properly flushed, cleansed, and trapped the sewer. Complaint having been made by the respondents of the escape of the sulphuretted hydrogen gas, an order for the abatement thereof was made by justices on the appellants:—Held, that the escape of the gas was a nuisance within the meaning of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 8; that it arose from the acts of the appellants, and that the respondents could lawfully make complaint thereof, although they themselves might have contributed to the existence of the nuisance. This case shows that it may sometimes be possible to deal with nuisances in sewers from chemical refuse under the provisions of the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 91—96; but the text gives a remedy which is at once more direct and of wider application. See also the cases referred to in the notes to ss. 15, 21 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, pp. 50, 78. Note to Section 17.

(c) For the definition of a daily penalty, see s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826.

As to the notice which must be given before proceedings are taken under this section, see sub-s. (3), infra.

As to the recovery of the penalties, see s. 6. Appeal will lie to quarter sessions against a conviction under s. 7, ante, p. 823.

(2) The local authority, by any of their officers either generally or specially authorised in that behalf in writing (a), may enter any premises for the purpose of examining whether the provisions of this section are being contravened, and if such entry be refused, any justice, on complaint on oath by such officer, made after reasonable notice in writing of such intended complaint has been given to the person having custody of the premises (b), may by order under his hand require such person to admit the officer into the premises, and if it be found that any offence under this section has been or is being committed in respect of the premises, the order shall continue in force until the offence shall have ceased or the work necessary to prevent the recurrence thereof shall have been executed.

(a) The authority may be general, i.e., empowering an officer to enter as occasion may arise, or special, i.e., relating to certain premises only. It may be authenticated by the signature of the clerk under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 266, ante, p. 593.

(b) This notice will be a condition precedent to the obtaining of a justice's order.

(3) A person shall not be liable to a penalty for an offence against this section until the local authority have given him notice of the provisions of this section, nor for an offence committed before the expiration of seven days from the service of such notice, provided that the local authority shall not be required to give the same person notice more than once.

Before a penalty can be proceeded for, the local authority must give notice of the provisions of the section to the offender, and must wait seven days to see if the necessary steps are taken to stop the cause of complaint.

18.—(1) Where the owner or occupier of any premises is entitled to cause any sewer or drain from those premises to communicate with any sewer of the local authority, the local authority shall, if requested to do so by such owner or occupier, and upon the cost thereof being paid in advance to the local authority, themselves make the communication and execute all works necessary for that purpose. Provision as to local authority making communications with, or altering, etc., drains and sewers.

This section is made applicable to rural authorities who have adopted Part III. (see s. 50, post, p. 860).

Section 21 of the Public Health Act, 1875, ante, p. 78, provides that an owner or occupier of premises within the district of a local authority shall be entitled to connect his drains with the sewer of such authority upon giving such notice as may be required by the authority, and upon complying with their regulations as to the mode of communication, and subject to the superintendence of their officers. Section 22 entitles the owner or occupier of premises without the district to connect his drains with the sewers in the district upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon, or, in case of dispute, may be settled at the option of the owner or occupier by a court of summary jurisdiction, or by arbitration. By the provision in the text, the owner or occupier may require the local authority themselves to make the communication upon payment of the cost in advance. As to the cost, see the next sub-section.

Sections 21, 22 of the P. H. A., 1875, must now, however, be read in connection with s. 38 of the P. H. A., 1907, if that section has been applied to the district or contributory place by the Order of the L. G. B. or the Ministry of Health.

If the sewer of the authority with which it is proposed to connect a drain cannot be reached without crossing private property, it would appear that the authority have no right to lay the connecting drain without the consent of the owner of such property (see Wood v. Ealing Tenants, Ltd., and cases cited therewith on pp. 79, 85, ante).

(2) The cost of making such communication (including all costs incidental thereto) shall be estimated by the surveyor of the local authority, but in case the owner or occupier of the premises, as the case may be, is dissatisfied with such estimate, he may, if the estimate is under fifty pounds, apply to a court of summary jurisdiction to fix the amount to be paid for such cost, and if the estimate is over fifty pounds have the same determined by arbitration in manner provided by the Public Health Acts.

The estimate is to be made in order to enable the owner or occupier to pay the amount in advance. No provision is made for the case when the actual cost is less or more than the estimated sum; and it is not clear that the owner or occupier in the one case, or the local authority in the other, can recover the difference.

It seems to follow from s. 20 of the S. J. A., 1879, that a case arising under the text must be determined in open court, i.e., by two or more justices sitting in a petty sessional or an occasional court-house.

For the provisions of the P. H. A., 1875, as to arbitration, see ss. 179, 180, ante, pp. 425, 426.

(3) A local authority may agree with the owner of any premises that any sewer or drain which such owner is required, or desires, to make, alter, or enlarge, or any part of such sewer or drain, shall be made, altered, or enlarged by the local authority.

The owner of a house which has no sufficient drain for effectual drainage may be required to provide a proper drain under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 23, ante, p. 83; by ibid., s. 25, it is unlawful to build or rebuild a house in an urban district or to occupy a house which has been newly built or rebuilt, unless and until a covered drain or drains be constructed, of such size and materials, and at such level, and with such fall as on the report of the surveyor may appear to the urban authority to be necessary for the effectual drainage of such house; and such drain or drains are to empty into a sewer if there is one within 100 feet, otherwise into a covered cesspool or as the urban authority may direct. In any of these cases the owner may agree with the authority for the execution of the necessary work. It does not appear that an owner may be required to alter or enlarge any drain unless it is insufficient within the meaning of s. 23, or is a nuisance within the meaning of s. 41 or s. 91 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, pp. 105, 165. In any case, however, when the owner desires to make, alter, or enlarge a drain, he may agree with the authority under the provisions contained in the text.

The authority will be in no better position than the owner himself if it becomes necessary to enter the private lands of another person for the purpose of laying a drain (see Wood v. Ealing Tenants, Ltd., ante, pp. 79, 85). Therefore it behoves an authority to take care in framing an agreement.

Extension of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 41.

19. (a)—(1) Where two or more houses belonging to different owners are connected with a public sewer by a single private drain (b), an application may be made under section forty-one of the Public Health Act, 1875 (relating to complaints as to nuisances from drains) (b), and the local authority may recover any expenses incurred by them in executing any works under the powers conferred on them by that section from the owners of the houses (c) in such shares and proportions as shall be settled by their surveyor or (in case of dispute) by a court of summary jurisdiction. Section 19.

(a) This section is one of the provisions which become operative in rural districts upon the adoption of Part III. by the rural council (see s. 50, post, p. 860).

Several rural councils who (not being desirous that other provisions in Part III. should be applied to their districts, as would be the case if the Part were adopted) have applied to the L. G. B. under s. 5 for powers under s. 19 have not met with success, the view of the Board apparently being that the difficulty of interpreting the section is so great (see notes of cases below) that it is undesirable to issue an order declaring it to be in force in a rural district.

(b) Under the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 4, 13, a drain which receives the drainage of two or more buildings is a sewer (see note to s. 4, ante, p. 25), and is vested in the local authority, and it is their duty to repair, cleanse, and keep it so as not to be a nuisance or injurious to health (see ss. 15, 19 of that Act). This is still the law with respect to a drain which receives the drainage of two or more buildings belonging to the same owner. When the buildings belong to different owners, the provisions of the text make an important modification in the law.

"Single private drain."

In Self v. Hove Commissioners, [1895] 1 Q. B. 685; 59 J. P. 103, two houses belonging to different owners were connected with a public sewer by a common pipe. The local authority who had adopted Part III. of this Act, served upon one of the owners a notice under the Act of 1875, addressed to both, requiring them to abate a nuisance arising from the common pipe by doing certain works, and stating that unless the nuisance were abated the authority would proceed to enforce the abatement and recover costs and penalties. The owner upon whom such notice was served accordingly did the works, and brought an action against the authority to recover the cost as money paid at their request. It was held that the notice given by the defendants to the plaintiff was not a request to do the work which would support the action; that no such request could be implied, because the defendants were not themselves compellable to do the work, and under s. 41 of the Act of 1875, and s. 19 of the Act of 1890, could have compelled the owners to do it, and that therefore the defendants were not liable. In Hill v. Hair, [1895] 1 Q. B. 906; 59 J. P. 374, by a system of drainage established before 1848, a single brick drain on the respondent's premises conveyed the drainage of his house and of other houses belonging to different owners into an adjacent ditch. In 1853 the local authority of the district substituted for the ditch a public sewer, and the brick drain was connected with it. In 1887 a local Act was passed which provided that where two or more houses were connected with a single private drain which conveyed their sewage into a public sewer, the local authority should have all powers conferred by s. 41 of the P. H. A., 1875. The local authority had also adopted Part III. of the Act of 1890. It was held that the brick drain was not a single private drain within the meaning of the local Act or the Act of 1890, because on the passing of the P. H. A., 1848, such drain became and had ever since been a sewer vested in the local authority, and repairable by them, and that, therefore, they were not entitled to exercise against the respondents the powers conferred on them by s. 41 of the Act of 1875.

However, in Bradford v. Mayor, etc. of Eastbourne, [1896] 2 Q. B. 205; 60 J. P. 501, Self v. Hove Commissioners was followed, and Hill v. Hair disapproved. In this case a drain pipe passing through private property had from a date prior to 1890 received the drainage of several houses belonging to different owners before it joined the public sewer. The pipe having become a nuisance, the local authority of the district, who had adopted Part III. of the Act of 1890, gave to the owners of the houses notice under s. 41 of the P. H. A., 1875, to repair it, and on failure of the owners to comply with the notice, executed the necessary work themselves and claimed to recover the expenses incurred. It was held that the pipe in question was a single private drain within the meaning of the text, and that the authority were entitled to recover. This decision was followed in Seal v. Merthyr Tydfil U. D. C., [1897] 2 Q. B. 543; 61 J. P. 551.

The above cases were considered in two subsequent appeals heard together, with the result that the decision in Bradford v. Eastbourne Corporation, supra, was approved and the decision in Hill v. Hair, supra, must now be regarded as having been overruled. See Thompson v. Eccles Corporation; Haedicke v. Friern Barnet U. D. C., [1905]

Note to Section 19.

1 K. B. 110; 69 J. P. 45. The circumstances in the Eccles Case were as follows: The appellant was the owner of a block of seven houses built in the year 1875, in accordance with plans approved by the local authority. Adjacent to and in a line with this block and separated therefrom by a private passage giving access to the backs of the houses, were two other blocks of six houses belonging to a second owner. A six-inch pipe passed through and under these twelve houses, and received the drainage from each of them. In continuation of this pipe there was a nine-inch pipe running through and under the cellars of and receiving the drainage from the appellant's houses. The last-mentioned pipe discharged into a main sewer. Both the six-inch and the nine-inch pipes were laid through private property until the main sewer was reached. [See the plan in the report at 69 J. P. 45.] The pipe at a point where it drained the houses belonging to both owners was held to be a "single private drain." In the Friern Barnet Case the position with regard to the pipe there in question was undistinguishable, but a second point was decided. It was held that when a nuisance in a single private drain exists only on the property of one owner, the authority may call upon such owner to remedy it under s. 41 of the P. H. A., 1875, and s. 19 of the Act of 1890; and no occasion arises for serving notices, or making an apportionment, upon the other owners under s. 19.

In a later case the Court of Appeal was called upon to decide whether the upper portion of a pipe might be a "sewer" although the lower portion was (according to admissions in the case) a "single private drain." Twelve houses numbered with odd numbers from 51 to 73, were the property of one owner, No. 75 belonging to another person, and Nos. 77 to 81 to a third person. At the rear of these sixteen houses ran a common drain which was connected with the public sewer in front of such houses by a branch drain running at right angles under a passage between the Nos. 73 and 75. Each of the sixteen houses was connected with the common drain by a separate pipe, which conveyed the sewage of such house to the common drain, and thence into the public sewer through the branch drain. The branch drain and the common drain were constructed wholly upon private property. [See the plan in the report at 69 J. P. 225.] It was admitted, or not disputed, that the branch drain into the public sewer was a single private drain, and the question thereupon arose whether that portion of the common drain which ran at the back of the twelve houses all owned by one man, was, down to its junction with the branch drain, also a single private drain. It was held that it was not (Jackson v. Wimbledon U. D. C., [1905] 2 K. B. 27; 69 J. P. 225).

In the last-mentioned case it was admitted that the branch drain running into the public sewer was a single private drain; but in a later case the questions arose, first, whether a line of pipes into which sewers emptied themselves was a single private drain, and, secondly, if it was, whether in view of the fact that sewers intervened between such line of pipes and the houses, the houses could be said to be connected with the public sewer by such single private drain. A row of houses, of which six belonged to the respondent and the remainder to other owners, were drained by a system of pipes arranged as follows: The houses were drained in pairs; each house was drained by a separate pipe which discharged into a pipe common to both houses, and each "common pipe" discharged into a line of pipes, laid in private ground behind the houses, which conveyed the drainage to a public sewer. [See the plan in the report at 71 J. P. 89.] It was admitted that the "common pipes" through which the drainage of the respondent's houses passed were sewers. It was held by the Divisional Court that the line of pipes laid behind the houses was not a single private drain. The Court of Appeal held that, even assuming it was a single private drain, yet, as the "common pipes" were sewers, the respondent's houses were not connected with the public sewer by such single private drain: see Wood Green U. D. C. v. Joseph, [1907] 1 K. B. 182; 71 J. P. 89. On appeal ([1908] A. C. 419) it was held by the majority of the law lords that the line of pipes behind the houses was not a single private drain on the ground that s. 19 of the Act of 1890 only relates to conduits which ss. 23 and 25 of the Act of 1875 require the owners of property to provide or see provided; and that on the facts stated in the case it did not appear that the line of pipes in question was one to which s. 23 or s. 25 applied, or one which, irrespective of the definitions of "drain" and "sewer," would have come within the purview of s. 41 of the Act of 1875. The ground of the decision in the Court of Appeal, and apparently that of the Divisional Court also, did not meet with the approval of the majority of the law lords. Lord ASHBOURNE, however, agreed with the decisions below.

Each of six houses belonging to five different owners was connected by a drain to a line of pipes, which ran along the rear of the houses, and then into a public sewer. The line of pipes was laid in private ground by the various owners at their joint cost in order to drain all the houses. It was held (under the corresponding Irish section) that it was a "single private drain" (Holywood U. D. C. v. Grainger, [1912] 2 I. R. 126).

The defendants were the owners of a plot of land within the plaintiffs' urban district abutting upon the H. Road, in which was laid a public sewer. In or about the year 1861 the defendants erected upon this plot of land two rows of cottages, for occupation by their servants, with a road about twenty feet wide between them. The road was a cul-de-sac and formed the only access by road and for vehicles to the back yards of the cottages. The entrance to the road was originally closed by gates, but these were removed between 1865 and 1870 so that any member of the public might use the road, but it had never been repaired, cleansed, or lighted at the public expense. In 1877, in consequence of a requisition by the local authority, the defendants laid a line of pipes in the centre of the road to take the drainage from the cottages, which were connected with it in pairs by means of Y-shaped pipes, into the public sewer in H. Road. The defendants subsequently constructed gullies and pipes whereby the surface water of the cul-de-sac road was conveyed into the line of pipes in question. The plaintiffs, purporting to act under s. 49 of the Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation Act, 1903, and s. 41 of the Public Health Act, 1875, having required the defendants to abate a nuisance in respect of the drainage, cottages and roadway, and having executed the necessary works themselves, claimed a declaration of charge upon the property for the cost of the work in connection with the main line of pipes:—Held, that there was not sufficient evidence of dedication to constitute the cul-de-sac a highway, but that, whether that was so or not the line of pipes was a "single private drain" within s. 49, and that the plaintiffs were accordingly entitled to the declaration of charge which they claimed (Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation v. North Eastern Rail. Co., [1916] 1 Ch. 31; 80 J. P. 57).

(c) See the P. H. A., 1875, s. 41, ante, p. 105.

As to the recovery of the expenses, see the next sub-section. No penalty is imposed for non-compliance with a notice under s. 19: see Lancaster v. Barnes U. D. C., infra. See, however, a dictum of STIRLING, L.J., in Haedicke v. Friern Barnet U. D. C. at [1905] 1 K. B. 124.

The section applies to every case where the fact that a single private drain is in bad condition or requires alteration and amendment causes the drain to be a nuisance or injurious to health, even though the alteration or amendment necessary to abate the nuisance may involve an alteration of the structure (Southwold Corporation v. Crowdy (1903), 67 J. P. 278; 1 L. G. R. 899).

A joint notice under s. 41 of the P. H. A., 1875, may be given to several different owners, and the fact that neither of the owners can relay the part of the drain situate in the other's premises without committing a trespass is no objection to the validity of the notice (Lancaster v. Barnes U. D. C., [1898] 1 Q. B. 855; 62 J. P. 405). See also the decision in Wood Green U. D. C. v. Joseph, ante, p. 834, as to the written application to the local authority under s. 41 of the Act of 1875, and the decision in Haedicke v. Friern Barnet U. D. C., ante, p. 834, as to the necessity for service of notice on all the owners, where the nuisance can be located in the property of one owner.

This section gives a right of appeal from the surveyor to a court of summary jurisdiction.

Where no proceedings are taken under s. 41 of the P. H. A., 1875, this section does not affect the general obligation of the local authority under s. 15 of that Act to keep in repair all sewers belonging to them, including a sewer which may be treated as a single private drain for the purposes of the text (R. v. Mayor, etc. of Hastings, [1897] 1 Q. B. 46; 60 J. P. 759).

The effect of s. 19 is that "a sewer may still be vested in the local authority for all the purposes which are expressed in s. 13 and the following sections of the Act of 1875, and yet the private owner may for the purposes of abating a nuisance be under the obligations which are imposed upon him by s. 19 of the Act of 1890 and s. 41 of the Act of 1875": per WARRINGTON, J., in Pemsel and Wilson v. Tucker, [1907] 2 Ch. 191; 71 J. P. 547.

(2) Such expenses may be recovered summarily or may be declared by the urban authority to be private improvement expenses under the Public Health Acts, and may be recovered accordingly.

It may be doubted whether this express provision was necessary, having regard to the concluding words of s. 41 of the P. H. A., 1875.

Note to Section 19.

Private improvement expenses are recoverable by improvement rates under ss. 213—215, 232, of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, pp. 493—496, 520; and see also s. 257, ante, p. 568. As to appeal, see s. 7, ante, p. 823, and notes thereto.

(3) For the purposes of this section the expression "drain" includes a drain used for the drainage of more than one building.

This sub-section does not affect the definition of a "drain," except for the limited purposes of this section. For all other purposes, the private drain would be a "sewer" within the definition in the P. H. A., 1875, s. 4: see per WRIGHT, J., in R. v. Mayor, etc. of Hastings, ante, p. 835, and see per WARRINGTON, J., in Pemsel and Wilson v. Tucker, ante, p. 835.

Sanitary conveniences for public accommodation.

20.—(1) Where an urban authority (a) provide and maintain for public accommodation any sanitary conveniences (b), such authority may—

(i) Make regulations (c) with respect to the management thereof and make byelaws (d) as to the decent conduct of persons using the same;

(ii) Let the same from time to time for any term not exceeding three years at such rent and subject to such conditions as they may think fit (e);

(iii) Charge such fees for the use of any water-closets provided by them as they may think proper.

(a) This section applies only to urban authorities. Its powers may, however, be obtained by a rural council, in conjunction (so far as sub-s. (1) is concerned) with those of the P. H. A., 1875, s. 39, by order of the M. of H. See notes to that section, and to ss. 3 and 5, ante, pp. 104, 808, 811. See also the provisions of the P. H. A., 1907, s. 47, post, p. 1049.

(b) "Sanitary conveniences" are defined by s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826, to include urinals, water-closets, earth-closets, privies, ashpits, and any similar conveniences. An urban authority may provide and maintain these for public accommodation, under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 39, ante, p. 102, and under ibid., s. 45, ante, p. 115, they may provide receptacles for the temporary deposit and collection of dust, ashes, and rubbish. As to the extended meaning of "ashpit," see s. 11 (1), ante, p. 825. To these conveniences the provisions in the text will apply.

(c) Regulations are made under the P. H. A., 1875. s. 188, ante, p. 446, and require no confirmation.

(d) Byelaws are made in manner provided by s. 9, ante, p. 824, and must be confirmed by the Ministry of Health.

(e) This seems to imply that the use of the conveniences, or any of them, may be charged for by the lessee, though the urban authority seem only to have power themselves to charge for the use of water-closets.

By the P. H. A., 1907, other powers in this behalf are conferred on local authorities if s. 47 of that Act is declared by the Ministry of Health to be in force. That section, after enacting that "the local authority may provide and maintain . . . sanitary conveniences . . . and lavatories . . . and may employ and pay attendants and make reasonable charges for the use of any sanitary conveniences (other than a urinal) or of any lavatory so provided," empowers an authority to make byelaws for the management of the sanitary conveniences and lavatories, and as to the conduct of persons frequenting the same, and also empowers an authority to let any such sanitary conveniences and any such lavatories for such periods, at such rents, and subject to such conditions as to the charges to be made for the use thereof and otherwise, as they think proper. It will be observed that the section extends to lavatories, which are not expressly mentioned in the definition clause (s. 11 (3)) of the Act of 1890, but it gives no power to make regulations: it gives, however, express power to charge in respect of any sanitary convenience other than a urinal or any lavatory.

(2) No public sanitary convenience shall, after the adoption of this Part of this Act, be erected in or accessible from any street without the consent in writing of the urban authority, who may give such consent upon such terms as to the use thereof or the removal thereof at any time, if required by the urban authority, as they may think fit.

A sanitary convenience could never be erected in a street vested in the authority without their consent (see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, ante, p. 273), unless it was entirely subterranean: see Mayor, etc. of Tunbridge Wells v. Baird, ante, p. 104. Nor could consent be given to the erection of such a convenience either wholly or partly above ground so as to be an obstruction. Now, however, the authority adopting this Part of the Act may permit the erection of a public convenience wholly or partly above ground in any street (including private streets; see note to s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826) or on private property, but accessible from any street, although it may cause an obstruction in the street. The authority may give or withhold their consent altogether or upon terms.

An appeal to quarter sessions will lie under s. 7, ante, p. 823, by any person aggrieved by the withholding of consent under this section.

Reference may be made to Wellstead v. Paddington Vestry (1891), 66 L. T. 194; 40 W. R. 254, decided with reference to a local Act in the metropolis.

See also the P. H. A., 1907, s. 43, in the note to sub-s. (4).

(3) Any person who erects a sanitary convenience in contravention of this enactment, and after a notice in writing to that effect from the urban authority does not remove the same, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds, and to a daily penalty not exceeding twenty shillings.

As to the definition of "daily penalty," see s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826.

As to the recovery of the penalty, see s. 6. Appeal against a conviction will lie to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823.

See also the P. H. A., 1907, s. 43, in note to sub-s. (4).

(4) Nothing in this section shall extend to any sanitary convenience now or hereafter to be erected by any railway company within their railway station yard or the approaches thereto.

By the P. H. A., 1907, s. 43, post (if declared by the L. G. B. (now M. of H.) to be in force in any district, and subject to such conditions or adaptations as may be specified in the Order of the Board): "(1) If any urinal or other sanitary convenience opening on any street (whether erected before or after the commencement of this section) is so placed or constructed as to be a nuisance or offensive to public decency, the local authority, by notice in writing, may require the owner to remove it within a reasonable time fixed by the local authority. (2) If the owner fails to comply with the notice, be shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty shillings and to a daily penalty not exceeding ten shillings" This section contains no saving in favour of railway companies.

Sanitary conveniences used in common.

21. (a) With respect to any sanitary convenience (b) used in common by the occupiers of two or more separate dwelling-houses (c), or by other persons, the following provisions shall have effect:

(1) If any person injures or improperly fouls any such sanitary convenience, or anything used in connexion therewith, he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten shillings (d):

(a) This section is applicable to rural authorities who adopt Part III. (see s. 50, post, p. 860).

Note to Section 21.

(b) For the definition of a "sanitary convenience," see s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826.

(c) It should be remembered that the P. H. A., 1875, does not require a separate water-closet, earth-closet, or privy for every individual house (Clutton Union (Guardians of) v. Pointing (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 340; 43 J. P. 686).

(d) As to the recovery of this penalty, see s. 6. Appeal lies against conviction to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823.

(2) If any sanitary convenience or the approaches thereto, or the walls, floors, seats, or fittings thereof is or are in the opinion of the urban authority or of the inspector of nuisances or medical officer of health of such authority in such a state or condition as to be a nuisance or annoyance to any inhabitant of the district for want of the proper cleansing thereof, such of the persons having the use thereof in common as aforesaid as may be in default, or in the absence of proof satisfactory to the court as to which of the persons having the use thereof in common is in default, each of those persons shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten shillings, and to a daily penalty not exceeding five shillings.

See the notes to the preceding sub-section.

For the definition of a "daily penalty," see s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826.

Sanitary conveniences for manufactories, etc.

22. (a)—(1) Every building, used as a workshop or manufactory, or where persons are employed or intended to be employed in any trade or business, whether erected before or after the adoption of this Part of this Act in any district, shall be provided with sufficient and suitable accommodation in the way of sanitary conveniences (b), having regard to the number of persons employed in or in attendance at such building, and also where persons of both sexes are employed, or intended to be employed, or in attendance, with proper separate accommodation for persons of each sex.

(a) Where this section is in force neither s. 38 of the P. H. A., 1875 (ante, p. 101), nor s. 9 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901 (in App. I., post, Vol. II.), applies (see sub-s. (4), infra, and sub-s. (4) of s. 9). The section cannot be adopted by a rural council.

The Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, s. 5 (in App. I., post, Vol. II.), applies to the cases provided for by this section, so that it is the duty of a factory inspector on a deficiency of accommodation in a factory being brought to his attention to give notice of it to the district council. If the council fail to take proceedings within one month, the factory inspector may himself take proceedings and give a notice under sub-s. (2) of this section, and prosecute for penalties in case of default under sub-s. (3). On such prosecution, the justices cannot question the validity of the requirements of the notice (Tracey v. Pretty, [1901] 1 Q. B. 444; 65 J. P. 196); and the expenses of any successful proceedings so far as not recovered from any other person are recoverable from the council.

It will be seen that under the Act of 1901 the initiative is left to the Inspector of Factories. Some sanitary authorities consider this to be unsatisfactory and prefer to take powers themselves under the Act of 1890.

As to conveniences in coal mines, see p. 101, ante.

(b) The term "sanitary convenience" includes urinals, water-closets, earth-closets, privies, ashpits, and any similar conveniences (s. 11 (3)). For the extended meaning of "ashpit," see s. 11 (1), ante, p. 825. There is no recognised standard for the proportion of sanitary conveniences to number of persons employed, but in London and all the principal towns one to every twenty or thirty is the proportion usually observed. It will be observed that this section only applies to buildings, not to all work-places: see Bennett v. Harding, ante, p. 171, and the P. H. (London) A., 1891, s. 38.

Section 22.

(2) Where it appears to an urban authority on the report of their surveyor (a) that the provisions of this section are not complied with in the case of any building, the urban authority may, if they think fit, by written notice (b), require the owner or occupier of any such building to make such alterations and additions therein as may be required to give such sufficient, suitable, and proper accommodation as aforesaid.

(a) The report of the surveyor is a condition precedent to proceedings under this section. See a form of report in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. X., at p. 509. The surveyor must be the fit and proper person duly appointed to be surveyor under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 189, not a person performing the duties of the surveyor pro tem.: see Lewis v. Weston-super-Mare L. B. (1888), 40 Ch. D. 55. The decision in this case was distinguished by KEKEWICH, J., in Kendal v. Lewisham Borough Council (1903), 67 J. P. 236; 1 L. G. R. 416, where he held that an order made under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 105, is valid if made by a surveyor of the council for the time being, on the ground that in s. 105 the expression is "surveyor for the time being"; an appeal was settled (1903), 20 T. L. R. 21.

(b) This notice may be authenticated by the signature of the clerk or surveyor (see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 266, ante, p. 593). The notice should specify the alterations and additions which the urban authority require to be made (per Lord ALVERSTONE, C.J., in Tracey v. Pretty, [1901] 1 Q. B. 444). See a form of notice in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. X., p. 510. Appeal against the requirements of the notice lies to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823.

(3) Any person who neglects or refuses to comply with any such notice shall be liable for each default to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds, and to a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

As to the recovery of this penalty, see s. 6. On proceedings for penalties, the validity of the requirements of the notice cannot be questioned by the justices (Tracey v. Pretty, [1901] 1 Q. B. 444; 65 J. P. 196). Appeal against conviction lies to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823.

For the definition of "daily penalty," see s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826.

(4) Where this section is in force, section thirty-eight of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall be repealed.

See the provisions of the section referred to, ante, p. 101; and see the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, ss. 5, 9, in App. I., post, Vol. II., referred to on p. 838, ante.

Extension of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 157.

23. (a)—(1) Section one hundred and fifty-seven of the Public Health Act, 1875 (b), shall be extended so as to empower every urban authority to make byelaws with respect to the following matters; that is to say:

The keeping water-closets supplied with sufficient water for flushing (c);

The structure of floors, hearths, and staircases, and the height of rooms intended to be used for human habitation (d);

The paving of yards and open spaces in connection with dwelling-houses (e); and

The provision in connexion with the laying out of new streets of secondary means of access where necessary for the purpose of the removal of house refuse and other matters (f).

Building byelaws.

(a) Urban authorities acquire all the powers of this section when they adopt Part III. The position of rural authorities is more involved, but it would seem that by the adoption of Part III. to the extent permissible to rural authorities (see ss. 3 and 50) such an authority acquires the powers of sub-s. (1) of s. 23 except as to matters not mentioned in sub-s. (3), and also certain powers under sub-ss. (2) and (4) and under ss. 157 and 158 of the P. H. A., 1875. An order of the Ministry of Health, however, under s. 5 of this Act (which is frequently preferred to an "adoption") may relate to any of the powers of the Act, and to the district as a whole or to certain parishes. See also notes to ss. 3 and 5 and to sub-s. (3) below.

Note to Section 23.

(b) See s. 157 of the P. H. A., 1875, and the notes thereto, ante, p. 327; and as to the making of byelaws, see s. 9, ante, p. 824.

(c) Where there are no byelaws of this kind in force, the only way in which proper flushing apparatus can be enforced is by proceeding under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 36, on the ground that the water-closet is insufficient (see Bogle v. Sherborne L. B., ante, p. 98).

(d) As to floors partly of steel and partly of timber, for which no special provision is made in the byelaws, see Towers v. Brown (1903), 2 L. G. R. 942.

Defendants were summoned for infringement of a byelaw that "every person who shall erect a new building, and shall construct any room therein so that it may be used for human habitation . . . if such room is not intended to be used as a sleeping room . . . shall construct such room so that it shall be not less in any part thereof than 9 feet in height." They had constructed cottages, each of which contained a scullery 8 feet 3 inches in height. The sculleries contained only a slopstone and stone bench and no fireplace or flue, and were not of sufficient size for taking meals or sleeping. The justices found that the sculleries were not rooms which might be used for human habitation. It was held that there was no rule of law requiring the justices to find that the sculleries, being without fireplaces, were constructed so that they might be used for human habitation, and that their decision was right (Bain v. Compstall Co-op. Soc. (1911), 75 J. P. 76; 103 L. T. 759).

(e) On the application to any district of the P. H. A., 1907, s. 25, further powers as to the paving, etc. of yards will be obtained. See the section, post, p. 1034.

The Ministry of Health will probably not invest a rural district council with powers under this part of s. 23 of the Act of 1890, when powers under s. 25 of the Act of 1907 have been given.

(f) A council obtained confirmation by the L. G. B. of a byelaw which ran: "Every person who shall lay out a new street shall provide in connection with such street a secondary means of access of the width of 12 feet at least where necessary." On the question being raised whether the words "where necessary" applied to the width of the street or to the street itself, the Board expressed the opinion that the words must be read as qualifying the provision of a secondary means of access and not the width, so that it would be optional to the council to determine, according to the facts of each case, whether a secondary means of access should be provided.

(2) Any byelaws under that section as above extended with regard to the drainage of buildings, and to water-closets, earth-closets, privies, ashpits, and cesspools, in connexion with buildings, and the keeping water-closets supplied with sufficient water for flushing, may be made so as to affect buildings erected before the times mentioned in the said section.

See note (a) on p. 839, ante, and note to next sub-section, as to the application of this sub-section to rural authorities.

For the times mentioned in s. 157 see the first proviso, set out ante, p. 327. The meaning of the provision in the text is that the byelaws above described may be applied to all buildings already erected, as well as to new buildings: see Simmons v. Malling Rural District Council, ante, p. 348; and cf. Fulham Vestry v. Solomon, [1896] 1 Q. B. 198; 60 J. P. 72, decided under ss. 39, 40, 41 of the P. H. (London) A., 1891. See also Agar v. Nokes and Nokes (1905), 69 J. P. 374; 3 L. G. R. 1168, where the expression "reconstructed" (used with reference to a drain) in byelaws under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, applying to buildings erected before the confirmation thereof, was construed. Cf. also as to a plumber's responsibility under such byelaws (Kershaw v. Brooks, [1909] 2 K. B. 265; 73 J. P. 231).

(3) The provisions of the said section (as amended by this Act), so far as they relate to byelaws with respect to the structure of walls and foundations of new buildings for purposes of health, and with respect to the matters mentioned in sub-sections (3) and (4) of the said section, and with respect to the structure of floors, the height of rooms to be used for human habitation, and to the keeping of water-closets supplied with sufficient water for flushing, shall be extended so as to empower rural authorities to make byelaws in respect to the said matters, and to provide for the observance of such byelaws, and to enforce the same as if such powers were conferred on the rural authorities by virtue of an Order of the Local Government Board made on the day when this Part of this Act is adopted; and section one hundred and fifty-eight of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall also apply to any such authority, and shall be in force in every rural district where this Part of this Act is adopted. Section 23.

Building byelaws in rural districts.

As regards the effect of sub-s. (3) upon rural authorities it is useful to quote a memorandum prefixed by the Local Government Board to their model byelaws as to buildings in essentially rural localities. The Board state as follows:

"1. The authority to make byelaws for regulating new streets and buildings and matters connected therewith is conferred on urban district councils by section 157 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and section 23 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890.

"2. Rural district councils are not directly authorised to make such byelaws, but can obtain power to make some or all of them in the following ways:—

(i) A rural district council can, by adopting Part III. of the Act of 1890, acquire power to make byelaws upon the subject-matters referred to in paragraph 3 below; or

(ii) A rural district council may make application to the Local Government Board to be invested with such of the powers conferred by the sections as they deem suitable to their district, or to any one or more contributory places within it. Such an application can be made whether the council have adopted Part III. of the Act of 1890 or not. The mode of making such an application is dealt with in paragraph 7 below.

"3. The powers obtained under section 23 of the Act of 1890 where Part III. has been adopted, or where the provisions of that section have been put in force by an Order of the Board, enable a rural district council to make byelaws on the following subjects:—

(1) The structure of walls and foundations of new buildings for purposes of health;
(2) The sufficiency of space about buildings to secure a free circulation of air;
(3) The ventilation of buildings;
(4) The drainage of buildings;
(5) Water-closets, earth-closets, privies, ashpits, and cesspools in connection with buildings;
(6) The closing of buildings unfit for human habitation;
(7) The structure of floors;
(8) The height of rooms to be used for human habitation;
(9) The keeping of water-closets supplied with sufficient water for flushing;
(10) The alteration of buildings;
(11) The observance and enforcement of such byelaws by requiring notices and plans.

"4. It has been represented to the Board that it would be useful if a series of model byelaws were framed, dealing only with the subjects which are most in need of regulation and control in a rural district from a sanitary point of view, and omitting the additional requirements usually found in a code of byelaws in force in an urban district. The Board have, therefore, drawn up the accompanying series of model byelaws. They are confined to matters affecting health, and are limited to the subject-matters numbered (1) to (6), (9) and (11) in paragraph 3 above.

"The Board are not in a position to advise as to what byelaws are needed in particular rural districts. The responsibility rests with the rural district council in each instance of determining, on consideration of the circumstances of their district, what byelaws (if any) they will propose to make. The model is intended to serve as a guide to them in dealing with the most important sanitary requirements in connection with new buildings. It must not be regarded as excluding the adoption of further provisions, where these are found to be necessary, dealing with the other matters mentioned in section 23 of the Act of 1890, or in section 157 of the Act of 1875. Portions of many rural districts are distinctly urban in character, and the development of building is constantly changing the aspect of the country, and it devolves on rural district councils to endeavour to apply to the several parts of their districts such regulations as the circumstances may, from time to time, seem to require. The present series contains no clauses dealing with questions of stability or the prevention of fire, or with the level, width, and construction of new streets. These are all matters that may properly be regulated in portions of rural districts which are assuming an urban character, and circumstances may arise which may render it necessary to deal with one or more of them even in less closely populated areas. Where more comprehensive byelaws are considered to be necessary for the whole or any part of the district, the rural district council may be referred to the model series prepared for use in urban districts. They should carefully study the clauses and select those that are appropriate to the needs of the district, or the portion of it under consideration. In this connection it may be mentioned that a series of byelaws may be made for part only of a contributory place where the circumstances justify this course. The part should, however, be very clearly defined by a well-recognised boundary line. . . .

"7. If a rural district council desire to obtain urban powers by an Order of the Local Government Board they should pass a resolution authorising an application to be made to the Board under section 276 of the Act of 1875, or section 5 of the Act of 1890, as the case may be, for an order investing them with such powers. The resolution should specify the provisions which it is desired to put in force, and the particular contributory places in respect of which the powers are sought.

"A copy of the resolution should be sent to the Board, together with a brief statement of the grounds upon which the application is made.

"If any such application is made with reference to section 157 of the Act of 1875 it should extend to section 158 of the Act also, unless section 23 (3) of the Act of 1890 is already in force.

"If powers under section 23 of the Act of 1890 are desired the council should consider the desirability of including the powers of sections 25 and 33 of the same Act in the application."

(4) Every local authority may make byelaws to prevent buildings which have been erected in accordance with byelaws made under the Public Health Acts from being altered in such a way that if at first so constructed they would have contravened the byelaws.

This sub-section supplies a defect in the previous legislation. By the P. H. A., 1875, s. 159, ante, p. 361, a new building is deemed to include the conversion into a dwelling-house of a building not originally constructed for human habitation; and such a conversion brought the building within the byelaws as to new buildings. But there was nothing to prevent the conversion of a dwelling-house into a public building or a building of the warehouse class, although when so used it contravened the byelaws applicable to such buildings. The adoption of this section will remove this defect. See also the P. H. A., 1907, s. 23, post.

"The Public Health Acts" as used in s. 23 (4), supra, seems to include the statutes consolidated and amended by the P. H. A., 1875.

Rooms over privies, etc., not to be used as dwelling or sleeping rooms.

24.—(1) Where any portion of a room extends immediately over any privy (not being a water-closet or earth-closet), or immediately over any cesspool, midden, or ashpit (a), that room, whether built before or after the adoption of this Part of this Act, shall not be occupied as a dwelling-place, sleeping-place, or workroom, or place of habitual employment of any person in any manufacture, trade, or business during any portion of the day or night.

This section can only be put in force in a rural district by an Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5.

(2) Any person who after the expiration of one month after the adoption of this Part of this Act, and after notice from the local authority of not less than seven days, so occupies, and any person who suffers to be so occupied, any such room, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings, and to a daily penalty not exceeding ten shillings.

As to the recovery of this penalty, see s. 6. Appeal against the conviction lies to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823. For the definition of "daily penalty," see s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826.

Penalty or erecting buildings on ground filled up with offensive matter.

25. (a)—(1) It shall not be lawful to erect a new building (b) on any ground which has been filled up with any matter impregnated with fæcal, animal, or vegetable matter, or upon which any such matter has been deposited unless and until such matter shall have been properly removed by excavation or otherwise, or shall have been rendered or have become innocuous.

(a) This section may be adopted by a rural authority with the other provisions mentioned in s. 50, post, p. 860. If powers as to building byelaws are sought by order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5 it is desirable that these powers also and those of s. 33 should be included in the application. See notes to s. 23 (3). When in force s. 25 may have a considerable effect on the responsibilities of lessees for waste: see West Ham Central Charity Board v. East London Waterworks, ante, p. 115.

(b) An extended meaning is given to this term by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 159, ante, p. 361; it includes a building pulled down and rebuilt. And where the P. H. A., 1907, s. 23, has been applied in any district, a still more comprehensive meaning will attach to the term (see that section, p. 1032, post).

(2) Every person who does or causes, or wilfully permits to be done, any act in contravention of this section shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds, and a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

For the recovery of this penalty, see s. 6. Appeal against conviction lies to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823. For the definition of a "daily penalty," see s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826.

Power to make byelaws for certain sanitary purposes.

26.—(1) An urban authority (a) may make byelaws (b) in respect of the following matters, namely:

(a) For prescribing the times for the removal or carriage through the streets of any fæcal or offensive or noxious matter or liquid, whether such matter or liquid shall be in course of removal or carriage from within or without or through their district (c):

(b) For providing that the vessel, receptacle, cart, or carriage used therefor shall be properly constructed and covered so as to prevent the escape of any such matter or liquid:

(c) For compelling the cleansing (d) of any place whereon such matter or liquid shall have been dropped or spilt in such removal or carriage.

A doubt formerly existed whether byelaws upon these points could be made and enforced by urban and rural district councils whose districts are situate within the metropolitan police district in consequence of a provision in the Metropolitan Police Act, 1839, which imposed a penalty upon any person who infringed certain stated rules as to the emptying of privies, the removal of offensive matter through streets, the use of covered vehicles, and the cleaning of places in which offensive matter may have been spilled. The provision in question was repealed, as regards the county of London, by the Public Health (London) Act, 1891; but otherwise it remained in force till 1906 with the result that until that date there were very few areas within the police district where such byelaws were made. It has now, however, been wholly repealed by the Removal of Offensive Matter Act, 1906, post, p. 1017, but in proposing byelaws on the subject for a district adjoining London, it is desirable for the council to have due regard to the byelaws of the London County Council, so that the prescribed hours shall not render impossible or difficult the removal of offensive matter from London into the surrounding districts. The Police Act permitted removal during the hours of darkness, but this is virtually prohibited by the London byelaws, and the L. G. B. have expressed their unwillingness to confirm a byelaw which prescribes hours of darkness for removal on the ground that proper supervision by officers is hardly feasible at such a time, and that offences are more likely to arise.

Complaint having been made of a nuisance caused by the refuse brought from London to certain parts of a rural district the L. G. B. advised that the difficulty might to some extent be met by byelaws, and stated that they had in some cases, where a district council were satisfied that such a requirement would be a reasonable one, assented to an increase of the distance of 100 yards suggested in model clause 8 of the series of byelaws with respect to nuisances. (That clause deals with the deposit of loads of filth within a prescribed distance from streets, dwelling-houses, schools, churches, etc.) The Board at the same time drew attention to the provision in s. 26 (1) of the P. H. A., 1890.

'(a) This sub-section, unlike sub-s. (2), cannot be adopted in rural districts (see s. 50, post, p. 860); but it may be put in force by Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5.

The provisions of this sub-section appear to be supplemental to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 44, by which where a local authority do not themselves undertake or contract for the removal of house refuse or the cleansing of earth-closets, privies, ashpits, and cesspools, they may make byelaws imposing the duty of such cleansing or removal, at such intervals as they think fit, on the occupiers of premises.

(b) As to the making of byelaws, see s. 9, ante, p. 824.

(c) The now repealed provision of the Metropolitan Police Act, 1839, provided that, "every person who, in any street or public place within the limits of the metropolitan police district, shall be guilty of any of the following offences, shall be liable to a penalty . . . (4) Every person who shall empty or begin to empty any privy between the hours of six in the morning and twelve at night . . ." It was held that an offence was committed if a privy on premises near to the road or pathway of a street was emptied within the prohibited hours (Howard v. Daniels (1905), 69 J. P. 439).

(d) A draft byelaw required the use of a deodorant in the case of offensive matter or rubbish spilled in a street. The Board drew attention to the decision in Barnett v. Laskey (1899), 63 J. P. 5, which shows that the expression "cleansing" as used in s. 26 (1) of the P. H. A., 1890, might, in certain circumstances, be held to include disinfection. No special mention of the use of a deodorant in the byelaw was, therefore, necessary.

(2) Where a local authority themselves undertake or contract for the removal of house refuse they may make byelaws imposing on the occupier of any premises duties in connection with such removal so as to facilitate the work which the local authority undertake or contract for.

This subsection is applied to all districts (whether urban or rural) for which Part III. is adopted. See s. 50, post, p. 860.

This provision is supplemental to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 42, ante, p. 107, by which every local authority may, and when required by the L. G. B., now the Ministry of Health, shall, themselves undertake or contract for the removal of house refuse from premises. The L. G. B. have expressed the opinion that a district council has power to provide as part of their scavenging plant pails for the reception on premises of night-soil, such pails when full being removed to the depôt and empty pails left on the premises for use until the next collection.

As to the making of byelaws, see s. 9, ante, p. 824.

Note to Section 26.

A byelaw of the London County Council under s. 16 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, provided that "Where a sanitary authority arrange for the daily removal of house refuse in their district or any part thereof, the occupier of any premises in such district or part thereof in which any house refuse may from time to time accumulate, shall at such hour of the day as the sanitary authority shall fix and notify by public announcements in the district, deposit on the kerbstone or on the outer edge of the footpath immediately in front of the house, or in a conveniently accessible position on the premises, as the sanitary authority may prescribe by written notice served upon the occupier, a movable receptacle in which shall be placed, for the purposes of removal by or on behalf of the sanitary authority, the house refuse which has accumulated on such premises since the preceding collection by such authority. The sanitary authority shall collect such refuse or cause the same to be collected between the hours of the day as they have fixed and notified by public announcement in their district." A metropolitan borough council, in purported pursuance of such byelaw, issued a public notice requiring the occupiers in a specified portion of the borough to deposit on the kerb or edge of the footpath immediately in front of their respective houses a movable receptacle in which should be placed for the purposes of removal the house refuse. A printed circular was also issued to the occupiers explanatory of the said notice. The occupier of a detached house standing some forty feet from the highway refused to put his house refuse on the kerbstone, but was willing to provide a convenient place on his premises where the house refuse might be placed for removal. The council refused to remove the refuse unless it was placed on the kerbstone. It was held that a general notice such as that issued by the council was not such a prescription of a convenient place as was contemplated by the byelaws; and that, therefore, the council could be convicted of refusing to remove the house refuse without reasonable cause (Wandsworth Borough Council v. Baines, [1906] 1 K. B. 470; 70 J. P. 124).

A rural district council informed the Ministry of Health that they had experienced difficulty in arranging for the disposal of house refuse on account of the old tins, broken bottles, and other objects which were mixed up with the refuse and which prevented the contractor disposing of the refuse to farmers. They suggested that the Ministry should confirm restrictive byelaws under the P. H. A., 1890, s. 26. The Ministry held, however, following a similar decision of the L. G. B., that the powers of the section would not enable the district council to make byelaws for such a purpose.

Provision for keeping common courts and passages clean.

27.—(1) Where any court, or where any passage leading to the back of several buildings in separate occupations, and not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large (a), is not regularly and effectually swept and kept clean and free from rubbish or other accumulation to the satisfaction of the urban authority, the urban authority may, if they think fit, cause to be swept and cleaned such court or passage.

This section can only be put in force in a rural district by Order of the Ministry of Health (see s. 5).

(a) As to the meaning of these words, see note (c) under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, ante, p. 274, and note (c) under ibid., s. 150, ante, p. 291. In determining whether a place is a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, regard should first be had to the time when dedication took place. Where there was dedication and user before 1836, when the Highway Act, 1835, came into operation, the road or place became ipso facto repairable by the parish, i.e., the inhabitants at large. Where, on the other hand, the dedication took place after 1836, no such liability is imposed on the parish unless the formalities prescribed by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 23, have been observed, or unless the road has come into existence in one or other of the modes mentioned at p. 276, ante. See per BLACKBURN, J., in R. v. Dukinfield (1863), 4 B. & S. 158; 27 J. P. 805; Eyre v. New Forest Highway Board (1892), 56 J. P. 517; Leigh-on-Sea U. D. C. v. King, [1901] 1 K. B. 747; 65 J. P. 243; Att.-Gen. v. Watford R. D. C., [1912] 1 Ch. 417; 76 J. P. 74, and the other cases and statutes referred to at p. 275, ante. Where there has been a dedication since 1836 without such formalities there is, except as to a highway which has come into existence in one of the modes mentioned at p. 276, ante, no one liable to repair: see R. v. Wilson (1852), 18 Q. B. 348; 21 L. J. Q. B. 281; Roberts v. Hunt (1850), 15 Q. B. 17; Fawcett v. York and North Midland Rail. Co. (1851), 16 Q. B. 610; Cubitt v. Maxse (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 704.

Section 27.

(2) The expenses thereby incurred shall be apportioned between the occupiers of the buildings situated in the court or to the back of which the passage leads in such shares as may be determined by the surveyor of the urban authority, or (in case of dispute) by a court of summary jurisdiction (a), and in default of payment any share so apportioned may be recovered summarily from the occupier on whom it is apportioned (b).

(a) See the note to similar words in s. 18 (2), ante, p. 832.

(b) As to the recovery of the expenses, see s. 6. As to appeal against the order for payment, see s. 7, ante, p. 823.

Extension of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, ss. 116—119.

28.—(1) Sections one hundred and sixteen to one hundred and nineteen of the Public Health Act, 1875 (relating to unsound meat) shall extend and apply to all articles intended for the food of man, sold or exposed for sale, or deposited in any place for the purpose of sale, or of preparation for sale within the district of any local authority.

See also upon this subject the Public Health (Regulations as to Food) Act, 1907, post, p. 1017, and regulations made thereunder.

This section, with the others mentioned in s. 50, is applied to rural districts for which Part III. has been adopted.

See the sections referred to in the text and the cases cited in the notes thereto, and especially Hewett v. Hattersley, on p. 225, decided upon words in the London Act very similar to those of this sub-section.

Where the provision in the text is adopted, the provisions of these sections are extended to all articles of food besides those expressly enumerated. Formerly, these sections did not apply to such things as eggs, butter, cheese, etc.

A cow had been killed when dying from inflammation. The appellant, knowing the circumstances, purchased the diseased carcase; and having arranged with a meat salesman carrying on business in a town to consign it to him for sale, deposited it on the salesman's premises for the purpose of sale for the food of man. The meat was seized at that place by an inspector of nuisances, and condemned. It was held that as there had been no exposure for sale by the appellant, but only a deposit for purposes of sale upon premises other than his own, he could not be convicted under s. 117, which was not affected by s. 28 (1), supra (Firth v. McPhail, [1905] 2 K. B. 300; 69 J. P. 203).

A person who has sold diseased meat intended for human food cannot be convicted of an offence under s. 117 of the Public Health Act, 1875, as amended by s. 28 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890, for having sold it unless he has exposed it for sale. The appellants, without having exposed it for sale, sold a diseased live bullock to a butcher, knowing that he intended to use it for human food. The butcher, having killed the bullock, divided the carcase, less the parts usually severed and removed, into two halves, and hung it up in his slaughter-house. The carcase was there seized by the Medical Officer of Health, and was condemned by a justice of the peace. Held, that the appellants could not be convicted of an offence under s. 117 of the Public Health Act, 1875, as amended by s. 28 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890, for having sold the bullock, because there had been no exposure for sale by them; and, further, because the article of food which had been seized and condemned was not the article which had been sold by them (Bothamley v. Jolly, [1915] 3 K. B. 425). "The true view of s. 28," said Lord READING, L.C.J., in that case, "is, in my opinion, that it extends the operation of ss. 116—119 of the Act of 1875, by making these four sections apply to all articles instead of only to the articles enumerated in the Act of 1875; and it also does away with the necessity for a seizure in compliance with s. 116 before there can be a conviction. Except as just stated, s. 28 does not create a new offence under s. 117. The person who commits an offence under this section as amended is still the person who is the owner of the unsound article at the time of the exposure, or in whose possession or on whose premises it is found. The appellants, who had sold the article without exposing it for sale, have, therefore, not committed an offence under these statutes."

Note to Section 28.

There is an exposure for sale within the meaning of the P. H. A., 1875, s. 117, as extended by the above section, when fish are sent by the vendor to the purchaser under an agreement to sell, and the purchaser, in exercise of his right of acceptance or rejection, under the express or implied terms and conditions of his contract, rejects them, or there otherwise remains anything to be settled before the property in the fish passes to the purchaser. The expression "exposure for sale" includes an exposure for the purpose of completing an agreement to sell previously entered into (Ollett v. Jordan, [1918] 2 K. B. 41; 82 J. P. 221).

An information was preferred against the secretary of a company for having in his possession, on the premises of the company at Eastbourne, meat deposited for sale and intended for the food of man, which was unfit for human food. The meat was part of a consignment which had been sent to the company from Smithfield Market. The company had nothing to do with sending this meat; it had simply been sent to the company for distribution among the local butchers, according as it should be allocated by the local official agent of the Ministry of Food. The company had to act under the direction of that agent, and were not responsible for his acts, as he had complete control. The meat never became the property of the company, but they collected the purchase-money from the butchers and paid it to the Ministry of Food without deduction, and a fixed commission of 2½ per cent. was paid by the Ministry. Held, that the meat had been deposited on the premises of the company within the meaning of the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 116, 117, as extended by this Act (Ollett v. Henry, [1919] 2 K. B. 88; 83 J. P. 165).

(2) A justice may condemn any such article, and order it to be destroyed or disposed of, as mentioned in section one hundred and seventeen of the Public Health Act, 1875, if satisfied on complaint being made to him that such article is diseased, unsound, unwholesome, or unfit for the food of man although the same has not been seized as mentioned in section one hundred and sixteen of the said Act.

In Vinter v. Hind (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 63; 47 J. P. 373, a butcher exposed for sale part of a cow which had died of disease, and sold the meat to a customer, who took it home for food; some days afterwards, at the request of an inspector of nuisances, it was handed over to him, and was condemned by a justice as unfit for the food of man. It was held that, as it was not seized and condemned in manner provided by s. 116, the butcher could not be convicted. If, however, s. 28 is in force, seizure in accordance with s. 116 is no longer a condition precedent to either condemnation or imposition of a penalty under s. 117 (Salt v. Tomlinson, [1911] 2 K. B. 391; 75 J. P. 398).

29. Licences granted after the adoption of this Part of this Act for the use and occupation of places as slaughter-houses shall be in force for such time or times only, not being less than twelve months, as the urban authority shall think fit to specify in such licences. Duration of slaughter-house licences.

This and the two following sections can only be made operative in a rural district by Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5. Such powers are, of course, only granted in conjunction with those of ss. 169 (second and third paragraphs) and 170 of the P. H. A., 1875. See the notes to those sections as to the practice of the Ministry with regard to urban powers for the regulation of slaughter-houses in rural districts.

Section 169 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 389, provides that for the purpose of enabling an urban authority to regulate slaughter-houses within their district the provisions of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, with respect to slaughter-houses shall be incorporated with that Act. These incorporated provisions are contained in the Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 34), ss. 125—131, in App. I., post, Vol. II. They provide that no new slaughter-house shall be opened or used without a licence from the urban authority. Those slaughter-houses which existed before 1875, and have since been continuously used as such, require only to be registered. It was formerly doubtful whether a licence when granted could be limited in point of time, for if not it could not be revoked except by justices on conviction of the licensee for an offence under s. 129. Where the above provision is in force the doubt will be removed at least with respect to licences granted after the adoption of this Part of the Act. Such licences may in future be granted for a limited time, not less than twelve months. Any limitation of the grant to a period of less than twelve months is void, and a licence containing such an attempted limitation must be regarded as extending for the full period of twelve months (Taylor v. Winsford U. D. C., [1907] 2 K. B. 396; 71 J. P. 375).

Against the refusal to grant a licence appeal lies to Quarter Sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823. See R. v. Essex JJ., Ex parte Barking U. D. C., cited in the note to that section.

Notice of change of occupation of slaughter-house.

30.—(1) Upon any change of occupation of any building within an urban sanitary district registered or licensed for use and used as a slaughter-house, the person thereupon becoming the occupier or joint occupier shall give notice in writing of the change of occupation to the inspector of nuisances.

See note to preceding section.

Until the decision in Goodwin v. Sale, [1907] 2 K. B. 278; 71 J. P. 303, it was commonly supposed that a slaughter-house licence was granted for certain premises and enured for the benefit of succeeding occupiers: see 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, s. 126, in App. I., post, Vol. II. In that case the facts were as follows: A licence had been granted in 1874 to one S. to slaughter animals on his premises. S. died in 1881, but the premises continued to be used by his widow as a slaughter-house till 1898, and were occasionally so used by her between 1898 and 1906, when they were let to the appellant. It was contended that by virtue of the licence which had been granted to S. under the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, s. 125, the premises were a new slaughter-house within the meaning of ss. 125 and 126, and remained a licensed slaughter-house, whether continuously used as such or not, and that the licence was not a personal licence to S. only, but enured for the benefit of successive occupiers. It was held that his licence died with him, that on his death the premises ceased to be licensed, and that therefore the appellant had been rightly convicted of using a slaughter-house without a licence. In view of this decision it is difficult, as to licences in existence when it came into operation, to give a meaning to the provision in s. 30 (1), supra, requiring notice to be given to the authority of any change in the occupation of any licensed slaughter-house. It may be that since the coming into operation of the Act an authority may licence a place and not simply a person: see Goodwin v. Sale, supra, per PHILLIMORE, J. If so, the provisions of the sub-section become intelligible. The registration of existing premises under s. 127 of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, enures for the benefit of succeeding occupiers. Any change of occupation must in future be notified to the inspector of nuisances, who is one of the persons mentioned in s. 131 as entitled to enter and inspect slaughter-houses.

(2) A person who fails or neglects to give such notice within one month after the change of occupation occurs shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds.

As to the recovery of this penalty, see s. 6, ante, p. 823. Appeal against conviction lies to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823.

(3) Notice of this enactment shall be endorsed on all licences granted after the adoption of this Part of this Act.

It should be noticed, however, that sub-s. (1) applies to all licences, whether granted before or after the adoption of this Part of the Act.

Revocation of licence on conviction for sale of meat unfit for food.

31. If the occupier of any building licensed as aforesaid to be used as a slaughter-house for the killing of animals intended as human food is convicted by a court of summary jurisdiction of selling or exposing for sale, or for having in his possession, or on his premises, the carcase of any animal, or any piece of meat or flesh diseased or unsound, or unwholesome or unfit for the use of man as food, the court may revoke the licence. Section 31.

See notes to s. 29. The section is not accurately expressed. The occupier of a slaughter-house cannot be convicted of merely having in his possession or on his premises a carcase, or meat, which is diseased, etc., unless it is also deposited for the purpose of sale, or of preparation for sale, and intended for the food of man (see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 117, ante, p. 220). The provision seems to be intended to apply to the owner of a slaughter-house who is convicted under s. 117, and perhaps also under the byelaws of a municipal borough, or under a local Act.

Appeal will lie to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823, against the order of justices revoking a licence under this section.

It should be mentioned that justices have power under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, s. 129, to suspend or revoke a licence on conviction for an offence against that Act, or under the byelaws made under s. 128.

32. Any keeper of a common lodging-house who fails to give the notice required by section eighty-four of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings, and to a daily penalty not exceeding five shillings. Extension of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 84.

This section applies to the district of every council (whether urban or rural) who have adopted Part III.

The P. H. A., 1875, s. 84, ante, p. 158, provides that the keeper of a common lodging-house shall, when a person in such house is ill of fever or any infectious disease, give immediate notice thereof to the medical officer of health and also to the relieving officer. By s. 86, any keeper of a common lodging-house who fails to give the notices required by that Act where any person has been confined to his bed in such house by fever or other infectious disease shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding £5, and in the case of a continuing offence to a further penalty not exceeding 40s. for every day during which the offence continues. Where s. 32, supra, is in operation, a penalty will be incurred under s. 84, if the keeper of the lodging-house fails to give notice even when the person suffering from fever, etc. has not been confined to his bed.

As to the definition of a "daily penalty," see s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826. As to appeal, see s. 7, p. 823, ante.

33.—(1) Where the plan of a building has been, either before or after the adoption of this Part of this Act in any district, deposited with a local authority in pursuance of any Act of Parliament or byelaw, and that building is described therein otherwise than as a dwelling-house, any person who wilfully uses or knowingly permits to be used such building or any part thereof for the purposes of habitation by any person other than the person placed therein to take care thereof, and the family of such person, shall be guilty of an offence under this section, and shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds, and to a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings. Buildings described in deposited plans otherwise than as dwelling-houses not to be used as such.

This section applies to the district of every council (whether urban or rural) who have adopted Part III. Together with s. 25, it is desirable that it should be in force in every district in which byelaws are made as to buildings. See note to s. 25.

Byelaws made under s. 23 (4), ante, p. 842, may provide for preventing buildings erected for the purpose of warehouses or public buildings being altered into dwelling-houses. The text forbids their occupation, though unaltered, by any person other than a caretaker and his family, subject, however, to the proviso contained in the next sub-section.

As to the recovery of the penalty, see s. 6. Appeal against conviction lies to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823. For the definition of a "daily penalty," see s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826.

Plans of a new building describing it otherwise than as a dwelling-house were duly approved by a local authority in 1894. In 1898 plans of alterations to the building described as "revised plans of proposed domestic conversion" were deposited, but were never either approved or disapproved. The proposed alterations were carried out and the premises were occupied by a person other than a person placed therein to take care thereof. It was held that s. 33, supra, had been contravened, although the authority had not within one month signified in writing their approval or disapproval of the plan of the alterations pursuant to s. 158 of the P. H. A., 1875 (Fulford v. Blatchford (1899), 80 L. T. 637; 19 Cox C. C. 308).

(2) Provided that if such building has in the rear thereof and adjoining and exclusively belonging thereto such an open space as is required by any Act of Parliament or byelaw for the time being in force with respect to buildings intended to be used as dwelling-houses, and if such part of the building as is intended to be used as a dwelling-house has undergone such structural alterations, if any, as are necessary in the opinion of the local authority to render it fit for that purpose, the owner may use the same as a dwelling-house.

The proviso as to air space must be complied with; the authority cannot dispense with it.

The alterations must be made in conformity with any byelaws made under s. 23 (4), ante, p. 842. It may be the authority's "opinion" can be reviewed by quarter sessions (see s. 7, ante, p. 823).

Hoards to be set up during progress of buildings, etc.

34.—(1) Every person intending to build or take down any building or to alter or repair the outward part of any building in any street or court (a), shall—

(a) before beginning the same, unless the urban authority otherwise consent in writing, cause close-boarded hoards or fences to the satisfaction of the urban authority to be put up in order to separate the building from the street or court;

(b) if the urban authority so require, make a convenient covered platform and handrail to serve as a footway for passengers outside of such hoard or fence;

(c) continue such hoard or fence with such platform and handrail as aforesaid standing and in good condition to the satisfaction of the urban authority during such time as they may require:

(d) if required by the urban authority, cause the same to be sufficiently lighted during the night;

(e) remove the same when required by the urban authority (b).

This section, not being mentioned in s. 50, can only be put in force in a rural district by an Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5.

(a) For the definition of "street," see ante, p. 15. The term "street" includes "court" if it has the meaning assigned to it in the interpretation clause. The use of the latter expression seems to imply that the word "street" is here used in its ordinary popular sense of a road with houses on one or both sides.

(b) When the provisions of this section are adopted they are to be in substitution (see sub-s. (3), infra) for those of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, s. 80, which is incorporated with the P. H. A., 1875, by ibid., s. 160, ante, p. 363. The 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, s. 80, is set out in App. I., post, Vol. II. See cases in notes thereto.

See also the P. H. A., 1907, s. 32, post, p. 1040, as to the erection of hoards.

As to the applicability of this section to schools, cf. Higgs and Hill, Ltd. v. Stepney Borough Council, p. 329, ante.

(2) Every person who fails to comply with any of the provisions of this section shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds and to a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

As to the recovery of these penalties, see s. 6, ante, p. 823. Appeal against conviction lies to quarter sessions under s. 7. For the definition of a "daily penalty," see s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826. Note to Section 34.

(3) Where this Part of this Act is adopted the eightieth section of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, shall be repealed, and this section shall be deemed to be substituted therefor.

The 10 & 11 Vict. 34, s. 80, is set out in App. I., post, Vol. II.

35.—(1) All vaults, arches, and cellars under any street (a), and all openings into such vaults, arches, or cellars in the surface of any street, and all cellar-heads, gratings, lights, and coal-holes in the surface of any street, and all landings, flags, or stones of the path or street supporting the same respectively, shall be kept in good condition and repair by the owners or occupiers of the same, or of the houses or buildings to which the same respectively belong (b). As to repair of cellars under streets.

This section, not being mentioned in s. 50, can only be put in force in a rural district by an Order of the M. of H. under s. 5.

(b) This provision was entirely new. By s. 73 of the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, as amended by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 160, when any opening is made in any pavement or footpath within the limits of the special Act, as an entrance into any vault or cellar, a door or covering shall be made by the occupier or owner of such vault or cellar, of iron or such other materials and in such manner as the commissioners direct, and such door or covering shall from time to time be kept in good repair by the occupier of such vault or cellar; and if such occupier do not within a reasonable time make such door or covering, or if he make any such door or covering contrary to the directions of the commissioners, or if he do not keep the same when properly made in good repair, he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds.

In the metropolis, though owners are required by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 102, to keep in repair arches, vaults, and cellars under any street, it was held that the vestry, as highway surveyors, were bound to repair the pavement over vaults or cellars (Hamilton v. St. George's, Hanover Square (Vestry of)) (1873), L. R. 9 Q. B. 42; 38 J. P. 405; and cf. Laing v. Paull and Williamson, [1912] S. C. 196). Under the provision in the text the owners or occupiers will be liable to repair not only the vaults or cellars and the cellar-heads, gratings, etc., but also the landings, flags, or stones supporting such cellar-heads, etc.

As to the liability of an owner of premises for the negligence of a contractor in regard to the use of a cellar flap, see Wilson v. Hodgson's Kingston Brewery Co., Ltd. (1916), 80 J. P. 39.

(2) Where any default is made in complying with the provisions of this section, the urban authority may, after twenty-four hours' notice in that behalf (a), cause anything in respect of which such default is made to be repaired or put into good condition, and the expenses of so doing shall be paid to the urban authority by such owner or occupier respectively, or in default may be recovered in a summary manner (b).

(a) This notice should be authenticated by the signature of the clerk or surveyor (see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 266, ante, p. 593).

(b) As to the recovery of these expenses, see s. 6, ante, p. 823. As to appeal, see s. 7, ante, p. 826.

36.—(1) Every building which, after the adoption of this Part of this Act in any urban district, is used (a) as a place of public resort (b), Means of ingress to and egress from shall, to the satisfaction of the urban authority, be substantially constructed and supplied with ample, safe, and convenient means of ingress and egress for the use of the public, regard being had to the purposes for which such building is intended to be used, and to the number of persons likely to be assembled at any one time therein (c).

This section, not being mentioned in s. 50, can only be put in force in a rural district by an Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5.

(a) This does not mean "first used." The section will apply to all buildings, whenever erected, which may be used as places of public resort after the adoption of this Part of the Act.

(b) For the definition of this term, see sub-s. (6), infra.

(c) It seems to follow from this enactment that it will not be safe to use any building as a place of public resort after the adoption of this section without a previous expression of satisfaction by the urban authority. Appeal to quarter sessions will lie against their refusal of approval or against any requirement made by them. See s. 7, ante, p. 823.

The applicants submitted plans for building a cinematograph theatre to an urban authority. The plans complied with the byelaws, but the urban authority disapproved them on the ground that in view of the nature and situation of the proposed building, and of the size of the streets where it was to be erected and of the traffic in those streets, the building would not satisfy the above section. The applicants then obtained a rule for a mandamus to the urban authority to consider the application for their approval of the plans according to law, on the ground that they had no jurisdiction to reject the plans. Held, that the rule must be made absolute, as the mere erection of the building apart from its use would not be a contravention of the section, and therefore the urban authority could have no reasonable grounds for believing that the erection would be such a contravention (R. v. Cambridge Corporation (1922), 86 J. P. 13).

(2) The means of ingress and egress shall during the whole time that such building is used as a place of public resort be kept free and unobstructed to such extent as the urban authority shall require.

This implies that the authority shall consider with reference to every place of public resort whether it is substantially constructed and supplied with means of ingress and egress to their satisfaction. If it is, it may lawfully be used, but subject to the observance of the requirements of the authority as to the keeping of such means of ingress and egress free and unobstructed. Appeal will lie to quarter sessions under s. 7 against any requirement of the authority under the above sub-section.

(3) An officer authorised in writing by the urban authority, and producing his authority if so required, may at all reasonable times enter any such building to see that the provisions of this section are carried into effect.

This authority may be given generally. The resolution conferring the authority should be entered on the minutes, and the authority itself should be authenticated by the signature of the clerk under s. 266 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 593.

(4) Any person who being the occupier or manager, or in the case of a building let for any period less than one year the owner of any building used as aforesaid, uses the same or suffers the same to be used in contravention of this section, or fails to comply with the provisions of this section in respect thereof, shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds.

The owner is the person liable where the building is let for short periods of less than a year. As to the recovery of the penalty, see s. 6. Appeal against conviction lies to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823.

(5) Where any alteration in the building is required in order to give proper means of ingress or egress, the court may refuse to inflict a penalty for an offence under this section until a reasonable time has been allowed for making such alteration, but the court may make such order as they think fit for the closing, or otherwise, of the building during such time. Section 36.

The court will probably act under this provision where the owner or occupier has not had an opportunity of making the necessary alteration. If the alteration is made the court may dismiss the information without convicting, or inflict a nominal penalty under the Probation of Offenders Act, 1907.

The court may make an order for closing the building, or they may impose conditions as to its use pending the required alterations. Appeal to quarter sessions will lie against this order under s. 7, ante, p. 823.

(6) For the purposes of this section the expression " place of public resort " means a building used or constructed or adapted to be used either ordinarily or occasionally as a church, chapel, or other place of public worship (not being merely a dwelling-house so used), or as a theatre, public hall, public concert-room, public ball-room, public lecture-room, or public exhibition-room, or as a public place of assembly for persons admitted thereto by tickets or by payment, or used, or constructed, or adapted to be used, either ordinarily or occasionally for any other public purpose, but shall not include a private dwelling-house used occasionally or exceptionally for any of those purposes.

Provided that this section shall not extend to any building used as a church or chapel or other place of public worship before or at the time of the adoption of this Part of this Act.

37.—(1) Whenever large numbers of persons are likely to assemble on the occasion of any show, entertainment, public procession, open-air meeting, or other like occasion, every roof of a building, and every platform, balcony, or other structure or part thereof let or used or intended to be let or used for the purpose of affording sitting or standing accommodation for a number of persons, shall be safely constructed or secured to the satisfaction of the surveyor of the urban authority. Safety of platforms, etc., erected or used on public occasions.

This section, not being mentioned in s. 50, can only be put in force in a rural district by an Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5.

The section applies to permanent as well as to temporary structures let or used for the accommodation of persons witnessing the show, etc. It will apply apparently to stands on racecourses.

It seems to be implied that a previous expression of satisfaction by the surveyor is not necessary, but it will be prudent in every case to obtain it.

A man who causes a building to be erected for viewing a public exhibition, and admits persons on payment of money to a seat in the building, impliedly undertakes that due care has been exercised in the erection, and that the building is reasonably fit for the purpose; and it is immaterial whether the money is to be appropriated to his own use or not (Francis v. Cockrell (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 501). The principle of this decision was explained and applied in Maclenan v. Segar, [1917] 2 K. B. 325, and in Brannigen v. Harrington (1921), 37 T. L. R. 349.

(2) Any person who uses or allows to be used, in contravention of this section, any roof of a building, platform, balcony, or structure not so safely constructed on secured, or who neglects to comply with the Section 37. provisions of this section in respect thereof, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds.

It does not appear what are "the provisions of this section in respect thereof." This clause seems to be unnecessary, as the mere user of a roof, etc., which is not safely constructed or secured to the satisfaction of the surveyor, renders the person using it liable to the penalty.

As to the recovery of the penalty, see s. 6. Appeal against conviction lies to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823.

Byelaws for prevention of danger from whirligigs, shooting galleries, etc.

38. An urban authority may make byelaws for the prevention of danger from whirligigs and swings when such whirligigs and swings are driven by steam power, and from the use of firearms in shooting ranges and galleries.

This section, not being mentioned in s. 50, can only be put in force in a rural district by an Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5. In rural districts it may be possible to deal with steam roundabouts under s. 70 of the Highway Act, 1835: see 41 Sol. J. 754.

As to the making, etc., of these byelaws, see s. 9, ante, p. 824. A town council can also deal with these same matters by byelaws under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 23: see Teale v. Harris (1896), 60 J. P. 744. See also as to byelaws under local Acts, Southend-on-Sea (Mayor, etc. of) v. Davis (1900), 16 T. L. R. 167.

The byelaws as to buildings will not apply to erections of the kind mentioned in the section; see Hall v. Smallpiece, and other cases cited therewith on pp. 342, 343, ante, but see now the P. H. A., 1907, s. 27, also there referred to.

A local authority made under the Public Health (Ireland) Act, a byelaw that no person should cause or suffer any whirligig or swing to be set in motion or driven on any land immediately adjoining or abutting upon any street or road within the district unless such whirligig or swing was placed at a distance of not less than twenty yards from any road or street, and separated from any street or road by a wall not less than fourteen inches in thickness and carried up to a height of not less than four feet above the level of the street or road. It was held that the byelaw was unreasonable and void, inasmuch as it required a structure of a permanent character involving large expense to provide against a temporary danger, which could as effectively be provided against by a temporary structure (Enniscorthy U. D. C. v. Field, [1904] 2 I. R. 518).

Refuges, etc., in streets.

39. An urban authority may from time to time place, maintain, alter, and remove in any street (a), being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large (b), such raised paving or places of refuge, with such pillars, rails, or other fences, either permanent or temporary, as they may think fit, for the purpose of protecting passengers and traffic, either along the street or on the footways, from injury, danger, or annoyance, or for the purpose of making the crossing of any street less dangerous to passengers (c).

This section can only be put in force in a rural district in pursuance of an Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5.

(a) See the definition of "street," ante, p. 15.

(b) As to the meaning of these words, see the note to s. 27 (1), ante, p. 845.

(c) It does not appear that there is any power to erect refuges in streets apart from this provision. The P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, ante, p. 273, enables an urban authority to place and keep in repair fences and posts for the safety of foot passengers, but does not contemplate the appropriation of part of the street for a refuge.

As to the liability of a local authority for negligence in omitting to maintain a danger lamp on a refuge, see Baldock v. Westminster City Council (1919), 88 L. J. K. B. 502; 83 J. P. 98. It should be observed, however, that this case was decided with reference to the Metropolis, where the obligation of a local authority to light the street differs from that arising under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 161, ante. The decision may, however, be of general application on the ground that if a local authority choose to provide a refuge they must take care that it does not create a danger if left without light.

Note to Section 39.

40.—(1) An urban authority may from time to time provide, maintain, and remove in or near any street in their district suitable erections for the use, convenience, and shelter of drivers of hackney carriages, and such other persons as the urban authority may permit to use the same.

Cabmen's shelters.

This section can only be put in force in a rural district in pursuance of an Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5.

For the definition of a "street," see ante, p. 15.

There is nothing in the older Public Health Acts on this subject. Except under the power hereby conferred, a cabmen's shelter placed in a highway would be a nuisance, as being an obstruction of the public way.

For the definition of a "hackney carriage," see 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89, s. 38, and 52 & 53 Vict. c. 14, s. 4, in App. I., post, Vol. II.; Hickman v. Birch (1889), 24 Q. B. D. 172; 54 J. P. 406; Hawkins v. Edwards, [1901] 2 K. B. 169; 65 J. P. 423.

(2) The urban authority may from time to time make regulations for prescribing the terms and conditions and the fees (if any) to be charged for the use of such places of shelter, and may make byelaws for regulating the conduct of persons using the same.

Regulations are made under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 188, ante, p. 446; they require no confirmation. As to the making, etc., of byelaws, see s. 9, ante, p. 824.

41. Where this Part of this Act is adopted, section one hundred and fifty-two of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall be repealed, and the following provisions shall be substituted in lieu thereof:

Adoption of private streets.

(1) Whenever all or any of the works mentioned in section one hundred and fifty of the Public Health Act, 1875, have been executed in a street or part of a street under that section by an urban authority, and the urban authority are of opinion that such street or part of a street ought to become a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, they may by notice to be fixed up in such street or part of a street declare the whole of such street or part of a street to be a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, and thereupon such street or part of a street as defined in the notice shall become a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large.

See form of notice in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., p. 85.

In districts where the Private Street Works Act, 1892, has been adopted, the section will not be in force: see ibid., ss. 19, 25, post, pp. 886, 888.

In Att.-Gen. v. Bidder (1881), 47 J. P. 263, it was held that s. 152 was not a complement to s. 150; that in order that an urban authority might declare a street not repairable by the inhabitants at large to be a highway, so that it might become so repairable, it was necessary that all the works specified in s. 152 should, at the time of declaration, have been executed upon the street to the satisfaction of the authority; that the authority had not under s. 152 any discretion as to which of the works therein mentioned they should require to be executed; that their discretion was limited to their being satisfied with the efficiency of each description of work when done; semble, also kerbing a road did not answer the requirement of the section that the road must be flagged, this term meaning paved with flagged stones; and wooden paving did not come within the meaning of any of the requirements of this section. See now as to this last dictum s. 11 (2), ante, p. 825.

Note to Section 41.

This decision frequently prevented an authority from adopting a street, and the provision in the text was intended to obviate such difficulty. If this Part of the Act is adopted, and any of the works mentioned in s. 150 (i.e., sewering, levelling, paving, metalling, flagging, channelling, making good, and lighting) have been done by the authority under that section, they may declare the street a highway, though some of these works may not have been done. The section does not, however, seem to deal with the case of owners voluntarily or upon notice from the authority carrying out the works required.

Where the P. H. A., 1907, s. 19, has been applied to a district, and the local authority have in pursuance of the provisions of sub-s. (4) been required to proceed under s. 150, they must declare a street to be a highway repairable, etc., as soon as the necessary works have been completed.

As to the practice of the Ministry of Health in declaring urban powers in relation to private streets to be operative in rural districts, see notes to s. 150 of the Act of 1875, and to the Private Street Works Act, 1892.

(2) Provided that no such street shall become a highway so repairable if within one month after such notice has been put up the owner or the majority in number or value of owners of such street by notice in writing to the urban authority object thereto, and in ascertaining such majority joint owners shall be reckoned as one owner.

This sub-section corresponds with the concluding paragraph of the P. H. A., 1875, s. 152, with the substitution of owners for proprietors. In Steward v. Metropolitan Electric Tramways, Ltd. (Oct. 23rd, 24th, 25th, 1907), WARRINGTON, J., held that the "owners" referred to are the owners of the soil of the street and not the frontagers (in a case where the latter do not also own the street itself). See form of notice of objection in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., p. 86.

Statues and monuments.

42. Any urban authority may from time to time authorise the erection in any street or public place within their district of any statue or monument, and may maintain the same, and any statue or monument erected within their district before the adoption of this Part of this Act, and may remove any statue or monument the erection of which has been authorised by them.

This section can only be put in force in a rural district in pursuance of an Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5. A number of such orders have recently been issued for the purpose of enabling rural districts councils to authorise the erection of war memorials on highways.

Hitherto it had been more than doubtful whether any statue or monument could lawfully be set up in a public highway. The urban authority are surveyors of highways under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 144, but neither that section nor s. 149 empowered them to put any permanent structure in a highway, thereby obstructing the public right of passage. In Hildreth v. Adamson (1860), 8 C. B. (N.S.) 587; 25 J. P. 645, the question was raised, but not decided, whether a public fountain might lawfully be erected in a highway. It will be observed that a fountain is not mentioned in the text.

Trees in roads.

43. Any urban authority may, if they see fit, cause trees to be planted in any highway repairable by the inhabitants at large within their district, and may erect guards or fences for the protection of the same, provided that this power shall not be exercised nor shall any trees so planted be continued so as to hinder the reasonable use of the highway by the public or any person entitled to use the same, or so as to become a nuisance or injurious to any adjacent owner or occupier.

This section can only be put in force in a rural district in pursuance of an Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5.

Note to Section 43.

Apart from the provisions of this section an urban authority have no power to erect trees in a public highway. The corporation of Lewes were convicted at the Sussex Assizes of causing a nuisance to the highway by planting trees therein ((1886) Times, March 9th). Even now under the above provision the power to plant trees is not absolute; regard must be had to the public right of passage, and to the comfort and convenience of owners and occupiers. If these matters are not duly regarded it is probable that an indictment would lie as formerly. It has been held that an urban authority who under this section causes trees to be planted in a highway and erects guards for the protection of the same, has a duty to take reasonable steps to protect the public from accidents arising therefrom in any abnormal or exceptional circumstances that may occur (Morrison v. Sheffield Corporation, [1917] 2 K. B. 866; 81 J. P. 277).

The adjacent owner may, if the branches overhang his land, cut them off, without notice to the authority, so far as they overhang his land, provided he does not go off his own land to do so (Lemmon v. Webb, [1895] A. C. 1; 59 J. P. 564). See also Smith v. Giddy, [1904] 2 K. B. 448, and Simmons v. Saunders (1914), L. T. Jo., May 9th (county court). As to roots undermining a neighbour's wall, see Middleton v. Humphries (1913), 47 Ir. L. T. 160.

The urban authority are not liable as highway authority to an action for damages at the suit of a person injured by a branch overhanging a highway which the authority have neglected to cause to be lopped so as to prevent injury and danger to persons lawfully using the highway, for such neglect is a mere non-feasance (Tregellas v. London C. C. (1897), 14 T. L. R. 55). And where the route of an omnibus lies along a road lined by trees, which by permission of the owner the omnibus company have taken reasonable care to cut, an accident caused to an outside passenger by an overhanging branch does not render the company liable, if there is no evidence that the driver was driving too near the trees, or that he had any reason to suspect that they were overhanging (Trinder v. G. W. Ry. (1919), 35 T. L. R. 291).

The Ministry of Health are willing to entertain applications from urban authorities (who have adopted this part of the Act) for sanction to loans for the provision of trees and the necessary guards. The usual term for repayment is ten years.

Parks and pleasure grounds.

44.—(1) An urban authority may on such days as they think fit (not exceeding twelve days in any one year, nor four consecutive days on any one occasion) close to the public any park or pleasure ground provided by them or any part thereof, and may grant the use of the same, either gratuitously or for payment, to any public charity or institution, or for any agricultural, horticultural, or other show, or any other public purpose, or may use the same for any such show or purpose; and the admission to the said park or pleasure ground, or such part thereof, on the days when the same shall be so closed to the public may be either with or without payment, as directed by the urban authority, or, with the consent of the urban authority, by the society or persons to whom the use of the park or pleasure ground, or such part thereof, may be granted: Provided that no such park or pleasure ground shall be closed on any Sunday or public holiday.

See s. 164 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 369, and the notes thereto, and ss. 76 and 77 of the P. H. A., 1907. The last-mentioned sections will, however, only apply to districts where they have been put in force by Order of the L. G. B. or the Ministry of Health.

This section can only be put in operation in a rural district in pursuance of an Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5. The powers must, of course, be combined with those of s. 164 of the P. H. A., 1875, which may be obtained by a rural council by Order under ibid., s. 276. In rural districts, however, the parish councils have similar powers for the provision and maintenance of recreation grounds, so that it is not often necessary for the rural district council to act. See s. 8 (1) (b) and (d) of the L. G. A., 1894.

The fact that charges may be made for the use of the park or pleasure ground under this section does not apparently make it rateable (Manchester Corporation v.

Note to Section 44. Chorlton Union (1899), 15 T. L. R. 327; Liverpool Corporation v. West Derby Union, [1908] 2 K. B. 647; 72 J. P. 228).

(2) An urban authority may either themselves provide and let for hire, or may license any person to let for hire, any pleasure boats on any lake or piece of water in any such park or pleasure ground, and may make byelaws for regulating the numbering and naming of such boats, the number of persons to be carried therein, the boathouses and mooring places for the same, and for fixing rates of hire and the qualifications of boatmen, and for securing their good and orderly conduct while in charge of any boat.

This provision applies only when there is a lake or water in a public park or pleasure ground provided by the authority. They cannot provide boats, etc. for use on the sea or a river, though they may license the owners and boatmen of boats and vessels under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 172, ante, p. 395. Boats provided under this section need not apparently be registered under the Merchant Shipping Act: see Southport (Mayor, etc. of) v. Morriss, [1893] 1 Q. B. 359; 57 J. P. 84.

As to the making, etc. of the byelaws, see s. 9, ante, p. 824.

Extension of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 164.

45. The powers of an urban authority under section one hundred and sixty-four of the Public Health Act, 1875, to contribute to the support of public walks or pleasure grounds, shall include a power to contribute towards the cost of the laying out, planting, or improvement of any lands provided by any person which have been permanently set apart as public walks or pleasure grounds, and which, whether in the district of the urban authority or not, are so situated as to be conveniently used by the inhabitants of the district, and shall also include a power to contribute towards the purchase by any person of lands so situate and to be so set apart as aforesaid.

This section can only be put in force in a rural district in pursuance of an Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5.

See the P. H. A., 1875, s. 164, ante, p. 369, and the notes thereto, and the last section.

The word "person" includes a body corporate (P. H. A., 1875, s. 4, ante, p. 6), and the text, therefore, enables an authority to contribute towards the purchase, laying out, and support of public walks, etc., provided by an adjoining authority.

Extension of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 165.

46. Section one hundred and sixty-five of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall be extended so as to enable any urban authority to pay the reasonable cost of the repairing, maintaining, winding up, and lighting any public clock within their district although the same be not vested in them.

The P. H. A., 1875, s. 165, p. 375, ante, enables an urban authority to provide public clocks, and to cause them to be lighted at night. The text enables them to maintain public clocks, such as those on churches, etc., though they did not provide them, and though such clocks are not their property.

Restriction on throwing cinders, etc., into streams.

47.—(1) It shall not be lawful for any person to throw or place or suffer to be thrown or placed into or in any river, stream, or watercourse within any district in which this Part of this Act is adopted, any cinders, ashes, bricks, stone, rubbish, dust, filth, or other matter which is likely to cause annoyance.

This section may be adopted by a rural district council with the other provisions set out in s. 50, post, p. 860.

Note to Section 47.

When adopted it operates as an extension of the provisions of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (in App. I., post, Vol. II.), under which the throwing of cinders, etc., into a stream so as to interfere with its due flow, or to pollute it, is an offence. The text affords a more direct remedy by summary proceedings than proceedings in the county court under the Act of 1876. As to the powers of county councils with respect to the pollution of streams, see the L. G. A., 1888, s. 14, ante, p. 749.

(2) Every person offending against this enactment shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings for every such offence.

As to the recovery of this penalty, see s. 6. Appeal against conviction lies to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823.

48. So much of section three hundred and six of the Public Health Act, 1875, as imposes penalties on persons who destroy, pull down, injure, or deface any board on which any byelaw, notice, or other matter is inscribed, shall apply to persons who destroy, pull down, injure, or deface any advertisement, placard, bill, or notice put up by or under the direction of a local authority.

Extension of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 306.

This section may be adopted by a rural district council with the other provisions set out in s. 50, infra.

By the P. H. A., 1875, s. 306, ante, p. 640, any person who destroys, pulls down, injures, or defaces any board on which any byelaw, notice, or other matter is inscribed, shall, if the same was put up by authority of the L. G. B. or the Ministry of Health, or of the local authority, be liable for every such offence to a penalty not exceeding £5. The text extends this section to bills, posters, etc. wherever posted, and whether the board on which they may be placed is destroyed, etc. or not.

49. The Local Government Board may by Order on the application of any rural authority declare any expenses incurred by such authority to be special expenses within the meaning of sections two hundred and twenty-nine and two hundred and thirty of the Public Health Act, 1875.

Power to determine expenses of rural authorities to be special expenses.

This section may be adopted by a rural authority with the other provisions set out in the next section; indeed, it is not applicable to an urban authority. Application to the Ministry of Health under the section cannot be made before it has come into force. If a rural authority require the powers of this section alone, they should apply to the Board for an Order under s. 5.

By the P. H. A., 1875, s. 229, ante, p. 510, general expenses are the expenses of the establishment and officers of the rural authority, the expenses in relation to disinfection (see also 53 & 54 Vict. c. 34, s. 20, ante, p. 818), the providing conveyance for infected persons, and all other expenses not determined by the Act or by Order of the L. G. B. to be special expenses. Special expenses are the expenses of the construction, maintenance, and cleansing of sewers in any contributory place within the district, the providing a supply of water to any such place, and maintaining any necessary works for that purpose, if and so far as the expenses of such supply and works are not defrayed out of water rates or rents under the Act, the charges and expenses arising out of or incidental to the possession of property transferred to the rural authority in trust for any contributory place, and all other expenses incurred or payable by the rural authority in or in respect of any contributory place within the district, and determined by Order of the L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health) to be special expenses. Section 230 provides for the raising of general and special expenses.

The text appears to enable the Ministry to declare expenses to be special expenses though they may be general expenses by such a provision as s. 229.

The position is not quite so clear with regard to the power of the Ministry under the present section to declare chargeable as special expenses any which are expressly declared to be general expenses by later enactments: see, especially, the L. G. A., 1894, s. 29 (a), which states that highway expenses shall be defrayed as general expenses. The Ministry appear to take the view that their powers under s. 49 of the Act of 1890 are unlimited, but in the matter of highway expenses they are now seldom disposed to issue an order which will practically infringe the principle laid down by the Act of 1894.

Application of Part III. of Act in rural districts.

50. The following provisions of this Part of this Act shall be applicable in rural sanitary districts, namely,—

Section sixteen, relating to injurious matter being passed into sewers.

Section seventeen, relating to the turning of chemical refuse, steam, etc., into sewers.

Section eighteen, relating to local authorities making communication with drains, etc.

Section nineteen, relating to the extension of section forty-one of the Public Health Act, 1875.

Section twenty-one, relating to sanitary conveniences used in common.

So much of section twenty-three, relating to the extension of section one hundred and fifty-seven of the Public Health Act, 1875, as applies to rural authorities.

Section twenty-five, relating to the penalty for erecting buildings on ground filled up with offensive matter.

Sub-section (2) of section twenty-six, relating to the power to make byelaws for certain sanitary purposes.

Section twenty-eight, relating to the extension of sections one hundred and sixteen to one hundred and nineteen inclusive of the Public Health Act, 1875.

Section thirty-two, relating to the extension of section eighty-four of the Public Health Act, 1875.

Section thirty-three, relating to the use of buildings described in deposited plans otherwise than dwelling-houses.

Section forty-seven, relating to the restriction on throwing cinders, etc. into streams.

Section forty-eight, relating to the extension of section three hundred and six of the Public Health Act, 1875.

PART IV.

MUSIC AND DANCING.

Music and dancing licences.

51. For the regulation of places ordinarily used for public dancing or music, or other public entertainment of the like kind, the following provisions shall have effect (namely):

A rural authority can only obtain these powers by means of an Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 5. Any application for such an Order should be made by resolution of the council, a copy of which should be forwarded with a statement of the grounds upon which the application is based. The Ministry will probably require to know the names and situation of the establishments which will come under the section if it is made operative, and whether complaints have been made respecting them. A local inquiry has been directed in some cases. An application may also be made by a county council, a parish council, or by ratepayers: see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 276, s. 5 of this Act, and the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25 (7).

When this Part of the Act is adopted by an urban authority, the resolution of the authority must be sent to the Ministry of Health and to a Secretary of State: see s. 3 (5), ante, p. 821.

In many towns local Acts in pari materia are in force.

As to Army and Navy recreation rooms, see the Army Act, 1889, s. 7.

Other statutory provisions.

The section does not apply (see sub-s. (12)) in or within 20 miles of the cities of London or Westminster, in which area the provisions on the point are—(i) in the administrative county of Middlesex, the Music and Dancing Licences (Middlesex) Act, 1894; and (ii) in other parts of the area the Disorderly Houses Act, 1751, as amended by the Public Entertainments Act, 1875.

The provisions of the Middlesex Act, supra, are almost the same as those of this section except that the county council and not the justices are the licensing authority.

Decisions under Disorderly Houses Act, 1751, etc.

The Disorderly Houses Act, 1751, s. 2, provides that any house, room, garden, or other place kept for public dancing, music, or other public entertainment of the like kind, in the cities of London and Westminster, or within twenty miles thereof (repealed by the Middlesex Act, supra, as regards the administrative county of Middlesex), without a licence had for that purpose from the preceding Michaelmas quarter sessions of the peace (now the London County Council) (L. G. A., 1888, s. 3) shall be deemed a disorderly house or place. See also, ibid., s. 4, and the amending Public Entertainments Act, 1875 (as to hours of opening), both also repealed as to Middlesex. See, too, s. 3 of the Baths and Washhouses Act, 1899, in App. I., post, Vol. II., by which in places where the Disorderly Houses Act, 1751, is in force, a licence under that Act for music or dancing, or for both purposes, may be granted to commissioners appointed under the Baths and Washhouses Acts, 1846 to 1899, or any other body for the time being acting in the execution of those Acts, at any annual licensing meeting of the council authorised to grant such a licence, or any other meeting of such council duly convened with fourteen days' previous notice.

The following cases have been decided with reference to the Act of 1751: It extends to houses kept for the purpose of comparatively private dancing, not only to perfectly public places (Clarke v. Searle (1793), 1 Esp. 25); but a room kept by a dancing master for the instruction of his scholars and subscribers, and to which persons are not indiscriminately admitted, is not within it (Bellis v. Burghall (1799), 2 Esp. 722).

A room in which musical performances are regularly given, though it is not kept or used solely for that purpose, is within the statute, and requires a licence (Bellis v. Beale (1797), 2 Esp. 592).

The statute extends to licensed taverns and hotels, and it is no defence that the company frequenting the performance was respectable or that the admission money was not received for the benefit of the keeper of the house (Green v. Botheroyd (1828), 3 C. & P. 471). But a temporary use of a room in a publichouse for the purpose of dancing on a particular festival or occasion does not subject the owner to a penalty (Shutt v. Lewis (1804), 5 Esp. 128; 8 R. R. 840).

To subject a party to penalties for keeping a house for illegal dancing and music, it is not necessary that he should take money for admission (Archer v. Willingrice (1802), 4 Esp. 186). Where a room above the bar of a publichouse was used for music and dancing, the keeper of the house was held liable for not having a licence, though the persons using the room paid nothing to him for it (Frailing v. Messenger (1867), 31 J. P. 423; 16 L. T. 497). A room used for public music or dancing is within the statute, although it is not exclusively used for those purposes, and although no money is taken for admission; but the mere accidental or occasional use of a room for either or both of these purposes will not be within the statute (Gregory v. Tuffs (1833), 6 C. & P. 271; 1 M. & Rob. 313; Gregory v. Tavernor (1833), 6 C. & P. 280).

In an action to recover the penalty for keeping an unlicensed house for public dancing, it appeared that music, dancing, etc., had occasionally taken place at the defendant's publichouse, and that no money was taken by him for admission, but the rooms were let to persons who sold tickets and received money for admission at the door; but there was no direct evidence that the defendant knew of this practice:—Held, that there was evidence to go to the jury of a keeping of the house by the defendant for the purposes mentioned, and that the judge was wrong in directing a non-suit (Marks v. Benjamin (1839), 5 M. & W. 565; 3 Jur. 1194).

Note to Section 51.

No action can be maintained on an agreement to exhibit entertainment for gain in a place where, by the statute, a licence cannot be obtained (Levy v. Yates (1838), 8 A. & E. 129; 3 N. & P. 249).

A room kept for public dancing or music without a licence is a disorderly house under the Act, though no disorderly or improper conduct is allowed. The preamble does not confine the section to "places of entertainment for the lower sort of people," where robberies are likely to ensue. A defendant indicted for keeping such house must prove his licence (R. v. Wolfe (1849), 13 J. P. 428).

A. kept a room which was used as a supper-room and place of general refreshment, there being at the end of it a raised platform, on which stood a piano, and where songs were constantly sung. Programmes of the performance were laid about in different parts of the room. The company was respectable, and no money was paid for admission, nor any extra charge made for the articles consumed there. An action having been brought for a penalty under the Act, the judge asked the jury whether the room was used for the purpose of supplying refreshments in the manner of an hotel, the music and singing being incidental merely, or whether it was used principally for musical performances; and ultimately he directed them to consider whether the room was used for both purposes, in which latter case the informer would be entitled to the verdict. The jury said that the room was used for the purpose of an hotel, and found a verdict for A.:—Held, that although the verdict might be against the evidence, there was no misdirection (Hall v. Green (1853), 9 Ex. 247; 23 L. J. M. C. 15).

Under similar words in a local Act it was held that to bring a case within the statute the music and dancing must be an essential part of the entertainment, and not merely accessories to it. It is not necessary that the dancing should be by the public (Quaglieni v. Matthews (1865), 6 B. & S. 474; 29 J. P. 439). See also 73 J. P. N. 458 (a gramophone and cinematograph entertainment combined).

A common informer having recovered in an action from the defendant the penalty of £100 for keeping a house without a licence, it was held that only one penalty was recoverable, and that a second action by another common informer to recover a like penalty was not maintainable (Garrett v. Messenger (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 583; 31 J. P. 423); but see also Girdlestone v. Brighton Aquarium Co. (1878), 4 Ex. D. 107; 43 J. P. 428; Barrett v. Johnson (1836), 2 Jones Ir. Ex. Rep. 197; Apothecaries Co. v. Jones, [1893] 1 Q. B. 89; 57 J. P. 56.

Under the statute the justices have a discretion to grant a licence for music only; and the keeper of a house with a music licence only is liable to a penalty for keeping a house without a licence if he permits public dancing in the house (Brown v. Nugent (1872), L. R. 6 Q. B. 693; L. R. 7 Q. B. 588; 36 J. P. 22).

Under similar provisions in a local Act it was held that the justices had an implied right to grant the licence for one year, though no period was mentioned in the statute, and that they were entitled to refuse to renew it (Hoffmann v. Bond (1875), 32 L. T. 775; 40 J. P. 5). See hereon sub-s. (2).

The defendant kept a skating rink, enclosed by a wall, partly roofed with canvas and partly open to the air. It was open for skating in the daytime and in the evening. In the daytime there was no music. In the evening a band played operatic and dance music while the skaters skated. The defendant had no licence. It was held that he might be properly convicted of keeping a place of public entertainment of a like kind to music and dancing without a licence, and, semble, that he might also be convicted of keeping a place for public music without a licence (R. v. Tucker (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 417; 41 J. P. 294).

C. was lessee of a theatre duly licensed under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 68; he also held a justices' licence under the Act of 1751, and on Ash Wednesday he gave a concert in the theatre, to which the public were admitted for money. Both his licences contained a regulation that no entertainment should be given on Ash Wednesday. It was held that he did not commit an offence against the Act of 1751, as the concert was not a public entertainment ejusdem generis with public dancing, and, at all events, the room was not habitually kept for such entertainment (Syers v. Conquest (1873), 28 L. T. 402; 37 J. P. 342).

D. was convicted under the Theatres Act, 1843, for keeping a place for the public performance of stage plays, and for causing to be acted there certain parts in a stage play without the licence required by that Act. It was proved that he was the occupier of a hall, which, though licensed for public dancing and music, was not licensed as a theatre, and that one end of that hall was fitted up with a stage, where, with lights and scenery and the other accessories of a stage, he caused to be presented for the amusement of the public, for which they paid, a performance sustained by living persons with a dialogue between them and a regular plot, distinguished only from an ordinary stage play by all the actors except two (the dialogue between whom was wholly subordinate to the plot of the piece) being not bodily on the stage, but represented merely by a reflection of their figures on a mirror at the back of the stage, so ingeniously contrived that to the spectators the appearance was that of persons actually upon the stage:—Held, that there had been a violation of the statute, and that the conviction was right (Day v. Simpson (1865), 18 C. B. (N.S.) 680; 34 L. J. M. C. 149).

Note to Section 51.

A performance in a place duly registered as a place of public worship, in which no music but sacred music is performed or sung, where nothing dramatic is introduced, where the discourses delivered are intended to be instructive and contain nothing hostile to religion, is not an entertainment within the meaning of the Sunday Observance Act, 1780. Therefore, where services were held on a Sunday evening in a registered place, and at such services sacred music was performed by amateur and professional performers, and addresses given, and a small sum charged for reserved seats, it was held that an action could not be maintained against the president of such association under the above Act (Baxter v. Langley (1868), L. R. 4 C. P. 21; 32 J. P. 805). See for other cases under this Act, Reid v. Wilson, [1895] 1 Q. B. 315; 59 J. P. 516; Terry v. Brighton Aquarium (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 306; 39 J. P. 519; Warner v. Brighton Aquarium (1875), L. R. 10 Ex. 291; Girdlestone v. Brighton Aquarium (1879), 4 Ex. D. 107; 43 J. P. 428. As to remission of penalties, see 38 & 39 Vict. c. 80, s. 1.

1. After the expiration of six months from the adoption of this Part of this Act, a house, room, garden, or other place (a), whether licensed or not for the sale of wine, spirits, beer, or other fermented or distilled liquors, shall not be kept or used for public dancing, singing, music, or other public entertainment of the like kind (b) without a licence for the purpose or purposes (c) for which the same respectively is to be used first obtained from the licensing justices of the licensing district (d) in which the house, room, garden, or place is situate, and for the registration thereof a fee of five shillings shall be paid by the person applying therefor (e):

(a) By the proviso to s. 5 of the Baths and Washhouses Act, 1878, no covered or open swimming bath provided under the Baths and Washhouses Acts when closed during the winter months might be used for music or dancing. But this proviso was repealed as to the county of London by the Baths and Washhouses Act, 1896, and as to places outside that county by the Baths and Washhouses Act, 1899: see as to them that Act, in App. I., post, Vol. II.; Att.-Gen. v. Walthamstow U. D. C., [1910] 1 Ch. 347; 74 J. P. 147; Att.-Gen. v. Shoreditch Borough Council, [1915] 2 Ch. 154. "Place."

As to naval and military recreation rooms, see the Army (Annual) Act, 1889, s. 7.

As to what is "a place" within the meaning of the Act, reference may be made to cases under the Betting Act, 1853. B. hired a piece of ground on the cliff near the end of the esplanade at Margate, and permitted certain persons to use a portion of the land for public entertainments, comprising music and dancing. This portion was enclosed partly by ropes and stakes, and partly by chains, no charge for admission being made, but a hat being passed round for donations after each turn, and the performers being accommodated with a tent for dressing purposes. It was held that B. ought to have a licence under this Act (Farndale v. Bainbridge (1898), Times, January 14th).

(b) The landlord of an hotel, by merely permitting his customers on many occasions to sing in one of the public rooms of the hotel, and to use a pianoforte kept there by him, does not thereby keep or use such room for public singing, music, or other public entertainment of the like kind within the meaning of the section (Brearley v. Morley, [1899] 2 Q. B. 121; 63 J. P. 582). See also Hall v. Green, Quaglieni v. Matthews, R. v. Tucker, on p. 862, ante. See also as to what amounts to "keeping or using," Marks v. Benjamin, ante, p. 861; Martin v. Benjamin, [1907] 1 K. B. 64; 71 J. P. 30; R. v. Belfast JJ., [1914] 2 I. R. 181; Vecsey v. Smith (1917), 86 L. J. K. B. 249; 81 "Keep or use."

Note to Section 51.

J. P. 1. See also as to gramophone music, 72 J. P. N. 160. Whether the dancing, etc. is public or not is a question of fact for the justices. The trustees of a burial society owned a room which, when not required for the purposes of the society, was let by them for balls, etc. It was so let on several occasions to a committee of gentlemen who got up subscription dances, for which they issued invitations to subscribers of one guinea or more, each subscriber of one guinea securing thereby admission for himself and one lady. It was held that a decision of quarter sessions quashing a conviction of the trustees for not having a licence, on the ground that the balls were not public, could not be reversed, it being a question of fact whether the balls were public or not (Maloney v. Lingard (1898), Times, January 14th).

The "user" or "keeping" must be more or less regular (Marks v. Benjamin, Syers v. Conquest, and other cases on pp. 861 et seq.).

(c) They may grant a licence for one purpose only: see Brown v. Nugent, ante, p. 862. A music and dancing licence does not cover stage plays (Levy v. Yates, Day v. Simpson, pp. 862, 863, ante), nor does a theatre licence cover music and dancing (Syers v. Conquest, p. 862, ante). But the same room may have both licences.

(d) For definitions of "licensing justices," "licensing district," see sub-s. (13).

(e) This fee is presumably payable to the clerk of the justices. Under the Middlesex Act (p. 861, ante) no fee is payable for a charitable entertainment.

2. Such justices may, under the hands of a majority of them assembled at their general annual licensing meeting or at any adjournment thereof or at any special session convened with fourteen days' previous notice, grant licences to such persons as they think fit to keep or use houses, rooms, gardens, or places for all or any of the purposes aforesaid upon such terms and conditions, and subject to such restrictions as they by the respective licences determine, and every licence shall be in force for one year or for such shorter period as the justices on the grant of the licence shall determine, unless the same shall have been previously revoked as hereinafter provided:

The general annual licensing meeting, at which new licences and renewals of licences for the sale of intoxicating liquor are granted, is held within the first fourteen days of February in every year. The justices must hold at least one adjournment of the meeting, not less than six days and not more than a month after the original meeting: see the Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910, s. 10.

The "special session" here mentioned is not a "transfer session" for the transfer of liquor licences. It is an ordinary special session of the justices of the division convened in the usual way. See R. v. Oldham JJ. (1909), 73 J. P. 390; 101 L. T. 430, as to a slightly different clause in a local Act. As to the notice of the intention to apply for a licence, see sub-s. (4), infra.

A licence may be granted for music only, or for dancing only, or as the case may be: see Brown v. Nugent, ante, p. 862. Applications for these licences must be determined judicially. See R. v. London C. C., [1892] 1 Q. B. 190; 56 J. P. 8; Royal Aquarium Society v. Parkinson, [1892] 1 Q. B. 431; 56 J. P. 404.

As to the duration of the licence, see also Hoffman v. Bond, ante, p. 862.

Temporary licences may also be granted by petty sessions under sub-s. (11), post, p. 866.

Justices have full discretion in granting or transferring these licences, and the Act gives no appeal against a refusal, for the justices are not a Court of Summary Jurisdiction within the meaning of s. 7, ante, p. 823. See Huish v. Liverpool JJ., [1914] 1 K. B. 109; 78 J. P. 45.

Conditions attached to licences.

The terms, conditions, and restrictions annexed to a licence may be conveniently indorsed on the licence, and may be printed or written. Apparently a condition that the licensee should not apply for a licence to sell intoxicating liquors would, if imposed under the special circumstances of the case and not in pursuance of any general rule to that effect, be held good: see R. v. West Riding C. C., [1896] 2 Q. B. 386; 60 J. P. 550; Manchester Palace of Varieties, Ltd. v. Mayor, etc. of Manchester (1898), 62 J. P. 425; R. v. Sheerness U. D. C. (1898), 62 J. P. 563; 14 T. L. R. 533. The holder of a music and dancing licence (as opposed to a theatre licence) cannot obtain a liquor licence without a justices' licence therefor (R. v. Inland Revenue (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 569; 52 J. P. 390).

Note to Section 51.

In granting a music and dancing licence for a hall in connection with licensed premises, the justices imposed a condition that a sum of 3*d.* (at least) should be charged to each person for admission, and should not be refunded in the form of refreshment. It was held that the imposition of such a condition was justified (Ex parte Richards (1904), 68 J. P. 536; 20 T. L. R. 669).

See also London C. C. v. Bermondsey Bioscope Co., Ltd., [1911] 1 K. B. 445; 75 J. P. 53; Ellis v. North Metropolitan Theatres, [1915] 2 K. B. 61; 79 J. P. 297, as to imposing a condition against Sunday opening in the case of cinematograph exhibitions. And see also as to conditions imposed on the grant of cinematograph licences: Halifax Theatre de Luxe v. Gledhill, [1915] 2 K. B. 49; 79 J. P. 238; R. v. London C. C., [1915] 2 K. B. 466; 79 J. P. 417; R. v. Burnley JJ. (1916), 85 L. J. K. B. 1565; 80 J. P. 384; Slott v. Gamble, [1916] 2 K. B. 504; 80 J. P. 443; Ellis v. Dubowski, [1921] 3 K. B. 621; 85 J. P. 230.

As to the revocation of a licence, see sub-s. 9, infra.

3. Such justices may from time to time at any such special session aforesaid transfer any such licence to such person as they think fit:

As to the "special session," see the note to the preceding sub-section.

As to the notice of intention to transfer, see the next sub-section.

A transfer will be necessary upon each change of occupier, as the licence is a personal one, as well as in respect of the particular premises.

4. Each person shall in each case give fourteen days' notice to the clerk of the licensing justices and to the chief officer of police of the police district in which the house, room, garden, or place is situated, of his intention to apply for any such licence or for the transfer of any such licence:

As to the clerk of the licensing justices and the chief officer of police, see sub-s. 13, infra. In the case of renewals notice is not necessary (sub-s. 10, post); see also sub-s. 11, post, as to licences for short periods.

5. Any house, room, garden, or place kept or used for any of the purposes aforesaid without such licence first obtained shall be deemed a disorderly house, and the person occupying or rated as occupier of the same shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds for every day on which the same is kept or used for any of the purposes last aforesaid:

Though the house is to be deemed a disorderly house, it does not appear that the occupier will be liable to indictment for keeping a disorderly house, as a penalty is here provided which will be recoverable as provided by s. 6, with appeal to quarter sessions under s. 7. In this respect the present enactment differs from the 25 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 2, under which the occupier is liable to a penalty, and to be otherwise punishable as the law directs in cases of disorderly houses. The Middlesex Act (p. 861, ante) provides for entry and arrest by constables.

Note, that it is the occupier, and not the person using, who is liable: cf. R. v. Belfast JJ., [1914] 2 I. R. 181; and see Bruce v. McManus, [1915] 3 K. B. 1; 79 J. P. 294.

6. There shall be affixed and kept up in some conspicuous place on the door or entrance of every house, room, garden, or place so kept or used and so licensed as aforesaid, an inscription in large capital letters in the words following: "Licensed in pursuance of Act of

Note to Section 51.

Parliament for ," with the addition of words showing the purpose or purposes for which the same is licensed :

The fixing and keeping up of this inscription must be inserted in and made a condition of every licence (sub-s. 8), and a penalty for breach of the condition is imposed by sub-s. 9, infra.

7. Any house, room, garden, or place so kept or used, although so licensed as aforesaid, shall not be opened for any of the said purposes except on the days and between the hours stated in the licence :

The Middlesex Act (p. 861, ante) is in different terms. As to a condition not to open on Ash Wednesday, see Syers v. Conquest, ante, p. 862. And as to Sundays, see the Sunday Observance Act, 1780, and Baxter v. Langley and cases cited therewith on p. 863, ante.

8. The affixing and keeping up of such inscription as aforesaid, and the observance of the days and hours of opening and closing, shall be inserted in and made a condition of every such licence :

As to the penalties for breach of this condition, see the next sub-section.

9. In case of any breach or disregard of any of the terms or conditions upon or subject to which the licence was granted, the holder thereof shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds, and to a daily penalty not exceeding five pounds, and such licence shall be liable to be revoked by the order of a court of summary jurisdiction :

As to the recovery of this penalty, see s. 6. For the definition of a daily penalty, see s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826. Appeal against conviction lies to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 823.

10. No notice need be given under sub-section four of this section when the application is for a renewal of any existing licence held by the applicant for the same premises :

In other words, notice under sub-s. 4 is necessary only on an application for a new licence or for a transfer, and not on application for a mere renewal.

11. The justices in any petty sessions may, if and as they think fit, grant to any person applying for the same a licence to keep or use any house, room, garden, or place for any purpose within the meaning of this section for any period not exceeding fourteen days which they shall specify in such licence, notwithstanding that no notices shall have been given under sub-section four of this section :

No notice is necessary before such an application is made. The application is to petty sessions for the grant of a licence for a period not exceeding fourteen days.

12. This section shall not apply within twenty miles of the cities of London or Westminster :

Within this area either the Disorderly Houses Act, 1751, or the Music and Dancing Licences (Middlesex) Act, 1894 (see p. 861, ante), are in force. See also the Baths and Washhouses Act, 1896.

13. In this section the expressions "licensing justice," "licensing district," and "clerk of the licensing justices" have respectively the same meanings as in the Licensing Acts, 1872—1874 (a); the expression "police district" means any area for which a separate police force is maintained; and the expression "chief officer of police" means the chief constable, head constable, or other officer, by whatever name called, having the chief command of such separate police force (b). Section 51.

(a) See now the Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910, ss. 2, 48, for definitions of these terms.

(b) A police district may be a county or a borough which has a separate police force.

PART V.

STOCK (a).

52.—(1) Where any authority, whether a municipal corporation, local board, or improvement commissioners, which is an urban authority, have for the time being, either in their capacity as urban authority or in any other capacity, any power to borrow money, they may, with the consent of the Local Government Board, exercise such power by the creation of stock to be created, issued, transferred, dealt with, and redeemed in such manner and in accordance with such regulations as the Local Government Board may from time to time prescribe. Issue of stock.

(a) This Part of the Act cannot be adopted by a rural authority.

Notice of the resolution adopting this Part of the Act must be sent to the Ministry of Health (see s. 3 (5), ante, p. 821).

By the Metropolis Water Act, 1902, the provisions of this section were, subject to the provisions of that Act, applied to water stock issued thereunder.

A person acting innocently and without negligence delivered to a municipal corporation a forged transfer of stock requesting them to register him as the transferee thereof. The corporation acting bona fide and without negligence registered the transfer, but subsequently had to make good the loss to the true owner of the stock whose signature was forged. It was held that there was an implied contract that the person at whose request the forged transfer was registered would make good to the corporation the loss sustained by them (Sheffield Corporation v. Barclay, [1905] A. C. 392; 69 J. P. 385).

As to the meaning of the term stock "redeemable at the option of" the council at a certain date, see Edinburgh Corporation v. British Linen Bank, [1913] A. C. 133.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the above power, such regulations may provide for the discharge of any loan raised by such stock, and in the case of consolidation of debt for extending or varying the times within which loans may be discharged, and may provide for the consent of limited owners and for the application of the Acts relating to stamp duties and to cheques, and for the disposal of unclaimed dividends, and may apply for the purposes of this section, with or without modifications, any enactments of the Local Loans Act, 1875, and the Acts amending the same, and of any Act relating to stock issued by the Metropolitan Board of Works, or the County Council of London, or by the corporation of any municipal borough.

Note to Section 52.

For the Local Loans Act, 1875, and amending Acts, see App. I., post. Under these Acts loans must be raised by (1) terminable annuities, (2) debentures, or (3) debenture stock. Where this part of the Act is adopted, local stock may be created with the consent of the Ministry of Health, and subject to their regulations.

As to stamp duties, the Finance Act, 1899, s. 8, provides as follows:—"(1) Where any local authority, corporation, company, or body of persons formed or established in the United Kingdom propose to issue any loan capital, they shall, before the issue thereof, deliver to the Commissioners [of Inland Revenue] a statement of the amount proposed to be secured by the issue. [As to the date of issue, see Att.-Gen. v. Liverpool Corporation, [1902] 1 K. B. 411; 66 J. P. 391.]

"(2) Subject to the provisions of this section every such statement shall be charged with an ad valorem stamp duty of two shillings and sixpence for every hundred pounds and any fraction of a hundred pounds over any multiple of a hundred pounds of the amount proposed to be secured by the issue, and the amount of the duty shall be a debt due to her Majesty.

"(3) The duty under this section shall not be charged to the extent to which it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioners that the stamp duty payable in respect of a mortgage or marketable security has been paid on any trust deed or other document securing the loan capital proposed to be issued.

"(4) If any local authority, corporation, company, or body of persons neglect to deliver a statement, or fail to pay the duty in compliance with this section, that local authority, corporation, company, or body of persons, shall be liable to pay to her Majesty, in addition to the duty, a sum equal to ten per cent. upon the amount of the duty, and a like sum for every month after the first month during which the neglect or failure continues.

"(5) In this section the expression 'loan capital' means any debenture stock, county stock, corporation stock, municipal stock, or funded debt, by whatever name known, or any capital raised by any local authority, corporation, company, or body of persons formed or established in the United Kingdom, which is borrowed, or has the character of borrowed money, whether it is in the form of stock or in any other form, but does not include any county council or municipal corporation bills repayable not later than twelve months from their date or any overdraft at the bank or other loan raised for a merely temporary purpose for a period not exceeding twelve months, and the expression 'local authority' includes any county council, municipal corporation, district council, dock trustees, harbour trustees, or other local body by whatever name called."

The above section has now been amended by the Finance Act, 1907, s. 10; sub-s. (1) provides that where it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue that the loan capital issued by any local authority, in respect of which a statement has after the commencement of the Act been delivered to the Commissioners under s. 8 of the Finance Act, 1899, has been wholly or partly applied for the purpose of the conversion or consolidation of then existing loan capital, that authority shall be entitled to repayment in respect of the duty charged on the statement so delivered at the rate of 2s. for every £100 of the capital to which the statement relates which is so shown to have been applied for the purpose of the conversion or consolidation of then existing loan capital. These provisions are not to apply to any duty payable in respect of a mortgage or marketable security which has been paid on any trust deed or other document securing the loan capital which has been issued. Sub-section (2) empowers the Commissioners, if it is represented to them by any local authority that loan capital about to be issued by the authority is to be applied, in whole or in part, for the purpose of the conversion or consolidation of existing loan capital, to postpone the time for the delivery of the statement and the payment of duty under s. 8 of the Finance Act, 1899, until the capital has been issued or until such other time as the Commissioners think fit for the purpose of enabling the payment and repayment of the duty to take place as one transaction.

(3) Such regulations shall be laid before each House of Parliament for not less than thirty days during which such House sits, and if either House during such thirty days resolves that such regulations ought not to be proceeded with, the same shall be of no effect, without prejudice nevertheless to the making of further regulations.

(4) If no such resolution is passed, it shall be lawful for her Majesty by Order in Council to confirm such regulations, and the same when so confirmed shall be deemed to have been duly made and to be within the powers of this Act, and shall be of the same force as if they were enacted in this Act. Section 52.

The regulations at present in force were confirmed by Order in Council dated September 26th, 1891 (see Stat. R. & O., 1891, p. 609), and amended by regulations confirmed by Orders in Council dated August 3rd, 1897 (see Stat. R. & O., 1897, p. 80), August 8th, 1901 (Stat. R. & O., 1901, p. 65), April 5th, 1902 (Stat. R. & O., 1902, p. 61), and August 10th, 1921 (Stat. R. & O., 1921, p. 169).

As to income tax on dividends, see Lord Advocate v. Edinburgh Magistrates (1905), 7 F. 972; London C. C. v. Att.-Gen., [1901] A. C. 26; 65 J. P. 227; Att.-Gen. v. London C. C., [1907] A. C. 131; 71 J. P. 217; Sugden v. Leeds Corporation, [1914] A. C. 483; 77 J. P. 225.

THE HOUSING OF THE WORKING CLASSES ACT, 1890.

(53 & 54 Vict. c. 70.)

An Act to consolidate and amend the Acts relating to Artizans and Labourers Dwellings and the Housing of the Working Classes.
[18th August 1890.]

[In view of the possibility of a Bill for the consolidation of the Housing Acts being introduced and passed into law in the present Session of Parliament (1922) it has been thought advisable to take out of Vol. I. this Act and also the Housing of the Working Classes Acts, 1894, 1900, and 1903; the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909; the Housing Act, 1914; the Housing (No. 2) Act, 1914; the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1919; the Housing (Additional Powers) Act, 1919; and the Housing Act, 1921. These Acts or the Consolidation Act (if any) which replaces them will be inserted in Vol. II.]

THE ALLOTMENTS RATING EXEMPTION ACT, 1891.

An Act to amend the Laws relating to the Rating of Allotments for sanitary purposes. [21st July 1891.]

Whereas it is enacted by section two hundred and eleven, sub-section (1) (b), and section two hundred and thirty of the Public Health Act, 1875, that "the occupier of any land used as arable, meadow, or pasture ground only, or as woodlands, market gardens, or nursery grounds," shall be assessed to the general district rate in an urban district or to a separate rate levied in respect of special expenses within the meaning of the said Act in a rural district, in the proportion of one-fourth part only of the net annual value or rateable value of such land:

And whereas doubts have arisen whether allotments are or are not included among the lands to which the aforesaid exemptions apply:

And whereas it is expedient to remove such doubts, and to render the practice of assessment uniform, and to relieve allotments from all liability to be assessed for sanitary purposes at a higher rate than other cultivated lands: . . .

Amendment of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 211 (1) (b) and s. 230.

1. From and after the first day of October one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one section two hundred and eleven, sub-section one (a), and section two hundred and thirty (a) of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall be read and construed as if the word "allotments" was inserted in each of those sections after the word "woodlands" (b): Provided that nothing in this Act shall apply to any rate made under either of the said sections on or before the first day of October one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

(a) See these sections ante, pp. 478, 514.

(b) This enactment is similar to that contained in the Public Health (Rating of Orchards) Act, 1890, ante, p. 805. Its effect is that allotments are rateable at one-fourth only of the net rateable value for the purposes of a general district rate under s. 211, or a separate rate under s. 230 of the P. H. A., 1875.

Definition of "allotment."

2. "Allotment" means any parcel of land of not more than two acres in extent and let as an allotment, and cultivated as a garden or a farm, or partly as a garden and partly as a farm.

Compare the definition of an allotment in 50 & 51 Vict. c. 26, s. 4, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

Short title.

3. This Act may be cited as the Allotments Rating Exemption Act, 1891.

THE PRIVATE STREET WORKS ACT, 1892.

(55 & 56 VICT. c. 57.)

An Act to amend the Public Health Acts in relation to Private Street Improvement Expenses. [28th June 1892.]

Short title, construction and extent.

1. This Act may be cited as the Private Street Works Act, 1892, and shall be construed as one with the Public Health Acts, and shall extend only to England; and this Act and the Public Health Acts may be cited together as the Public Health Acts.

When this Act is adopted by an urban authority it takes the place of ss. 150—152 of the P. H. A., 1875, and s. 41 of the P. H. A., 1890 (see s. 25, post, p. 888). Rural councils can only obtain powers under the Act in pursuance of an Order under s. 4.

As to the Acts comprised under the title "Public Health Acts," see the Short Titles Act, 1896. They include the Acts hereinbefore contained, except the Epidemic and other Diseases Prevention Act, 1883; the Public Health and Local Government Conferences Act, 1885; the Local Government Act, 1888; the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889; the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889; the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890; and the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890.

The effect of the provision that the Act shall be construed as one with the Public Health Acts, is that every part of each of them must be construed as if it had been contained in one Act, unless there is some manifest discrepancy making it necessary to hold that the latter Act has to some extent modified something to be found in the earlier ones (Canada Southern Rail. Co. v. International Bridge Co. (1883), 8 App. Cas. 723; cf. also R. v. Palmer (1784), 1 Leach C. C. 352; Ex parte Copeland (1852), 2 De G. M. & G. 914; Read v. Joannon (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 301; Willingale v.

Norris (1908), 72 J. P. 495; Charing Cross, etc., Electricity Supply Co. v. London Hydraulic Co., [1913] 3 K. B. 442; [1914] 3 K. B. 783; Brownlow v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1862), 13 C. B. (N.S.) 768; London C. C. v. Port of London Authority, [1914] 2 Ch. 362; 30 T. L. R. 406; R. v. Essex JJ., [1916] 2 K. B. 406; 80 J. P. 345). Consequently definitions and general provisions —e.g., as to service of notices—contained in those Acts will apply, unless expressly excluded or obviously inappropriate. Note to Section 1.

"England" includes Wales and Berwick-on-Tweed (20 Geo. 2, c. 42, s. 3).

2. This Act shall extend and apply to any urban sanitary district in which it is respectively adopted under the provisions of this Act. Adoption of Act.

An adoption of the Act would seem to be irrevocable: see also s. 25 and note thereto. As to the mode of adoption, see the next section.

3. The following provisions shall have effect with regard to the adoption of this Act by urban authorities: Adoption of Act by urban authorities.

(1) The adoption shall be by a resolution passed at a meeting of the urban authority; and one calendar month at least before such meeting special notice of the meeting, and of the intention to propose such resolution, shall be given to every member of the authority, and the notice shall be deemed to have been duly given to a member of it if it is either—

(a) Given in the mode in which notices to attend meetings of the authority are usually given (a); or

(b) Where there is no such mode, then signed by the clerk of the authority, and delivered to the member or left at his usual or last known place of abode in England, or forwarded by post in a prepaid registered letter, addressed to the member at his usual or last known place of abode in England.

(a) See note to the similar provision in 53 & 54 Vict. c. 34, s. 3, ante, p. 808. The only difference is that under the text a month's notice of the meeting must be given. See also 53 & 54 Vict. c. 59, s. 3, ante, p. 820. For a form of notice of intention to move the adoption of the Act, see the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., p. 71. See also forms of notice of meeting and of resolution of adoption, ibid., pp. 72, 73.

(2) Such resolution shall be published by advertisement in some one or more newspapers circulating within the district of the authority, and by causing notice thereof to be affixed to the principal doors of every church and chapel (a) in the place to which notices are usually fixed, and otherwise in such manner as the authority think sufficient for giving notice thereof to all persons interested, and shall come into operation at such time not less than one month (b) after the first publication of the advertisement of the resolution as the authority may by the resolution fix, and upon its coming into operation this Act shall extend to that district.

Compare the similar provisions in 53 & 54 Vict. c. 34, s. 3; 53 & 54 Vict. c. 59, s. 3. A form of notice of the resolution for publication will be found in Vol. XI. of the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, at p. 73.

(a) The churches and chapels above referred to are those of the Established Church only. See cases in note to the P. H. A., 1890, s. 3 (4), ante, p. 821.

(b) "Month" means "calendar month" (Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 3). If, therefore, the date, fixed by a resolution of adoption for the Act to take effect, is less than one calendar month from the date of the resolution, it will be necessary for proceedings to be begun afresh.

Section 3.

(3) A copy of the resolution shall be sent to the Local Government Board.

For L. G. B. read now the Ministry of Health.

(4) A copy of the advertisement shall be conclusive evidence of the resolution having been passed, unless the contrary be shown; and no objection to the effect of the resolution on the ground that notice of the intention to propose the same was not duly given, or on the ground that the resolution was not sufficiently published, shall be made after three months from the date of the first publication of the advertisement.

See the note to the similar provision in 53 & 54 Vict. c. 34, s. 3, ante, p. 808.

Local Government Board may extend Act to rural districts.

4. The Local Government Board may declare that the provisions contained in this Act shall be in force in any rural sanitary district, or any part thereof, and may invest a rural sanitary authority with the powers, rights, duties, capacities, liabilities, and obligations which an urban authority may acquire by adoption of this Act, in like manner and subject to the same provisions as they are enabled to invest rural sanitary authorities with the powers of urban sanitary authorities under the provisions of section two hundred and seventy-six of the Public Health Act, 1875.

See the note to s. 3 (3), supra.

Compare the provisions in 53 & 54 Vict. c. 59, s. 5, ante, p. 822.

For the P. H. A., 1875, s. 276, see p. 613, ante. The practice of the Ministry of Health in conferring the powers of this Act upon rural authorities is very similar to that under the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 150, 152, and 276. See particularly the notes to the first of these sections, ante, p. 287. In view, however, of s. 20 of the present Act, the Ministry do not require a formal undertaking by the rural authority to take over the streets referred to in the Order as highways repairable by the inhabitants at large when the works have been executed. See also notes to ss. 9 and 25.

A rural district council may apply for powers under this Act in respect of certain streets and for those under the P. H. A., 1875, in respect of other streets.

An Order of the Ministry of Health under this section is not conclusive as to a street named in it being in fact "a street" (Fenwick v. Croydon Rural Sanitary Authority, ante, p. 288), nor as to it being within the contributory place dealt with by the Order (R. v. Cheshire JJ. (1909), 73 J. P. 499; 101 L. T. 683).

Forms for use under this section will be found in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., at pp. 72—74.

Interpretation.

5. In this Act, if not inconsistent with the context—

The expression "urban authority" means an urban sanitary authority under the Public Health Acts (a).

The expressions "urban sanitary district" and "rural sanitary district" mean respectively an urban sanitary district and a rural sanitary district under the Public Health Acts (b), and "district" means the district of an urban sanitary authority or of a rural sanitary authority, as the case may require.

The expressions "surveyor" (c), "lands" (d), "premises" (d), "owner" (e), "drain" (f), "sewer" (g), have respectively the same meaning as in the Public Health Acts.

The expression "street" means (unless the context otherwise requires) a street as defined by the Public Health Acts, and not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large (h).

Words referring to "paving, metalling, and flagging" shall be construed as including macadamising, asphalting, gravelling, kerbing, and every method of making a carriageway or footway (i). Section 5.

(a) See the definition of an urban sanitary authority, ante, p. 37.

(b) See ante, p. 37.

(c) "Surveyor" is defined, ante, p. 7.

(d) "Lands" and "premises" are defined, ante, p. 7.

(e) "Owner" is defined, ante, p. 8.

(f) "Drain" is defined, ante, p. 24.

(g) "Sewer" is defined, ante, p. 26.

(h) See the definition of a street in the P. H. A., 1875, s. 4, ante, p. 15. As to the additional words "not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large," see Rishton v. Mayor, etc. of Haslingden, [1898] 1 Q. B. 294; 62 J. P. 85; Leigh-on-Sea U. D. C. v. King, [1901] 1 Q. B. 747; 65 J. P. 243; Cababé v. Walton-on-Thames U. D. C., p. 275, ante; Folkestone Corporation v. Brockman, p. 276, ante; and notes on pp. 274, 291, ante.

See Vyner v. Wirral R. D. C. (1909), 7 L. G. R. 628; 73 J. P. 242, as to the admissibility of old maps upon the question of age and (consequently) "repairability": Mercer v. Denne, [1905] 2 Ch. 538; Trafford v. St. Faith's R. D. C. (1910), 74 J. P. 497; see also Att.-Gen. v. Horner, [1913] 2 Ch. 140; 77 J. P. 257; Fowke v. Berington, [1914] 2 Ch. 308.

The street, or that part of it which is to be dealt with, must be within the authority's district. Where the premises on one side of a street are in another district, no expenses can be apportioned upon them (Hornsey Borough Council v. Birkbeck Freehold Land Society, [1906] 1 K. B. 521; 70 J. P. 140; Alderson v. Bishop Auckland U. D. C. (1912), 76 J. P. 347; 10 L. G. R. 722; Shoreditch Borough Council v. Wakeham (1905), 69 J. P. 239. See also note (a) to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150). Similarly, if in a rural district part of a street is in an adjoining contributory place in which the Act has not been put into force, no apportionment can be made on premises in that contributory place (R. v. Cheshire JJ., p. 872, ante).

(i) This provision meets the decision in Att.-Gen. v. Bidder (1881), 47 J. P. 263, ante, p. 825. The text resembles the P. H. A., 1890, s. 11 (2), ante, p. 825.

6.—(1) Where any street (a) or part of a street (b) is not sewered, levelled, paved, metalled, flagged, channelled, made good, and lighted to the satisfaction of the urban authority (c), the urban authority may from time to time resolve with respect to such street or part of a street to do any one or more of the following works (in this Act called private street works); that is to say, to sewer, level, pave, metal, flag, channel, or make good, or to provide proper means for lighting such street or part of a street; and the expenses incurred by the urban authority in executing private street works shall be apportioned (subject as in this Act mentioned) on the premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on such street or part of a street (d). Any such resolution may include several streets or parts of streets, or may be limited to any part or parts of a street (e). Private street works.

A procedure, appropriate in the case of streets which are not ripe for complete making up, is available under the P. H. A., 1907, s. 19, where that section has been declared to be in force in the district. See the terms of that section and notes thereto at p. 1029, post. It will be seen that, unless a majority of the owners in a street act under sub-s. (4) of the section in question, it will be open to an authority to do urgent repairs to a private street from time to time without proceeding under either s. 150 of the Act of 1875 or this Act; and, so long as such repairs only are executed, the authority cannot be called upon to take over the street.

(a) See the definition in the preceding section.

(b) See note to the similar words in the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150, ante, p. 294: see

Note to Section 6.

Standring v. Bexhill Corporation (1909), 73 J. P. 241, for an instance of a street the centre of which was repairable by a tramway company.

(c) As to what is included in the terms "paved, metalled, flagged," see s. 5, supra. As to what is included in the term "channelled," and as to the liability of a local authority in respect of a plate or cover placed over the channel in the course of work done under the Act, see Jones v. Rew (1910), 79 L. J. K. B. 1030; 74 J. P. 321. See also Horridge v. Makinson (1915), 79 J. P. 484, ante, p. 263.

As to when a street has been sewered, etc. to the satisfaction of the urban authority, see Bonella v. Twickenham L. B., and later cases cited therewith at pp. 294—296, ante.

(d) As to what are premises "fronting, adjoining, or abutting on a street," see the notes on p. 298, ante. The words "subject as in this Act mentioned," refer to s. 10, post, p. 880, which enables the authority to resolve that in settling the apportionment certain matters other than mere frontage shall be taken into consideration.

It has been held that all premises in the street must be included in the provisional apportionment, although some of such premises are extra commercium, and therefore have no "owners" within the meaning of the statute (Herne Bay U. D. C. v. Payne, [1907] 2 K. B. 130; 71 J. P. 282).

(e) This was a new provision.

A form of resolution for use under this section will be found in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., at p. 74.

(2) The surveyor shall prepare, as respects each street or part of a street (a)—

(a) A specification of the private street works referred to in the resolution, with plans and sections (if applicable);

(b) An estimate (b) of the probable expenses of the works;

(c) A provisional apportionment of the estimated expenses among the premises liable to be charged therewith under this Act (c).

Such specification, plans, sections, estimate, and provisional apportionment shall comprise the particulars prescribed in Part I. of the Schedule to this Act, and shall be submitted to the urban authority, who may by resolution approve the same respectively with or without modification or addition as they think fit (d).

(a) The original resolution may include several streets or parts of streets, but the surveyor must deal with each separately in making his specification, etc.

(b) The estimate may include a percentage allowance for "contingencies" (Standring v. Bexhill Corporation, supra).

(c) As to the manner in which the provisional apportionment is to be made, see s. 10, post, p. 880. See form of provisional apportionment in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., p. 76.

(d) This is a second resolution, quite different from that mentioned in sub-s. (1). See form in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., p. 77. It must be published in the manner provided by the next sub-section. The specifications, etc. are not required to be published, but only the resolution, which should, therefore, clearly identify the specifications, etc. to which it refers.

(3) The resolution approving the specifications, plans, and sections (if any), estimates, and provisional apportionments, shall be published in the manner prescribed in Part II. of the Schedule to this Act (a), and copies thereof shall be served on the owners of the premises shown as liable to be charged in the provisional apportionment within seven days after the date of the first publication (b). During one month (c) from the date of the first publication the approved specifications, plans, and sections (if any), estimates, and provisional apportionments (or copies thereof certified by the surveyor), shall be kept deposited at the urban authority offices, and shall be open to inspection at all reasonable times (d). Section 6.

(a) I.e., by advertisement in a local paper once in each of two successive weeks, and by posting copies in or near the street once at least in each of three successive weeks. See the Schedule and notes thereto, post, p. 889. See form of notice of resolution in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., p. 77.

(b) As the Act does not provide for the service of the notices, they may be served in manner provided by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 267, ante, p. 593, and may be authenticated in manner provided by ibid., s. 266, ante, p. 593. The sub-section requires service on the "owner," not "reputed owner"; therefore, service on a person shown in the apportionment as "owner or reputed owner" is not sufficient if he be not in fact owner (Wirral R. D. C. v. Carter, [1903] 1 K. B. 646; 67 J. P. 31).

(d) Reasonable times would probably be held equivalent to usual office hours.

From the fact that the urban authority has resolved under this section to approve a provisional apportionment including premises which do not abut on the street but access to which is obtained from the street through a court, passage, etc. (as to which see s. 10, post), it must be presumed that they think fit to do so, but strictly speaking the resolution of approval should say so expressly (Oakley v. Merthyr Tydfil Corporation, [1922] 1 K. B. 409; 86 J. P. 1).

7. During the said month any owner of any premises (a) shown in a provisional apportionment as liable to be charged with any part of the expenses of executing the works may, by written notice served on the urban authority (b), object to the proposals of the urban authority on any of the following grounds: (that is to say,) Objections to proposed works.

(a) That an alleged street or part of a street is not or does not form part of a street within the meaning of this Act (c);

(b) That a street or part of a street is (in whole or in part) a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large (d);

(c) That there has been some material informality, defect, or error in or in respect of the resolution, notice, plans, sections, or estimate;

(d) That the proposed works are insufficient or unreasonable, or that the estimated expenses are excessive (e):

(e) That any premises ought to be excluded from or inserted in the provisional apportionment (f);

(f) That the provisional apportionment is incorrect in respect of some matter of fact to be specified in the objection or (where the provisional apportionment is made with regard to other considerations than frontage as hereinafter provided) in respect of the degree of benefit to be derived by any persons, or the amount or value of any work already done by the owner or occupier of any premises (g).

For the purposes of this Act joint tenants or tenants in common may object through one of their number authorised in writing under the hands of the majority of such joint tenants or tenants in common.

(a) The expressions "owner" and "premises" are defined, ante, pp. 8, 7. If a mistake has been made as to who is the owner, the real owner can object under this section, although his name is not shown in the provisional apportionment.

(b) There is no duty on the part of a frontager to inspect the plans, so as to cast on him any liability for the leaving of a dangerous hole in the street consequent on the raising of the level of the street as shown in the plans (Horridge v. Makinson (1915), 84

Note to Section 7.

L. J. K. B. 1294; 79 J. P. 484). No mode of service is prescribed. Presumably a notice addressed to the authority, and left at their office during business hours, will be sufficient. See form of notice of objection in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., p. 78.

Certain frontagers addressed a memorial to a corporation stating that they had no desire to have the road taken over by the authority and that the proposed works were unreasonable and unnecessary, and asking that before any further steps were taken to carry out the works, an inquiry should be held upon the point. It was held that such a memorial was not an "objection" within the meaning of this section (Southampton Corporation v. Lord (1903), 67 J. P. 189).

No objection which might be raised under the Act can be subsequently taken in any court, proceeding, or manner whatsoever (s. 8 (2)). See as to this, Wallasey U. D. C. v. Walker, and Porthcawl U. D. C. v. Brogden, post, p. 877; Hayles v. Sandown U. D. C., [1903] 1 K. B. 169; 67 J. P. 177, where it was alleged that there had been a departure from the specifications; and Teddington U. D. C. v. Vile (1906), 70 J. P. 381; 4 L. G. R. 782, where a frontager failed to object at the proper time that a sewer had already been laid in front of her house by the former owner under an agreement with the authority.

"Not a street."

(c) In consequence of the very wide definition of "street" in the P. H. A., 1875, s. 4, p. 15, ante, objection is seldom taken that the place in question is not a "street" as therein defined. See, however, Bell v. Great Crosby U. D. C. (1913), 77 J. P. 37, for a dispute as to whether a strip of ground in front of a house formed part of an admitted "street" or was purely private property. But the definition of a street in this Act (s. 5, ante) adds the words "not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large," and these words, as used either here or in the corresponding s. 150 of the P. H. A., 1875, have been the subject of much litigation. The decisions will be found in the notes to ss. 149, 150, ante, pp. 274, 291. Under the Act of 1875, the objection that the street is a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large has always been within the cognisance of a court of summary jurisdiction on proceedings taken to enforce payment of the sum apportioned: see the cases cited, ante, p. 306. Cases in which the objection has been taken under this Act are referred to in note (h) under s. 5, ante, p. 373.

The objection "that a street or part of a street is (in whole or in part) a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large" is open under the objection that it is not a "street" (Carey v. Bexhill Corporation, [1904] 1 K. B. 142; 68 J. P. 78).

"Highway repairable," etc.

(d) This ground of objection is, as pointed out in the last note, open under an objection under (a). It is to be observed that an owner may object that part of the width of the street is a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, and the Act is silent as to what is to be done if the objection is made out. Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150, the owner would have been liable to pay in respect of the entire street, including the old highway (Evans v. Newport Sanitary Authority, ante, p. 315). In this Act there is no provision to that effect, and it is generally assumed that in such case the court of summary jurisdiction may, under s. 8 (1), post, p. 877, amend the resolution, plans, etc. by limiting the scheme to the remaining portion of the street. See on this point R. v. Cheshire JJ. (1909), 73 J. P. 499; 101 L. T. 683, but note that Twickenham U. D. C. v. Munton, [1899] 2 Ch. 603; 63 J. P. 23, is not (as might appear from the report) really an authority upon the point; for there the justices excluded not one strip of a street but one length of it.

Where a court of summary jurisdiction have decided upon an objection under this Act that a street is a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, the matter is res judicata, and the authority cannot again raise the point, even on fresh evidence, in other proceedings under the Act in respect of the same length of street (Wakefield Corporation v. Cooke, [1904] A. C. 31; 68 J. P. 225).

Justices cannot, even by agreement, enforce an apportionment, if the street is a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. Therefore, an agreement by which an authority "take over" a street, but purport to reserve their rights to do paving work, etc. under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150, or under this Act, will not enable them to enforce payment under those statutes by summary proceedings (Folkestone Corporation v. Marsh (1906), 70 J. P. 113; 94 L. T. 511), unless, indeed, a frontager has failed to give notice of objection (see Folkestone (Mayor of) v. Rook, ante, p. 268).

"Insufficient, unreasonable," etc.

(e) Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150, justices have no jurisdiction to entertain objections of this kind, it being for the authority to determine whether the proposed works are or are not insufficient or unreasonable, subject only to an appeal to the Ministry of Health under s. 268, ante, p. 595. The provision in the text virtually makes the justices a court of review in respect of matters which are peculiarly within the cognisance of the authority, and this has been strongly urged as a reason for not adopting the Act.

Under this head the objection cannot be taken that the street at one point is too narrow and that nevertheless the authority do not propose to widen it (Mayor, etc. of Mansfield v. Butterworth, [1898] 2 Q. B. 274; 62 J. P. 500). The ground of this decision was that the expression "insufficient" means insufficient to effect the objects proposed to be effected by the works; and "unreasonable" means unreasonable with reference to the scheme itself. The court can take into consideration the existing state of the drainage in a street proposed to be sewered. Therefore, where houses were drained from the back into a sewer, a magistrate was held justified in finding it unreasonable to provide a sewer in the street in front, except for surface and sink water (Sheffield (Mayor etc., of) v. Alexander (1894), 64 L. J. M. C. 44; 72 L. T. 242).

An authority would not be entitled to provide at the expense of the frontagers a larger sewer than the street requires in order to facilitate the drainage of other parts of the town, but they might construct an unnecessarily large sewer provided they themselves bear the extra cost (Acton U. D. C. v. Watts (1903), 67 J. P. 400).

(f) If the apportionment is according to frontage, the objection will usually be that the premises do not "front, adjoin, or abut"; as to which see ante, p. 298. Under s. 10, post, p. 880, the apportionment may be made having regard to the benefit derived by premises, but an owner cannot object on the ground that this principle should have, but has not, been adopted (Bridgwater Corporation v. Stone, p. 880, post); his proper remedy for that grievance is by appeal to the Ministry of Health under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 268. See 64 J. P. 193. Section 10 also enables premises to be included in a provisional apportionment on the ground of benefit of access, and it would seem that an owner of premises so included may object under this head that they ought to be excluded.

In Dodworth U. D. C. v. Ibbotson (1903), 67 J. P. 132, an owner objected under this sub-section upon the following facts: In 1878 the authority did some work to the pavement of a private street, and part of the expenses were paid by J. and S., two frontagers. In the following year the authority passed a resolution to the effect that "an indemnity be given to J. and S. on account of further expenses that may be occasioned in connection with Street." In 1902 the authority resolved to make up the street under this Act, and included the premises of J. and S. in the apportionment. The justices ordered the premises to be excluded. This decision was reversed by the Divisional Court, who held that the resolution referred only to expenses to be incurred at the time of, or shortly after, its date. Apparently, too, if the resolution had referred to future expenses for all future time, it would have been held to be ultra vires and invalid (Ibid.; Folkestone (Mayor, etc. of) v. Rook, ante, p. 268). On this latter point, however, Bromley L. B. v. Lansbury (1894), Times, December 5th, should be considered. In that case a new road was laid out in 1878, and in 1884 the frontagers and the local board agreed that the road should be properly made up and maintained for six months by the frontagers and then adopted by the board. The work was duly done, but the defendants gave no notice of adoption under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 152. It was, however, held in 1894 that the local board were bound by the agreement, and could not require the frontagers to again pave the road under s. 150.

An authority made an apportionment on certain premises, and served notice on the reputed owners. When sued for the amount, the owners for the first time discovered and pleaded that the frontage wall belonged to another person, and that therefore their premises did not abut on the street. It was held that they could not rely upon the point, since their names appeared in the apportionment, and they had been served, as owners of premises abutting upon the street, and they ought therefore to have objected under s. 7 (e) (Wallasey U. D. C. v. Walker & Co. (1906), 70 J. P. 199).

An objection by a frontager on the ground that by agreement with the urban authority he has been exempted from liability in respect of his property is, if not an objection within the meaning of head (e) of this section, at any rate an objection within the meaning of head (f), and must be raised accordingly. The objection cannot be taken in proceedings to enforce his charge on the property: Porthcawl U. D. C. v. Brogden, [1917] 1 Ch. 534; 81 J. P. 137.

(g) As to this, see s. 10, post, p. 880.

Hearing and determination of objections.

8.—(1) The urban authority at any time after the expiration of the said month may apply to a court of summary jurisdiction (a) to appoint a time for determining the matter of all objections (b) made as in this Act mentioned, and shall publish a notice of the time and place appointed, and copies of such notice shall be served upon the objectors; and at the time and place so appointed any such court may proceed to hear and determine the matter of all such objections in the same manner as nearly as may be, and with the same powers and subject to the same provisions with respect to stating a case, as if the urban authority were proceeding summarily against the objectors to enforce payment of a sum of money summarily recoverable (c). The court may quash in whole or in part or may amend the resolution, plans, sections, estimates, and provisional apportionments, or any of them, on the application either of any objector or of the urban authority (d). The court may also, if it thinks fit, adjourn the hearing and direct any further notices to be given (e).

A form of notice of hearing of objections for use under this section will be found in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., p. 79.

(a) See the definition, ante, p. 36.

(b) It appears to be contemplated that the whole of the objections shall be heard together.

(c) That is to say, the procedure is to be the same as if the urban authority were complainants and the objectors were summoned for the recovery of the expenses. One result of this is that the burden of proof will be on the urban authority. See hereon Rishton v. Haslingden Corporation, ante, p. 291; Vyner v. Wirral R. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 242, per JELF, J.; but see Folkestone Corporation v. Brockman, [1914] A. C. 338 (ante, p. 276), per Lord KINNEAR.

An appeal to quarter sessions lies from the justices' decision (Pearce v. Maidenhead Corporation, post, p. 879).

(d) The powers conferred on the justices are very wide, and enable them to correct any mistake at any step in the procedure. For instance, if an objection be made out that a length of the street is a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, the justices may amend the scheme by limiting it to the remainder, and in such case it will not be necessary for the authority before proceeding with the amended scheme to begin proceedings de novo or pass a resolution approving the amended scheme (Twickenham U. D. C. v. Munton, [1899] 2 Ch. 603). The authority may point out, and the justice may correct, any mistake in the apportionment although it has not been challenged by any objection (Hall v. Bolsover U. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 140; 100 L. T. 372).

See as to the creation of an estoppel by the justices' decision, Wakefield Corporation v. Cooke, ante, p. 876.

(e) This will as a rule be the proper course to adopt where (e.g.) notice has been served on the wrong person under s. 6, or it is intended to add an owner of premises who is suggested to derive benefit from the proposed works. As a matter of pure law, where the justices have decided upon amending the scheme, it is within their discretion whether they will adjourn the hearing and direct further notices to be given; but where the amendment is of a material character, it is desirable, though not obligatory, to do so in order that persons affected by the amendment may have an opportunity of being heard (Twickenham U. D. C. v. Munton, supra).

(2) No objection which could be made under this Act shall be otherwise made or allowed in any court proceeding or manner whatsoever.

Therefore an owner cannot, when proceedings are taken against him under s. 14, post, p. 884, for recovery of the expenses finally apportioned, raise by way of defence any objection which might have been raised and determined in manner provided by this and the preceding section (Woodford U. D. C. v. Henwood (1899), 64 J. P. 148; see also Hayles v. Sandown U. D. C., ante, p. 876; Teddington U. D. C. v. Vile, ante, p. 876; Wallasey U. D. C. v. Walker and Porthcawl U. D. C. v. Brogden, ante, p. 877). It is arguable that this provision takes away the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Health under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 268, ante, p. 595, so far as relates to any ground of objection which might have been so raised and determined. As to appeals to the Ministry of Health under s. 268 on grounds other than those specified in ss. 7 and 12 of this Act, see Pearce v. Maidenhead Corporation, [1907] 2 K. B. 96; 71 J. P. 230, explaining Hayles v. Sandown U. D. C., ante, p. 876.

In connection with appeals to the Ministry of Health, under s. 268 in respect of matters arising under this Act the question arises as to what is the "decision" referred to in s. 268. Upon this depends the question of the time within which an appeal can be made. There is no "notice of demand" (see cases noted under s. 268 of the Act of 1875) under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, and the final apportionment is not necessarily a final settlement of the amount due, for it can be objected to within one month.

It is understood that in the view of the department one month must elapse from the service of the final apportionment and that an owner can then appeal within twenty-one days of the service by the local authority of a valid request or demand for payment.

(3) The costs of any proceedings before a court of summary jurisdiction in relation to objections under this Act shall be in the discretion of the court, and the court shall have power, if it thinks fit, to direct that the whole or any part of such costs ordered to be paid by an objector or objectors shall be paid in the first instance by the urban authority, and charged as part of the expenses of the works on the premises of the objector or objectors in such proportions as may appear just.

Under this sub-section the court may order each objector to pay at once his share of the authority's costs, or it may order that the share payable by each shall be added to the expenses for which he may ultimately be liable, and recovered accordingly.

Incidental works.

9.—(1) The urban authority may include in any works to be done under this Act with respect to any street or part of a street any works which they think necessary for bringing the street or part of a street, as regards sewerage, drainage, level, or other matters, into conformity with any other streets (whether repairable or not by the inhabitants at large), including the provision of separate sewers for the reception of sewage and of surface water respectively.

Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150, a street dealt with must be regarded as an isolated street, and frontagers cannot be required to make it on a level, etc., with other streets: see Carey v. Kingston-upon-Hull L. B., ante, p. 296. This provision was evidently inserted with a view to that decision.

The authority may drain the surface water into any natural stream or watercourse provided they observe the restrictions of the P. H. A., 1875, s. 17, ante, p. 69. If the watercourse thereby becomes silted up with sand off the surface of the road, the remedy of riparian owners is by proceeding for compensation under s. 308 of that Act (Durrant v. Branksome U. D. C., [1897] 2 Ch. 291).

In giving powers to rural councils for the making up, etc., of private streets the Ministry of Health, following the earlier practice of the L. G. B., usually withhold the powers as to sewering at the cost of frontagers. By doing so in the case of orders under s. 4 of this Act, they appear to preclude a rural council from recovering from frontagers the cost of works of surface drainage, for s. 9 recognises a sewer for surface water only as a sewer. See notes to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150, and s. 4 of this Act.

(2) The urban authority in any estimate of the expenses of private street works may include a commission not exceeding five pounds per centum (in addition to the estimated actual cost) in respect of surveys, superintendence, and notices, and such commission when received shall be carried to the credit of the district fund.

The commission must be entered when received in the separate accounts kept under s. 21, post, p. 887; though it will be applied differently from the expenses. It is doubtful whether such charges can be recovered under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150: see Walthamstow L. B. v. Staines, [1891] 2 Ch. 606; and cases cited therewith at p. 306, ante.

Apportionment of expenses.

10. In a provisional apportionment of expenses of private street works the apportionment of expenses against the premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on the street or part of a street in respect of which the expenses are to be incurred shall, unless the urban authority otherwise resolve, be apportioned according to the frontage of the respective premises; but the urban authority may, if they think just, resolve that in settling the apportionment regard shall be had to the following considerations; (that is to say,)

(a) The greater or less degree of benefit to be derived by any premises from such works;

(b) The amount and value of any work already done by the owners or occupiers of any such premises.

They may also, if they think just, include any premises which do not front, adjoin, or abut on the street or part of a street, but access to which is obtained from the street through a court, passage, or otherwise, and which in their opinion will be benefited by the works, and may fix the sum or proportion to be charged against any such premises accordingly.

The apportionment should be made upon each separate house or plot, and different premises belonging to one owner should not be lumped together (Croydon R. D. C. v. Betts, [1914] W. N. 144; 78 J. P. N. 160; Pontypridd U. D. C. v. Jones, p. 883, post): if subsequently rendered necessary by subdivision of a property, a court could probably divide the apportioned sum (cf. Sydney Municipal Council v. Fleay, [1911] A. C. 371).

Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150, the expenses must be apportioned according to frontage. Under this Act also they are to be so apportioned unless the authority resolve to exercise one or both of the powers here conferred upon them. If they do so resolve, it will be the duty of the surveyor to take the considerations indicated into account in making his apportionment. The apportionment of the surveyor must be approved by the authority under s. 6, and may be objected to under s. 7, ante, p. 875.

It is for the authority alone to decide whether to make use of this section; and the justices cannot entertain an objection that they ought to have, but have not, done so (Bridgwater Corporation v. Stone (1908), 72 J. P. 487; 99 L. T. 806).

A local board resolved to execute certain private street works in a street which had buildings on the north side only, and was bounded on the south side chiefly by land of the local board. The works comprised the making up of the roadway, and the paving and kerbing of a footpath on the north side only, no footpath being made on the south side. By the provisional apportionment the expenses of paving and kerbing the footpath were apportioned amongst the owners of premises abutting on the north side only. All other expenses were apportioned amongst the owners of premises abutting on both sides of the street, including the local board as the owners of land on the south side. It was held that the expenses of the footpath were properly apportionable amongst the owners of premises on both sides of the street (Clacton-on-Sea L. B. v. Young, [1895] 1 Q. B. 395; 59 J. P. 581).

The latter part of this section introduced a new provision, whereby premises may be made liable to contribute though not abutting on the street: see Baddeley v. Gingell and London School Board v. Vestry of St. Mary, Islington, ante, p. 300. The conditions are that such premises have access to the street and are benefited by the works. The owner of such premises may object under s. 7 (f), ante, p. 875. If it is decided to bring in premises under the latter part of the section it is not essential but is advisable to state in the resolution approving the provisional apportionment that the authority "think just" to include the premises (Oakley v. Merthyr Tydfil Corporation, [1922] 1 K. B. 409; 86 J. P. 1).

Note to Section 10.

As to the meaning of the words "court, passage or otherwise," see Newquay U. D. C. v. Rickeard, [1911] 2 K. B. 846; 75 J. P. 382: apparently they include anything which gives access to the premises in the same way as a court or passage, but not a public street or a road made for a purpose other than that of giving access to the premises in question (ibid.). The appellant's premises did not front or abut on that portion of a street called Grange Lane upon which works were being carried out, but access therefrom to his premises was obtained through the remaining portion of Grange Lane. It was held that the words "court, passage or otherwise" mean a court or passage or something in the nature of a court or passage, but do not mean a portion of the street itself, and that the section did not empower the authority to include the appellant's premises in the provisional apportionment: Chatterton v. Glanford R. D. C., [1915] 3 K. B. 707; 79 J. P. 441. The word "passage" in this section means something in the nature of a feeder of the street to be made up, though it need not be the only means of approaching the street (Oakley v. Merthyr Tydfil Corporation, ante, p. 880.

Amendment of plan, etc.

11. The urban authority may from time to time amend the specifications, plans, and sections (if any), estimates, and provisional apportionments for any private street works, but if the total amount of the estimate in respect of any street or part of a street is increased, such estimate and the provisional apportionment shall be published in the manner prescribed in Part II. of the Schedule to this Act, and shall be open to inspection at the urban authority offices at all reasonable times, and copies thereof shall be served on the owners of the premises affected thereby; and objections may be made to the increase and apportionment and, if made, shall be dealt with and determined in like manner as objections to the original estimate and apportionment.

If the amendment does not increase the estimate nothing more need be done; if it does, it will be necessary to proceed de novo, and to advertise and give notices as mentioned in Schedule, Part II. As to objections, see s. 7, ante, p. 875.

Final apportionment and recovery of expenses.

12.—(1) When any private street works have been completed and, the expenses therefore ascertained, the surveyor shall make a final apportionment by dividing the expenses in the same proportions in which the estimated expenses were divided in the original or amended provisional apportionment (as the case may be), and such final apportionment shall be conclusive for all purposes; and notice of such final apportionment shall be served upon the owners of the premises affected thereby; and the sums apportioned thereby shall be recoverable in manner provided by this Act, or in the same manner as private improvement expenses are recoverable under the Public Health Act, 1875, including the power to declare any such expenses to be payable by instalments.

See forms of final apportionment and notice thereof in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., pp. 80, 81.

The final apportionment may be objected to in manner provided by the next subsection. Notices may be authenticated in manner provided by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 266, ante, p. 593, and served in accordance with ibid., s. 267, ante, p. 593.

As to the recovery of sums under this Act, see s. 13, post, p. 882, and s. 14, post, p. 884.

As to the power to declare expenses payable by instalments, see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 257, ante, p. 568.

The combined effect of this Act and s. 257 of the P. H. A., 1875, is that the apportioned amount becomes charged on the premises at the time of completion of the works as from that date (Surtees v. Woodhouse, [1903] 1 K. B. 396; 67 J. P. 232).

As to the incidence of paving expenses between limited owners and reversioners, landlords and tenants, and vendors and purchasers, see the cases cited on pp. 192—205, ante. See also s. 17, post, p. 885.

Section 12.

(2) Within one month after such notice the owner of any premises charged with any expenses under such apportionment may, by a written notice to the urban authority, object to such final apportionment on the following grounds, or any of them :

(a) That the actual expenses have without sufficient reason exceeded the estimated expenses by more than fifteen per cent.

(b) That the final apportionment has not been made in accordance with this section.

(c) That there has been an unreasonable departure from the specification, plans, and sections.

The Act is silent as to what is to happen if the objector makes good his objection, but in Hayles v. Sandown U. D. C., infra, Lord ALVERSTONE, C.J., said that the justices might correct the figures and in effect make a fresh apportionment.

A frontager, on proceedings being taken to recover from him his apportioned share of expenses, attempted to establish that the surveyor had allowed the contractor to deviate from the specifications, and that the works had never been "completed." It was held that such an objection could probably have been raised under the above section at the proper time ; but that in any case the justices were right in not allowing it to be raised before them (Hayles v. Sandown U. D. C., [1903] 1 K. B. 169 ; 67 J. P. 177).

(3) Objections under this section shall be determined in the same manner as objections to the provisional apportionment.

See s. 8, ante, p. 887.

Charge on premises.

13.—(1) Any premises included in the final apportionment, and all estates and interests from time to time therein, shall stand and remain charged (to the like extent and effect as under section two hundred and fifty-seven of the Public Health Act, 1875) with the sum finally apportioned on them, or if objection has been made against the final apportionment with the sum determined to be due as from the date of the final apportionment, with interest at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum, and the urban authority shall, for the recovery of such sum and interest, have all the same powers and remedies under the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, and otherwise as if they were mortgagees having powers of sale and lease and of appointing a receiver.

See the P. H. A., 1875. s. 257, ante, p. 568, and the notes thereon.

The section does not state from what date the interest is to run, but it has been decided that it runs from the date of the final apportionment (Stock v. Meakin, [1900] 1 Ch. 683). Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 257, it runs from date of demand. Under the same section the rate of interest is to be a rate not exceeding 5 per cent. A frontager cannot deduct income tax on the interest due from him (Gateshead Corporation v. Lumsden, p. 569, ante).

The charge on the property operates as from the date of the completion of the works (Stock v. Meakin, supra ; Surtees v. Woodhouse, ante, p. 571). But of course unless the notices required by this Act to be served on the owner have been duly served the council have no charge upon the premises and no right to sell them (Maguire v. Leigh-on-Sea U. D. C. (1906), 70 J. P. 479 ; 95 L. T. 319).

The provisions of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, referred to, are ss. 18—24 ; see also s. 67 as to notices, and the Conveyancing Act, 1911, ss. 3—5. The power to appoint a receiver is the most useful of the powers hereby conferred on an authority : see Tottenham U. D. C. v. Smith (1897), Times, March 6th, where ROMER, J., appointed a receiver under a local Act conferring on the local authority in respect of a charge for street expenses all the rights and remedies of mortgagees under the Act of 1881. Forms of conveyance on sale by the authority where the owner has made default, and of statutory declaration to accompany the same, will be found in Prideaux's Conveyancing, 17th ed., Vol. I., pp. 349, 352. See also a form of conveyance in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XII., at p. 781. There would, however, appear to be some doubt whether on a sale under the Conveyancing Act an authority will have power to pass the legal estate (see the argument in West Ham Corporation v. Sharp, infra, and the cases there cited).

It will be observed that it is not necessary under this Act, as it is under the P. H. A., 1875, to bring an action in order to enforce the charge. But the authority may do so, if it is more convenient (West Ham Corporation v. Sharp, [1907] 1 K. B. 445; 71 J. P. 100), and it would obviously be convenient if the doubt expressed above as to the power to pass the legal estate is well founded, for under an Order the authority would be able to sell the fee simple: see Birmingham Corporation v. Baker, ante, p. 571. As a result of paving works under this Act a sum of £137 was apportioned on 9 houses belonging to the defendant. The authority took out an originating summons in the Chancery Division asking for a declaration of charge for the £137 and interest thereon at 5 per cent., the usual inquiries, an order for sale and a receiver. The defendant paid the £137 with 4 per cent. interest, and objected that (1) proceedings had been commenced before three months had expired from the date of the notice; (2) 4 per cent. only should have been asked; (3) the £137 was asked as a whole sum and not apportioned on the houses individually; and (4) the proceedings ought to have been brought in the county court. An application for leave to interrogate was adjourned into court to come on with the summons, and the summons was amended by stating in a schedule how the £137 was apportioned upon the various houses. It was held that the defendant showed no defence and must pay the costs. Semble, an originating summons, if it is not adjourned into court, is cheaper and more expeditious than a plaint in the county court (Pontypridd U. D. C. v. Jones (1911), 75 J. P. 345); see also Croydon R. D. C. v. Betts, on p. 880, ante. As to the difficulty which arises where the owner of premises cannot be traced, see Wealdstone U. D. C. v. Evershed, on p. 572, ante.

In a case which arose under a local Act the urban authority obtained a declaration that they were entitled to a charge on the defendant's premises for the costs incurred as private street expenses. An order was obtained directing an inquiry as to whether there were other incumbrances, and directing the defendant to answer the inquiry by affidavit. The defendant ignored this order and failed to appear in obedience to an order for his examination. It was held that a writ of attachment must issue against him for disobeying the order and that the urban authority might add the costs of the motion for attachment to their security (Tottenham U. D. C. v. Neilson (1915), 85 L. J. Ch. 272; 79 J. P. 504).

Where a tenant for life has paid paving expenses he has a charge on the fee simple of the premises, notwithstanding the provisions of s. 17, which provides that a limited owner may raise money by mortgage for the payment of such expenses so that the principal due on the mortgage may be repaid within twenty years (In re Pizzi, Scrivener v. Aldridge, [1907] 1 Ch. 67; 71 J. P. 58).

A council executed street works under this Act, but when recovering their expenses were unable to determine the ownership of certain vacant land abutting on the street. The land, therefore, was sold, under the powers of s. 13, and the council found themselves with a surplus. The L. G. B., on being applied to, stated that they did not consider themselves in a position to give any formal directions in such a case, but, assuming that the council recovered "in respect of street works" in the case of every frontager all that was sufficient to enable them to repay with interest the money borrowed for the execution of the works in respect of which the premises were charged under the final apportionment, as the instalments became due and payable, they referred the council to s. 21 (3) of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, as applied by s. 13 (1), as indicating what would appear to be an appropriate application of the surplus sum in question. The sub-section is as follows: "The money which is received by the mortgagee, arising from the sale, after discharge of prior encumbrances to which the sale is not made subject, if any, or after payment into court under this Act of a sum to meet any prior encumbrance, shall be held by him in trust to be applied by him, first, in payment of all costs, charges, and expenses, properly incurred by him, as incident to the sale or any attempted sale, or otherwise; and secondly, in discharge of the mortgage money, interest, and costs, and other money, if any, due under the mortgage; and the residue of the money so received shall be paid to the person entitled to the mortgaged property, or authorised to give receipts for the proceeds of the sale thereof." See hereon West London Commercial Bank v. Reliance Building Society (1885), 29 Ch. D. 954.

(2) The urban authority shall keep a register of charges under this Act and of the payments made in satisfaction thereof, and the register shall be open to inspection to all persons at all reasonable times on payment of not exceeding one shilling in respect of each name or property searched for, and the urban authority shall furnish copies of any part of such register to any person applying for the same on payment of such reasonable sum as may be fixed by the urban authority.

This is a very useful provision. Charges under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 257, do not require registration under the Land Charges Registration Act, 1888 (R. v. Land Registry (Vice-Registrar of), ante, p. 573); consequently, a purchaser of property may have no means of knowing whether such property is subject to a charge. So far as charges under this Act are concerned there will be no such difficulty, and it will always be prudent for an intending purchaser to make a search.

Recovery of expenses summarily or by action.

14. The urban authority, if they think fit, may from time to time (in addition and without prejudice to any other remedy) recover summarily in a court of summary jurisdiction, or as a simple contract debt by action in any court of competent jurisdiction, from the owner for the time being of any premises in respect of which any sum is due for expenses of private street works the whole or any portion of such sum, together with interest at a rate not exceeding four pounds per centum per annum, from the date of the final apportionment till payment thereof.

Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150, the only remedies for recovery of expenses were by summary proceedings, or, in cases where the expenses were under £50, by action in the county court under s. 261. See the note at p. 305, ante. Under this Act an action may be brought in the High Court if it is thought desirable. It would seem that the six months' limitation imposed by the S. J. A., 1848, s. 11, does not apply to actions brought in either the High Court or the county court under this section (Blackburn (Mayor, etc. of) v. Sanderson, [1902] 1 K. B. 794; 66 J. P. 452; cf. Metropolitan Water Board v. Bunn, [1913] 3 K. B. 181; 77 J. P. 353). The period of limitation is probably twenty years, as the action would seem to be founded on a specialty: see a note by Sir F. POLLOCK at [1903] 2 K. B. 3, and cases there cited, and In re Cornwall Minerals Rail. Co., [1897] 2 Ch. 74; 61 J. P. 535. There is no express provision in the Act requiring a formal demand for payment unless an authority intend to proceed summarily (see per BRETT, L.J., in R. v. Local Government Board, ante, at p. 596), but it may well be argued that one is necessary: see Hampstead Borough Council v. Caunt, [1903] 2 K. B. 1; 67 J. P. 344. The expenses being recoverable from the owner "for the time being," a purchaser may become liable for expenses incurred before the date of the purchase: see East London Waterworks Co. v. Kellerman, [1892] 2 Q. B. 72; 56 J. P. 773; Rowland v. Willis (1899), 105 L. T. Newsp. 319, and Hampstead Borough Council v. Caunt, supra.

No objection to the proceedings of the authority, which could have, but has not, been raised under the Act can afterwards be raised when the authority seek to recover the expenses. See s. 8 (2), Teddington U. D. C. v. Vile, and other cases cited therewith at p. 879, ante.

In Hayles v. Sandown U. D. C., ante, p. 876, a frontager, against whom proceedings were taken before justices to recover his apportioned share of the expenses, attempted to establish that the surveyor had allowed the contractor to deviate from the specifications, and that the works had never been "completed." It was held that such an objection could probably have been raised under s. 12 at the proper time; but that, in any case, the justices were right in not allowing it to be raised before them.

Semble, the right of action given by this section could only be enforced in the courts of this country (Sydney Municipal Council v. Bull, [1909] 1 K. B. 7).

15. The urban authority, if they think fit, may at any time resolve to contribute the whole or a portion of the expenses of any private street works, and may pay the same out of the district fund or general district rate or other rate out of which the general expenses incurred under the Public Health Act, 1875, are payable.

Section 15.
Contribution by urban authority to expenses.

No provision of this kind is included in the P. H. A., 1875, and under that Act a council cannot defray part of the expenses out of the rates (see Dryden v. Putney (Overseers of), ante, p. 309). With regard, however, to expenses of sewering it may be otherwise, for the council may sewer a private street at their own cost under their general power to make sewers, and if so they may be able to contribute part of the cost. Irrecoverable expenses are, however, so chargeable. The general expenses are payable out of the general district rate, but sometimes out of the borough fund under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 207, ante, p. 469.

16. The incumbent or minister or trustee of any church, chapel, or place appropriated to public religious worship, which is for the time being by law exempt from rates for the relief of the poor, shall not be liable to any expenses of private street works as the owner of such church, chapel, or place, or of any churchyard or burial ground attached thereto, nor shall any such expenses be deemed to be a charge on such church, chapel, or other place, or on such churchyard or burial ground, or to subject the same to distress, execution, or other legal process, but the proportion of expenses in respect of which an exemption is allowed under this section shall be borne and paid by the urban authority.

Exemption from expenses of incumbent of church.

This section is in substitution for the P. H. A., 1875, s. 151; but there are some points of difference which should be noted. It exempts not only incumbents and ministers, but trustees also, thus meeting the decision in Hornsey L. B. v. Brewis, ante, p. 317. And the text requires, not simply enables, the authority to bear the proportion in respect of which an exemption is allowed. As to the exemption of churches, chapels, etc., from poor rates, see note (a), ante, p. 316, and Walton-le-Dale v. Greenwood there cited, a case decided under this Act.

The expression "private street works" is defined in s. 6, ante, p. 873.

17. All owners of buildings or lands, being persons who under the Lands Clauses Acts are empowered to sell and convey or release lands, may charge such buildings or lands with such sum as may be necessary to defray the whole or any part of any expenses which the owners of or any persons in respect of such buildings or lands for the time being are liable to pay under this Act and the expenses of making such charge, and for securing the repayment of such sum with interest may mortgage such buildings or lands to any person advancing such sum, but so that the principal due on any such mortgage shall be repaid by equal yearly or half-yearly payments within twenty years.

Power for limited owners to borrow for expenses.

See the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, ss. 7, 8, post, Vol. II., as to the persons under disability or limited owners, such as tenants for life, who have power to sell and convey or release lands under that Act.

Under this section a limited owner may charge or mortgage the premises, and not merely his interest in them: compare the P. H. A., 1875, s. 31, ante, p. 93.

Where a tenant for life has paid to a local authority the expenses of paving a private street, he has a charge under s. 13 on the fee simple of the premises in respect of which the expenses were incurred, notwithstanding the provisions of this section (In re Pizzi, Scrivener v. Aldridge, ante, p. 883).

Section 18.

Power for urban authority to borrow for private street works.

18. The urban authority may from time to time, with the sanction of the Local Government Board, borrow, on the security of the district fund and general district rates or other rate out of which the general expenses incurred under the Public Health Act, 1875, are payable, moneys for the purpose of temporarily providing for expenses of private street works, and the powers of the urban authority to borrow under the Public Health Acts shall be available as if the execution of private street works under this Act were one of the purposes of the Public Health Act, 1875.

As to the rates out of which the general expenses of an urban authority are defrayed, see s. 207 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 469, and as to the borrowing powers of an urban authority under that Act, see ss. 233—243, ante, pp. 521—539.

Applications to the Ministry of Health under this section must be accompanied by a copy of the resolution of the council authorising it, and by certain particulars in a prescribed form. The Ministry rarely allow a longer term than seven years for repayment.

Adoption of private streets.

19. Whenever all or any of the private street works in this Act mentioned have been executed in a street or part of a street, and the urban authority are of opinion that such street or part of a street ought to become a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, they may by notice to be fixed up in such street or part of a street declare the whole of such street or part of a street to be a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, and thereupon such street or part of a street as defined in the notice shall become a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large.

The fact that a private street has been made up at the cost of the frontagers does not in itself (i.e. apart from formal adoption) confer any rights as against the owner of the soil upon either the public or frontagers who have paid their share (Moubray Rowan v. Drew, [1895] A. C. 293). See also as to rights in a private street, Kirby v. Paignton U. D. C., p. 291, ante.

This section is in substitution for the P. H. A., 1875, s. 152, ante, p. 319, or, where the P. H. A., 1890, has been adopted, for s. 41 of that Act, ante, p. 855.

It is to be observed, however, that under this section the works need not have been executed by the authority, nor can the owners of the street object to its being declared a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. Under this Act, therefore, a street in all respects private may be opened for public traffic without the consent of the owners, and possibly to their detriment.

An authority will have no discretion under this section if a street has been made up in pursuance of a request made by a majority of the owners under the P. H. A., 1907, s. 19 (4), post, p. 1030.

A form of notice will be found in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., p. 87.

On street being paved, etc., urban authority to declare same public highway.

20. If any street is now or shall hereafter be sewered, levelled, paved, metalled, flagged, channelled, and made good (all such works being done to the satisfaction of the urban authority), then, on the application in writing of the greater part in value of the owners of the houses and land in such street, the urban authority shall, within three months from the time of such application, by notice put up in such street, declare the same to be a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, and thereupon such street shall become a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large.

A form of application and notice for use under this section will be found in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., pp. 87, 88.

This section will apply only when all the works above mentioned have been executed in the street. The expression "houses and land in such street" avoids the ambiguity pointed out in the note to s. 41 of the Act of 1890, ante, p. 856. The authority will have no discretion under this section.

Note to Section 20.

An application under this section will not be necessary when an authority make up a street in consequence of a counter-notice from owners under the P. H. A., 1907, s. 19 (4), post, p. 1030.

21.—(1) The urban authority shall keep separate accounts of all moneys expended and recovered by them in the execution of the provisions of this Act relating to private street works.

Separate accounts of expenses of works.

(2) All moneys recovered by the urban authority under this Act in respect of street works shall be applied in repayment of moneys borrowed for the purpose of executing private street works (a), or if there is no such loan outstanding then in such manner as may be directed by the Local Government Board (b).

(a) The authority may borrow for private street works under s. 18. If any loan in respect of private street works in the district is outstanding, the sub-section must be complied with. This must sometimes work inconveniently.

(b) The Ministry of Health will presumably direct payment into the general district fund, or in the case of a rural council into the fund applicable to special expenses.

22. No railway or canal company shall be deemed to be an owner or occupier for the purposes of this Act in respect of any land of such company upon which any street shall wholly or partially front or abut, and which shall at the time of the laying out of such street be used by such company solely as a part of their line of railway, canal, or siding, station, towing path, or works, and shall have no direct communication with such street (a); and the expenses incurred by the urban authority under the powers of this Act which, but for this provision, such company would be liable to pay, shall be repaid to the urban authority by the owners of the premises included in the apportionments, and in such proportion as shall be settled by the surveyor (b); and in the event of such company subsequently making a communication with such street they shall, notwithstanding such repayment as last aforesaid, pay to the urban authority the expenses which, but for the foregoing provision, such company would in the first instance have been liable to pay, and the urban authority shall divide among the owners for the time being included in the apportionment the amount so paid by such company to the urban authority, less the costs and expenses attendant upon such division, in such proportion as shall be settled by the surveyor, whose decision shall be final and conclusive (c). This section shall not apply to any street existing at the date of the adoption of this Act.

Railways and canals abutting but not communicating with streets not to be chargeable with private street expenses.

(a) This provision is intended to meet the decisions in Higgins v. Harding and L. & N. W. Rail. Co. v. St. Pancras (Vestry of), ante, p. 299, followed in Caledonian Rail Co. v. Edinburgh Magistrates (1901), 3 F. 645. It will only apply where there is no communication between the railway and the street.

A railway company objected to the inclusion of a piece of land belonging to them in a provisional apportionment for a street on which the land abutted, but with which it had no direct communication, on the ground that such land was at the time of the laying out of the street used by them solely as a part of their line of railway or works within the meaning of this section. The land had been acquired by the company solely for the purpose of their railway and works, but they allowed their servants, for the time being, to use it as garden ground on payment of a nominal rent. The justices found as a fact that it was not used in any way as part of the company's railway, sidings, station or works, and that, therefore, the company's objection failed, and they refused to state a case on the ground that the question was one of fact. It was held that as there was no evidence contrary to the justices' finding, the court would not compel them to state a case (R. v. Jones (1907), 71 J. P. 326; 96 L. T. 723).

It has also been held that land used by a railway company for the purpose of depositing ashes thereon did not fall within a similarly worded exemption in a local Act (In re Carlisle Corporation and Saul (1907), 71 J. P. 502; 97 L. T. 514).

See also, as to words "part of a railway," Glasgow & S. W. Rail. Co. v. Ayr Magistrates, [1912] A. C. 520, where under the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892, s. 4, it was held that a strip of a road purchased in 1889 by the company for "extraordinary purposes," but put to no use for 20 years, was not a part of their railway.

(b) This is rather hard on the owners in question. The sum which otherwise would have been apportioned to the company is to be paid by other owners in proportions settled by the surveyor. The whole of the expenses are not to be apportioned in the first instance among all the owners other than the company.

(c) No provision is here made for the case where there have been changes of ownership.

Expenses of local authority.

23. All expenses incurred or payable by an urban authority and a rural sanitary authority respectively in the execution of this Act, and not otherwise provided for, may be charged and defrayed as part of the expenses incurred by them respectively in the execution of the Public Health Acts.

The expenses of an urban authority will, therefore, be defrayed out of the rate mentioned in the P. H. A., 1875, s. 207, ante, p. 469, which will generally be the general district rate. Where a rural authority act under urban powers conferred on them under s. 4, ante, their expenses would be defrayed as general expenses (as to which see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 229, ante, p. 510), in the absence of a provision in the order declaring them to be special. Such a provision is usually inserted.

Powers of Act cumulative.

24. All powers given to a local authority under this Act shall be deemed to be in addition to and not in derogation of any other powers conferred upon such local authority by any Act of Parliament, law, or custom, and such other powers may be exercised in the same manner as if this Act had not been passed.

This section preserves the effect of local Acts, and where there is such an Act in force the authority will have an alternative remedy. Compare the P. H. A., 1875, s. 341, ante, p. 666, and the P. H. A., 1890, s. 10 (1), ante, p. 824.

Certain sections of Public Health Acts not to apply.

25. Neither sections one hundred and fifty, one hundred and fifty-one, and one hundred and fifty-two of the Public Health Act, 1875, nor section forty-one of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890, shall apply to any district or part of a district in which this Act is in force.

This Act when in force takes the place of the sections named in the text. But proceedings already commenced under s. 150 are not made void by the adoption of this Act (Heston and Isleworth U. D. C. v. Grout, [1897] 2 Ch. 306).

When an urban authority have adopted the Act the adoption cannot afterwards be revoked, so that they will no longer be able to exercise in any case powers under ss. 150 and 152 of the Act of 1875.

A rural authority, though they cannot adopt the Act, are more favourably placed than an urban authority in one respect, for they may apply to the M. of H. for powers under either Act, or under both Acts, in regard to different streets according to circumstances.

26. This Act shall not extend to prejudice or derogate from the estates, rights, and privileges of the Conservators of the River Thames, or render them liable to any charges or payments in respect of any of their works on or upon the shores of the River Thames. Section 26. For protection of Conservators of River Thames.

See the Thames Conservancy Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. clxxxvii.).

THE SCHEDULE.

PRIVATE STREET WORKS.

PART I. Sections 6, 11.

PARTICULARS TO BE STATED IN SPECIFICATIONS, PLANS AND SECTIONS, ESTIMATES, AND PROVISIONAL APPORTIONMENTS.

Specifications.—These shall describe generally the works and things to be done, and in the case of structural works shall specify as far as may be the foundation, form, material, and dimensions thereof.

Plans and Sections.—These shall show the constructive character of the works, and the connexions (if any) with existing streets, sewers, or other works, and the lines and levels of the works, subject to such limits of deviation (if any) as shall be indicated on the plans and sections respectively.

Estimates.—These shall show the particulars of the probable cost of the whole works, including the commission provided for by this Act.

Provisional Apportionments.—These shall state the amounts charged on the respective premises and the names of the respective owners, or reputed owners (a), and shall also state whether the apportionment is made according to the frontage of the respective premises or not, and the measurements of the frontages, and the other considerations (if any) on which the apportionment is based.

(a) This expression means "a person whom the local authority really believe to be the owner; and a person who has been the owner, and whom the local authority has dealt with as such, is certainly a reputed owner" (per CHANNELL, J., in Wirral R. D. C. v. Carter, [1903] 1 K. B. 646; 67 J. P. 31).

PART II.

PUBLICATION OF NOTICE.

Any resolution, notice, or other document required by this Act to be published in the manner prescribed by this Schedule shall be published once in each of two successive weeks in some local newspaper circulating within the district, and shall be publicly posted in or near the street to which it relates once at least in each of three successive weeks (a).

(a) It is not necessary that seven days should intervene between each successive publication (Aberdeen (City of) v. Watt (1901), 3 F. 787).

Section 1.

THE PUBLIC AUTHORITIES PROTECTION ACT, 1893 (a).

(56 & 57 VICT. c. 61.)

An Act to generalise and amend certain statutory provisions for the Protection of Persons acting in the execution of Statutory and other Public Duties. [5th December 1893.]

Protection of persons acting in execution of statutory or other public duty.

1. Where [after the commencement of this Act] any action, prosecution, or other proceeding (b) is commenced in the United Kingdom against any person (bb) for any act done in pursuance, or execution, or intended execution of any Act of Parliament (c), or of any public duty or authority (d), or in respect of any alleged neglect or default in the execution of any such Act, duty, or authority, the following provisions shall (dd) have effect :

(a) The action, prosecution, or proceeding shall not lie or be instituted unless it is commenced within six months next after the act, neglect, or default complained of, or, in case of a continuance of injury or damage, within six months next after the ceasing thereof (e) :

(b) Wherever in any such action a judgment is obtained by the defendant, it shall carry costs to be taxed as between solicitor and client (f) :

(c) Where the proceeding is an action for damages, tender of amends before the action was commenced may, in lieu of or in addition to any other plea, be pleaded. If the action was commenced after the tender, or is proceeded with after payment into court of any money in satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim, and the plaintiff does not recover more than the sum tendered or paid, he shall not recover any costs incurred after the tender or payment, and the defendant shall be entitled to costs, to be taxed as between solicitor and client, as from the time of the tender or payment (g) : but this provision shall not affect costs on any injunction in the action :

(d) If, in the opinion of the court, the plaintiff has not given the defendant a sufficient opportunity of tendering amends before the commencement of the proceeding the court may award to the defendant costs to be taxed as between solicitor and client.

This section shall not affect any proceedings by any department of the Government against any local authority or officer of a local authority (h).

(a) This Act took the place of s. 264 of the P. H. A., 1875, and similar sections in other Acts, which it repealed. It abolished notice of action in every case, but limits the time within which proceedings may be instituted against a local authority. It was held applicable to an action in respect of a right of action accrued before it was passed (The Ydun, [1899] P. 236).

"Action, prosecution, or other proceeding."

(b) These words do not include interlocutory applications or appeals ; they include actions for an injunction or declaration, whether coupled with a claim for damages or not (Fielden v. Morley Corporation, [1900] A. C. 133 ; 64 J. P. 484 ; Harrop v. Ossett

Note to Section 1.

Corporation, [1898] 1 Ch. 525; 62 J. P. 297; Toms v. Clacton U. D. C. (1898), 62 J. P. 505; Grand Junction Waterworks Co. v. Hampton U. D. C. (1899), 63 J. P. 503; 15 T. L. R. 412; Ambler v. Bradford Corporation, infra). See, however, Farquhar v. Aberdeen Magistrates, [1912] S. C. 1294, where the LORD PRESIDENT said that he did not see how the Act could be prayed in aid in a question of interdict, since the court can only grant interdict against a continuing wrong. And see also Att.-Gen. v. West Ham Corporation, [1910] 2 Ch., at p. 570, where the court held that the Act applied in respect of Acts completed more than six months before action, but granted a declaration in respect of overdrafts from a bank which amounted to a continuing illegality. And see Att.-Gen. v. Lewes Corporation, [1911] 2 Ch. 495; Hart v. St. Marylebone Borough Council (1912), 76 J. P. 257.

An action for an account of fair tolls is within the Act (Newcastle (Duke of) v. Worksop U. D. C., [1902] 2 Ch. 145); but it has no application to an action in rem (The Burns, [1907] P. 137; 71 J. P. 193); nor to claims for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Acts (Fry v. Cheltenham Corporation (1912), 81 L. J. K. B. 41; 76 J. P. 89), or under the Lands Clauses Acts (Glasgow Corporation v. Miller (1905), 13 Sc. L. T. 167), or indeed, it would seem, under any Act (Delany v. Metropolitan Board of Works, post, p. 899; Glasgow Corporation v. Smithfield, etc., Co., [1912] S. C. 364 (compensation for condemned meat). The Act does not apply to an action brought against a police authority for compensation under the Riot (Damages) Act, 1886 (Kauffman v. Liverpool Corporation, [1916] 1 K. B. 860; 80 J. P. 223). Nor does it apply to an action for an indemnity brought against a public authority under s. 6 (2) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, by the employer of a workman injured by the negligence of the defendant's servant (Tuckwood v. Rotherham Corporation, [1921] 1 K. B. 526; 85 J. P. 101). Nor does it apply to proceedings for a rule nisi for quo warranto against a clerk claiming to act as returning officer (R. v. Carter (1904), 68 J. P. 466); nor to an application for a certiorari to quash an auditor's surcharge (Roberts v. Battersea Borough Council (1914), 78 J. P. 265). Whether it applies to applications for a prohibition or a mandamus was discussed but not decided in R. v. Kensington Income Tax Commissioners, [1913] 3 K. B. 870. In R. v. Hertford Union (1914), 78 J. P. 405, AVERY, J., held that the six months' limitation did not apply to the prerogative writ of mandamus. See the decision of the Court of Appeal in R. v. Port of London Authority, [1919] 1 K. B. 176; and see also R. v. Marshland, etc. Commissioners, [1920] 1 K. B. 155.

It appears to be somewhat doubtful whether the Act applies to a case in which a claim to land is in question. See Cross v. Rix (1913), 77 J. P. 84; 29 T. L. R. 85. Where an authority procured themselves to be added as defendants in an action, it was held that it had not been "commenced" against them, and that the Act did not apply to it (McRobert v. Reid (1914), 51 Sc. L. R. 500).

"Any person."

(bb) The protection of the Act extends to municipal or local authorities in the execution of duties not strictly municipal or official, but arising in connection with commercial enterprises which they are empowered by Parliament to undertake, such as building a hospital (Harrop v. Ossett, supra), supplying water (Fielden v. Morley Corporation, ante, p. 890), or acting as a port and harbour authority (The Ydun, ante, p. 890), or as a tramway authority (Parker v. London C. C., post, p. 892; Lyles v. Southend-on-Sea Corporation, p. 893, post; Spittal v. Glasgow Corporation (1904), 6 F. 828).

In The Johannesburg, [1907] P. 65, where many of the previous decisions were reviewed, it was argued that the Act only applied to persons exercising powers on behalf of the public as a whole, such as a municipal corporation, and did not apply to a port authority (the Tyne Commissioners), but the argument did not prevail. The Act applies to an authority's officers and servants acting under its orders (Greenwell v. Howell, p. 893, post), but not to their contractors (Tilling, Ltd. v. Dick, Kerr & Co., Ltd., infra). As to its applicability to independent officials and individuals performing a statutory duty, see Salisbury v. Gould and Wilson v. Mackay, p. 893, post, and cf. Doust v. Slater, p. 894, post. See also Weir v. Thomas (1915), 79 J. P. 54, where an action was brought against a medical officer of health and a sanitary inspector for alleged negligence in failing to inform the plaintiff that certain meat was unfit for human food and it was held that the officers in question were entitled to the protection of the Act.

It has been held that a company incorporated by Act of Parliament not only for the performance of duties of public utility, but also for the purpose of earning profits, is not entitled to the benefit of the Act (Att.-Gen. v. Margate Pier and Harbour Co., [1900] 1 Ch. 749; 64 J. P. 405). In a later case the Court of Appeal pointedly refrained from expressing an opinion whether the Act applied to profit-earning companies (Ambler v. Bradford Corporation, [1902] 2 Ch. 585; 66 J. P. 708); but in a still later case CHANNELL, J., referred to Att.-Gen. v. Margate Pier and Harbour Co., supra, in terms which appear to show that the decision met with his approval (Parker v. London C. C., [1904] 2 K. B. 501; 68 J. P. 239); and see also the remarks of VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., in Lyles v. Southend-on-Sea Corporation, p. 893, post, and English v. Metropolitan Water Board, infra. In a Scotch case it was held that the Act does not protect commercial companies, and that when the liabilities and powers of such a company are transferred to a public authority, such authority cannot as to a liability to which they have succeeded rely upon the statute any more than their predecessors could have done (Lanarkshire Upper Ward District Committee v. Airdrie, Coatbridge and District Water Trustees (1906), 8 F. 777). See also on the latter point, English v. Metropolitan Water Board, [1907] 1 K. B. 588; 71 J. P. 313. In Ireland it has been held that the Act has no application in the case of trustees of a loan fund society sued for breach and neglect of their duties as such trustees (O'Brien v. Mitchelstown Loan Fund, [1903] 1 I. R. 282).

"Pursuance, execution or intended execution of Act."

(c) The phrase "Act of Parliament" includes a private Act (Bennett v. Stepney Borough Council, p. 893, post).

An action brought by a contractor, officer or servant against a local authority for breach of contract is not within this provision (Davies v. Swansea Corporation (1853), 8 Ex. 808; 17 J. P. 649; Clarke v. Lewisham Borough Council (1902), 67 J. P. 195; 19 T. L. R. 62). In National Telephone Co. v. Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation (1903), 89 L. T. 291; 52 W. R. 26, BUCKLEY, J., held that the Act did not apply to a case which turned upon the construction of a contract and the effect of acts done under that contract; and it has been held that it does not apply to an action brought by a contractor where the cause of action alleged is a fraud which induced him to make his contract with the authority (Pearson v. Dublin Corporation, [1907] A. C. 351; [1907] 2 I. R. 537). See also Sharpington v. Fulham Guardians, [1904] 2 Ch. 449; 68 J. P. 510; Lyles v. Southend-on-Sea Corporation, post, p. 893; and McPhie v. Greenock Magistrates (1904), 7 F. 246; Bradford Corporation v. Myers, post, p. 896; and Hayes v. King's County C. C., [1917] 2 I. R. 496. An act done in relation to a contract may be tortious (see Sachs v. Henderson, [1902] 1 K. B. 612; Du Pasquier v. Cadbury & Co., Limited, [1903] 1 K. B. 104). The Act does not apply to actions for the price of goods sold and delivered, and for work and labour done (Milford Docks Co. v. Milford Haven U. D. C. (1901), 65 J. P. 483); nor to an action brought in respect of an act done by an independent contractor employed by a public authority in pursuance of his contract with them (Kent C. C. v. Folkestone Corporation, [1905] 1 K. B. 620; 69 J. P. 125). In such circumstances neither the public authority (Kent C. C. v. Folkestone Corporation, supra), nor the contractor (Tilling, Limited v. Dick, Kerr & Co., Limited, [1905] 1 K. B. 562; 69 J. P. 172), can claim the benefit of the Act. It was also held that an action brought to set aside an adjustment agreement made between two local authorities upon the creation of a new urban district was not within the Act (Holsworthy U. D. C. v. Holsworthy R. D. C., [1907] 2 Ch. 62; 71 J. P. 330). The council of a metropolitan borough in which the Public Libraries Act, 1892, was in force, in the course of demolishing some old premises for the purpose of erecting a free library, made a hole in the wall of the adjoining owner's premises and did damage. In an action for damages brought by the adjoining owner subsequent to the expiration of six months after the act complained of, the council pleaded the statute, but it was held that it did not apply (Walsh v. Southwark Borough Council (1908), 72 J. P. 71).

The P. H. A., 1875, s. 264, p. 583, ante, was held inapplicable to an action which was in substance merely an action of ejectment Foat (or Holder) v. Margate Corporation (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 299; 47 J. P. 535), and it is doubtful if the present Act applies to such actions. See Cross v. Rix (1912), 77 J. P. 84; 29 T. L. R. 85, a claim for damage done in assertion of a proprietary right in land.

An action for an injunction to restrain a council from using land as a cemetery except beyond a radius of 100 yards from a dwelling-house (as required by s. 9 of the Burial Act, 1855) is an action against them for an act done in pursuance of a public duty within the meaning of the Act (Toms v. Clacton U. D. C. (1898), 62 J. P. 505; 78 L. T. 712). So also is an action to restrain a council from erecting a fire engine station on surplus land, part of which has been sold under restrictive conditions (Holford v. Acton U. D. C., [1898] 2 Ch. 240).

Where a sanitary authority serve a notice requiring abatement of a nuisance in connection with a supposed "drain," and in the course of works carried out in compliance with the notice it is discovered that the supposed drain is a "sewer," and that the authority was liable to do the repairs required by the notice, an action to recover from the authority the cost of the repairs as money paid to their use is an action for an act done in pursuance and execution, or intended execution, of an Act of Parliament or of a public duty or authority within the meaning of the text (Cree v. St. Pancras Vestry, [1899] 1 Q. B. 693; following Waterhouse v. Keen, and Midland Rail. Co. v. Withington L. B., post, p. 895).

The words of the section were held wide enough to embrace an action for damages by a passenger who, while travelling on a tramcar belonging to a municipal corporation, was injured owing to the negligence of the corporation's servants, his cause of action, in the opinion of the court, not depending on contract, but arising out of a breach of the duty to carry him safely cast upon the corporation by the fact of his being a passenger whom by the terms of their Light Railway Order they could not refuse to carry (Lyles v. Southend-on-Sea Corporation, [1905] 2 K. B. 1; 69 J. P. 193).

An officer of a county council, to which the duties of a district council as to a public right of way within their district under s. 26 of the L. G. A., 1894, had been duly transferred under ibid., sub-s. (4), drove along the way by direction of the county council in assertion of the public right to use it as a highway. The owner of the land having brought an action for trespass against the officer, judgment was for the defendant. Held, that the action was commenced for an act done in pursuance or execution of an Act of Parliament within the meaning of the text (Greenwell v. Howell, [1900] 1 Q. B. 535). Where a district council abated an encroachment upon a main road vested in the county council, and successfully defended an action brought against them for so doing, it was held that they were entitled under the Act to costs as between solicitor and client (Harvey v. Truro R. D. C. (1903), 68 J. P. 51).

Although not actually deciding the point, GRANTHAM, J., expressed the opinion that a medical practitioner in private practice, who negligently diagnoses a non-infectious illness and notifies it as an infectious one, thereby causing damage to the patient, would be within the protection of the Act (Salisbury v. Gould (1904), 68 J. P. 158).

An action was brought against the commanding officer of a Volunteer corps in respect of a street accident alleged to be due to his negligence in selecting horses and drivers for an ammunition waggon. It was held that as the cause of action alleged was his neglect of duty in his public capacity of commanding officer training his corps, the action was within the Act (Wilson v. Mackay (1904), 7 F. 168).

The Act was held to apply to an action for libel by a schoolmaster against a school board in whose employment he had been, in respect of statements contained in a resolution of the board stating the reasons for the master's dismissal (Reid v. Blisland School Board (1901), 17 T. L. R. 626); also to an action for malicious prosecution (Bostock v. Ramsey U. D. C., post, p. 900). A public official, acting in the exercise of a statutory or other authority is not protected by the Act if he acts maliciously, but malice cannot be presumed from the fact that he is mistaken as to his authority if he bonâ fide believes that he is acting under the powers conferred upon him. So held in an action by an Inspector of Schools against a Resident Commissioner in Ireland alleging malice and abuse of authority (Newell v. Starkie, [1919] 2 Ir. R. 325; 83 J. P. 113).

A servant of a council who for some years had paid contributions to a superannuation fund under a private Act was dismissed, and brought an action for the recovery of his contributions which he alleged to be due to him on his dismissal. It was held that as the action was brought more than six months after the alleged default of the defendants, s. 1 of this Act applied, and the action was not maintainable (Bennett v. Stepney Borough Council (1912), 76 J. P. 473; 107 L. T. 383).

A shipowner brought an unsuccessful action against the Tyne Improvement Commissioners in respect of damage done by a fire on one of their staiths. He failed, and, in opposition to an application for solicitor and client costs, contended that the defendants were not sued in respect of an act done in the intended execution of a public duty, as the negligence and breach of duty alleged against them was in respect of unauthorised works. It was held that the defendants erected and worked the staith in "intended execution" of statutory powers; and, if in constructing it they had deviated a little from such powers, adjoining owners were the only people entitled to complain, and the plaintiff could not rely on that fact (The Johannesburg, [1907] P. 65).

The following cases, mostly as to the necessity for "notice before action," were decided under earlier Acts upon such expressions as "anything done or intended to be done or omitted to be done under the provisions of this Act," or the like.

A defendant contracted with a local board for the digging of wells, the work to be done to the satisfaction of the board or their surveyor, and the digging to be done under the direction of the surveyor. A hole made in digging one of the wells in a highway was left without sufficient light, and the plaintiff's horse fell into it. For the damage thereby occasioned, the plaintiff brought an action without notice. Held, that the defendant was a person acting under the direction of the local board within the meaning of s. 139 of the P. H. A., 1848, and that the action was in respect of something "done or intended to be done under the provisions of" the Act (Newton v. Ellis (1855), 5 El. & Bl. 115; 19 J. P. 805).

The plaintiff and defendant were occupiers of adjoining houses separated by a covered passage. The house of the defendant was a publichouse, and the public were accustomed to commit nuisances against the wall of the plaintiff's house. The district board thereupon directed their inspector of nuisances to cause a urinal to be put up against the plaintiff's wall, and the inspector gave authority to the defendant to erect it, which he accordingly did, the district board paying a portion of the expense. It was held that the defendant, having acted as the inspector's delegate, in a matter intended to be done under the provisions of the Act, was entitled to notice of action under the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, s. 106 (Chambers v. Reid (1866), 30 J. P. 231; 13 L. T. 703). But where under the same Act a district board required a person to drain into a sewer, and in doing so he committed a trespass, it was held that he was acting, not under the orders or directions of the board, or by their authority, but simply in performance of a duty imposed upon him by statute, which, if he omitted, the board were empowered to call upon him to perform (Doust v. Slater (1869), 10 B. & S. 400; 33 J. P. 581). But, semble, the present Act might apply to a person so acting.

A contractor, employed by the Metropolitan Board of Works to enlarge a sewer, erected in it a dam, the water above which was removed by pumping. Owing to his negligence in not working the pumps, the sewage flowed back into the plaintiff's premises and injured them. Held, that the injury was occasioned by acts "done or intended to be done" under the powers of the board under the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, within the meaning of s. 106 thereof (Poulsum v. Thirst (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 442). A contractor under a district board was engaged in constructing a sewer, and employed men with horses and carts. The men were allowed an hour for dinner, but were not permitted to go home, or to leave their horses and carts. One of them went home, about a quarter of a mile out of the direct line of his work, to his dinner, and left his horse unattended in the street before his door. The horse ran away, and damaged certain railings belonging to the plaintiff. The jury found that the driver was acting within the scope of his employment. It was held that the thing complained of was not a thing "done or intended to be done under" the powers of the board under the Act of 1862 (Whatman v. Pearson (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 422).

The plaintiff was a driver employed by contractors, who had contracted with the defendants to provide horses and drivers for their carts used in watering the streets under the powers of the Metropolis Management Acts. The defendants negligently supplied a cart with a defective axle, by reason whereof the plaintiff, while watering the streets, was thrown off and injured. It was held that the supply of the water-cart to the plaintiff for the purpose of watering the streets was a thing "done or intended to be done" under the Acts (Edwards v. St. Mary, Islington (Vestry of) (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 338; 53 J. P. 180).

The defendants, a local board, left unfenced a goit adjoining a public footpath within their district, by reason whereof the plaintiff's husband, while using the footpath, fell into the goit and was drowned. It was held that the alleged cause of action being the continued non-performance of a duty imposed upon them by the P. H. A., 1848, and therefore a thing "done or intended to be done under" the provisions of the Act, the defendants were entitled to notice of action (Wilson v. Halifax (Mayor, etc. of), ante, p. 254). Per KELLY, C.B.: "It is now settled by authority that an omission to do something that ought to be done in order to the complete performance of a duty imposed upon a public body under an Act of Parliament, or the continuing to leave any such duty unperformed, amounts to an act done or intended to be done within the meaning of those clauses requiring notice of action for the protection of public bodies acting in the discharge of public duties under Acts of Parliament."

The defendants, surveyors of highways, received payment from the plaintiff of an assessment upon a highway rate which had been improperly or irregularly made. They had intended to act in the performance of the duties of their office. In an action to recover back the money, it was held that the acts complained of were done "in pursuance of" the Highway Act, 1835. Per LUSH, J.: "The question was whether the defendants in making the rate intended to do what they were authorised to do. It is clear that they bona fide believed they were doing what the law allowed, and that is all that is needed to entitle them to the protection of the statute." Per BLACKBURN, J.: "It has long been decided that such a provision is intended to protect persons from the consequences of committing illegal acts which are intended to be done under the authority of an Act of Parliament, but which by some mistake are not justified by its terms, and cannot be defended by its provisions" (Selmes v. Judge (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 724; 35 J. P. 645).

Where a local board having authority to moor a landing-stage in a navigable river, fastened it with an anchor, but omitted to bury the same properly, by reason of which omission a vessel in navigating the river suffered damage, it was held that their omission amounted to an "act done or intended to be done" under the provisions of the statute in question (Joliffe v. Wallasey L. B. (1873), L. R. 9 C. P. 62; 38 J. P. 40).

To an action for slander the defendant pleaded that the words were spoken while he was acting as clerk of the markets, in pursuance of the Acts relating to municipal corporations in Ireland, which entitled him to a month's notice of action for any act done "in pursuance of" them. The plea was held good, for the words spoken while acting in pursuance of the statutes were as much within their protection as acts done (Murray v. McSwinney (1876), Ir. Rep. 9 C. L. 545); see, however, Royal Aquarium, etc. Society v. Parkinson, [1892] 1 Q. B. 431; 56 J. P. 404.

The omission to repair the handrail of a bridge over a brook was held to be something done in pursuance of, or under the authority of, the Highway Act, 1835, so as to require notice (under s. 109) of an action for an injury sustained by reason of such omission (Holland v. Northwich Highway Board (1876), 40 J. P. 517; 34 L. T. 137).

The defendant authority gave to the plaintiffs notice to pave a street under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150, and on default themselves executed the work, and the plaintiffs on demand paid the amount apportioned on them. Both parties then believed that the street was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants, but some time afterwards it was discovered that it was such a highway, and the plaintiffs sued to recover back the amount. It was held that the claim was for something "done, or omitted to be done," under the Act (Midland Rail. Co. v. Withington L. B. (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 788; 47 J. P. 789; following Waterhouse v. Keen (1825), 4 B. & C. 200, and Selmes v. Judge, supra).

A local board constructed a pier under powers given by Provisional Order and confirming Act. The Order vested the pier in the board, and provided that expenses incidental to it should be discharged out of the general district rate. The plaintiffs were admitted to the pier as passengers of a steamboat company, who paid a rent to the board for the right to land passengers. While so using the pier the plaintiffs were injured by the negligence of the board or their servants. It was held that an action for such negligence was not an action for anything "done or intended to be done or omitted to be done" under the P. H. A., 1875 (Ongley v. Chatham L. B. (1887), 3 T. L. R. 706; 4 T. L. R. 6).

An action was brought to recover penalties under the local Acts authorising the construction of the Swansea Waterworks. By these Acts the defendants were bound to keep up a flow of minimum quantities of water into certain streams for the benefit of persons interested, including the plaintiff. In case of failure otherwise than through inevitable accident the defendants were liable to pay daily penalties and compensation. It was held that the claim was for things "done or intended to be done or omitted to be done" under the Acts (Lewis & Sons v. Swansea (Corporation of), W. N. (1887), p. 234).

(d) The words "public authority" include a Provisional Order for an electric lighting undertaking duly confirmed by statute: see Chamberlain and Hookham v. Bradford Corporation (1900), 64 J. P. 771; 83 L. T. 518; Ambler v. Bradford Corporation, ante, p. 891. "Public duty or authority."

A borough council who were the water authority for their district were owners of a motor car, and they employed a chauffeur to drive it. The car was used for general purposes, but especially for the purpose of taking about the borough officials. On a certain day the car, containing, besides the chauffeur, the water engineer of the council, and a clerk from the Treasury Department, was taken out to visit three of the council's pumping stations, in order that the engineer might examine them and that the clerk might pay the wages of the persons employed there. After these officials had performed their duties, and while the car was returning to the garage, the engineer having left it but the clerk being still in it, it collided with and injured the plaintiff through the alleged negligence of the chauffeur. More than six months after the accident the plaintiff brought his action. Held, that the action was not brought in respect of any alleged neglect or default in the execution of any Act of Parliament or of any public duty or authority within the meaning of that Act, and that the action lay notwithstanding that it had not been brought within six months after the accident (Clarke v. St. Helens Borough Council (1915), 85 L. J. K. B. 17; 79 J. P. 529).

The defendants were a water board having certain statutory duties and powers in relation to the supply of water in London and certain adjoining districts. They used motor lorries to convey piping and other stores to the depots established by them in their district. On September 17, 1919, they despatched from Battersea to their depot at Lea Bridge a lorry laden with water pipes and other stores for repairs and maintenance. Having arrived at Lea Bridge and discharged the water pipes there, certain empties were put on the lorry and, so loaded, the lorry returned to the place from which it started. During that return journey, loaded with empties, the lorry ran into and knocked down and seriously injured the plaintiff, who claimed damages from the defendants, but did not commence his action within six months of the accident. It was held that the use of the lorry at the time of the accident was "in pursuance or execution or intended execution of" the statutory duty and authority of the defendants, and that, therefore, they were protected (Edwards v. Metropolitan Water Board, [1922] 1 K. B. 291; 86 J. P. 33).

A municipal Corporation who were also gas authority were empowered by their Act to sell the coke produced in the manufacture of gas. They contracted to sell and deliver a ton of coke to the plaintiff, and by the negligence of their agent the coke was shot through the plaintiff's shop window. More than six months after the plaintiff commenced the action, and the Act was pleaded in defence. It was held that the act complained of was not an act done in the direct execution of a statute, or in the discharge of a public duty or the exercise of a public authority, and that the Act was not a defence to the action (Bradford Corporation v. Myers, [1916] A. C. 242; 80 J. P. 121). This decision was applied and followed in Hayes v. King's County C. C., [1917] 2 Ir. R. 496. But the Act was held applicable in an action against an insurance committee constituted under the National Health Insurance Act to set aside their decision with reference to a deduction for extravagant prescribing by a medical practitioner (Mitchell v. Aberdeen Insurance Committee, [1918] S. C. 415). And it was held that the Act applies to servants of the Crown acting within the scope of their public duties (The Danube II., [1920] P. 104).

A man who had been injured by being run over by an ambulance waggon belonging to an ambulance association, brought an action against the association more than six months after the accident. The association averred that they were incorporated by Royal Charter to do benevolent work, and that in running the waggon they were acting in execution of the public duty or authority entrusted to them by virtue of the charter. It was held that the association were not charged with any public duty or authority, and were not entitled to the protection of the Act (Ayr v. St. Andrews Ambulance Association, [1918] S. C. 158). In another case of injury done by an ambulance the defendants were held entitled to the protection of s. 166 of the Public Health (Scotland) Act (Baker v. Glasgow Corporation, [1916] S. C. 199).

The plaintiff was injured by an escape of gas due to the negligence of the defendant's servant when fixing a meter, stoves and fittings, and connecting the pipes in a house where the plaintiff was employed. It was held that having regard to the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1871, the defendant's servant was acting in the execution or intended execution of an Act of Parliament, and that the defendants were entitled to the protection of the statute (Clayton v. Pontypridd U. D. C., [1918] 1 K. B. 219; 82 J. P. 246).

Pleading statute: Waiver.

(dd) But the statute must be pleaded if it is to be relied upon (R. S. C., Order XIX., r. 16; C. C. R., Order X., r. 14); see Gregory v. Torquay Corporation, [1912] 1 K. B. 442; 76 J. P. 73, as to what is a sufficient description of it in a county court pleading. If defendants ask at a late stage of an action for leave to amend by pleading the statute, leave may be refused altogether (Aronson v. Liverpool Corporation (1913), 77 J. P. 176); and even if it be granted, the defendants, though succeeding on the plea, may have to bear the costs (Att.-Gen. v. West Ham Corporation, [1910] 2 Ch. 560; 74 J. P. 406). See Cross v. Rix, p. 892, ante, for a case where a nonsuit on the plaintiff's opening was held not to be justified.

It would seem, too, that defendants may so conduct negotiations after a claim is made upon them as to debar them from relying upon the limitation provisions of the Act; see Paterson v. Glasgow Corporation (1908), 46 Sc. L. R. 10, where the court, having regard to mistakes made and letters written by officials of the corporation, held hat it would be inequitable to allow them to rely on a very similar provision. See upon this point, Hewlett v. London C. C. (1908), 72 J. P. 136; 24 T. L. R. 331; there he plaintiff, being injured, owing to the negligent driving of the defendants' servant, claimed compensation from the defendants, and negotiations were entered into with a view to settling her claim. More than six months after the alleged act of negligence, he negotiations having broken down, the plaintiff commenced an action and the defendants pleaded the statute. The jury found that the defendants had by their conduct induced the plaintiff to delay commencing an action. It was held that the defendants were not debarred from setting up the statute in defence. See also Fraser v. British South Africa Co. (1911), Times, October 25th, Nov. 24th, where it was held that the terms of an alleged agreement would not debar the company from relying on a Statute of Limitations. Note to Section 1.

In Midland Rail. Co. v. Withington L. B., ante, p. 895, the money was paid on October 30th, 1880, so that the six months would expire on April 30th, 1881. On April 13th the plaintiffs' secretary wrote to the defendants for information as to the result of certain proceedings which were to determine whether the road was a highway or not, and stating that if the board were defeated the plaintiffs would expect a return of the money. The defendants replied that they were going to appeal, and would inform the plaintiffs of the result. The action was brought in March, 1882, after a month's notice had been given. It was held that the facts did not disclose a waiver by the defendants of the benefit of the section.

(e) It is the duty of a solicitor, instructed to negotiate with a public authority in respect of a claim for negligence, and failing satisfactory negotiations, to bring an action, to be acquainted with this enactment, and when the public authority has made an offer, to intimate to his clients that they must make up their minds to act before the expiration of the six months. For breach of this duty the solicitor must compensate his clients for the loss sustained by them by reason thereof (Fletcher v. Jubb, [1920] 1 K. B. 275). As to the computation of the six months, see Freeman v. Read (1863), 4 B. & S. 174; 32 L. J. M. C. 226; Radcliffe v. Bartholomew, [1892] 1 Q. B. 161; 56 J. P. 262; Goldsmiths' Co. v. West Metropolitan Rail. Co., [1904] 1 K. B. 1; 68 J. P. 41. According to a decision of the Court of Session in Scotland, when the six months expires on a Sunday, the writ is too late if issued on the following Monday (McNiven v. Glasgow Corporation, [1920] S. C. 584). And see also Gelmini v. Moriggia, [1913] 2 K. B. 549, where, in principle, the same conclusion was arrived at. Limitation of time.

Where the cause of action is the doing of the act itself, the time runs from the act; where it is the resulting damage, it runs from the date when the damage results, and where the injurious act is continuing and causes continuous damage, the right of action also continues. See Whitehouse v. Fellowes (1861), 30 L. J. C. P. 305; 10 C. B. (N.S.) 765; Backhouse v. Bonomi (1861), 9 H. L. Cas. 503; 34 L. J. Q. B. 181; Darley Main Colliery Co. v. Mitchell, ante, p. 721, and West Leigh Colliery Co., Limited v. Tunnicliffe, ante, p. 721; McClelland v. Manchester Corporation, [1912] 1 K. B. 118; 76 J. P. 21. Where, by an Improvement Act, actions for any injury done by the commissioners under the Act were to be brought within six months after the thing done, and the defendants, proceeding under the Act to dig a sewer, cracked the walls of the plaintiff's house, it was held that the plaintiff's right of action was limited to six months after the day on which the crack was occasioned, and did not continue for so long a time as the crack continued (Lloyd v. Wigney (1830), 6 Bing. 489).

Where an excavation made by a local authority under a street for the purpose of laying a sewer was not properly filled in, and in consequence a subsidence of the plaintiff's land with injury to houses thereon took place, which began at a period more than six months before, and went on continuously down to, the commencement of an action by the plaintiff in respect of such subsidence, it was held, on the authority of Darley Main Colliery Co. v. Mitchell, ante, p. 721, that the further subsidence, which took place within the six months before action, constituted a distinct cause of action in respect of which the action was maintainable, notwithstanding the provisions of s. 264 of the P. H. A., 1875 (Crumbie v. Wallsend L. B., [1891] 1 Q. B. 503; 55 J. P. 421). And see, to the same effect, Fairbrother v. Bury R. S. A. (1889), 37 W. R. 544.

A plaintiff was injured on June 17th, 1901, in consequence of an alleged act of misfeasance done by the defendants' servants some few days previously, and, whilst still suffering from her injuries, brought her action on October 8th, 1902; it was held that the action was not maintainable, on the ground that the words "continuance of injury or damage" refer only to those cases where there is a continuing cause of action (Carey v. Bermondsey Borough Council (1903), 67 J. P. 111). See also Copley v. Leeds Corporation (1904), 68 J. P. 196. It has been held in Scotland also that a mere continuance of the injurious effects or damage caused by an accident is not a "continuance of injury or damage" (Spittal v. Glasgow Corporation (1904), 6 F. 828). In Harrington (Earl of) v. Derby Corporation, [1905] 1 Ch. 205; 69 J. P. 62, where damages were claimed for pollution of a river, BUCKLEY, J., said: "The defendants contend that, having regard to s. 1 of the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, the plaintiffs can recover damages for no longer period than six months before the issue of the writ. To determine this point it is necessary to ascertain the meaning of the words in the section, 'in case of a continuance of injury or damage.' It cannot be disputed that for one cause of action all damages incident to it must be recovered once and once only, so that, for instance, if by the removal of the soil the defendant causes the walls of the plaintiff's house to crack, the plaintiff's cause of action is one and one only, and that none the less because the house does not at once show all the damage done to it, but manifests subsequently by degrees that the damage had been done. Upon this Lloyd v. Wigney (ante, p. 897) was cited, being a case upon the words of an Act which provided that an action must be brought within six calendar months 'after the thing done.' But if the result of the act is that one damage is done to-day and another subsequently, there is nothing to prevent a fresh action toties quoties fresh damage is inflicted (Darley Main Colliery Co. v. Mitchell (1886), 11 App. Cas. 127; 51 J. P. 148). If as the result of an act done to-day damage results a year later, the cause of action arises, not at the date of the act, but a year later when damage results. No cause of action arises from the act if it at that date created no damage. The right of action arises, not from the act, but from the resulting of damage from the act. Backhouse v. Bonomi (1861), 9 H. L. Cas. 503, established that proposition. There is, however, a further case with which this action is particularly concerned, viz., a continuing act which produces subsequently from day to day a recurrent damage. There is thus created within the principle which I have stated a fresh cause of action every day, and this, I conceive, is what is referred to in the section by the words 'in case of a continuance of injury or damage.' The words do not mean or refer to a damage inflicted once and for all which continues unrepaired, but a new damage recurring day by day in respect of an act done, it may be, for once and for all at some prior time, or repeated, it may be, from day to day. In such a case there is what CHANNELL, J., in Carey v. Bermondsey Borough Council (1903), 67 J. P. 111, calls a continuing cause of action. Where this is the case I think that, within s. 1 of the Public Authorities Protection Act, an action will lie when instituted six months next after the ceasing of the continuing injury or damage. That is, I think, the present case. These plaintiffs are therefore, I think, entitled to recover for a greater period than six months, and up to the period of six years limited by the Statute of Limitations."

In a later case where the defendants had, when pumping at a pumping station, polluted a stream by repeatedly pouring into it engine oil and grease during a period of three or four years prior to the date of the action, Lord ALVERSTONE, C.J., held that the plaintiffs could not recover damages for pollution caused more than six months before action brought (English v. Metropolitan Water Board, ante, p. 74).

The decision in Harrington (Earl of) v. Derby Corporation, supra, was followed in Hague v. Doncaster R. D. C. (1908), 73 J. P. 69; 100 L. T. 121 (animals poisoned by pollution of a river); and in Att.-Gen. v. Lewes Corporation, [1911] 2 Ch. 495; 76 J. P. 1, a periodical influx of sewage from a sewer remaining unrepaired was held to be a continuing cause of action. See also Hart v. St. Marylebone Borough Council (1912), 76 J. P. 257; 10 L. G. R. 502, as to a failure to repair a sewer and so support a road repairable by the plaintiffs being a "continuing wrong." For a case where the nuisance complained of had admittedly ceased more than six months before action and the statute was held applicable, see Barnett v. Woolwich Borough Council (1910), 74 J. P. 441. "The net result of the authorities appears to be that in order to come within the words of the section (as to continuance of damage) there must be a continuing breach of duty together with a continuing damage," per MCCARDIE, J., in R. v. Marshland, etc., Commissioners, [1920] 1 K. B., at p. 173. For a case where the court held that there was a continuing injury and damage, see Boynton v. Ancholme Drainage Commissioners, [1921] 2 K. B. 213; 85 J. P. 33.

In Cree v. St. Pancras Vestry, ante, p. 893, it was held that the six months ran from the date of the expenditure of the money, because although it was not paid into the authority's own hands and kept by them as in Midland Rail. Co. v. Withington L. B., ante, p. 895, yet it was paid in consequence of their request made in pursuance of the Act.

A man was convicted on February 11th for neglecting to have his children vaccinated, and, the fines not being paid, the magistrate issued a distress warrant nder which the plaintiff's goods were distrained on April 17th. After quashing the onviction, the plaintiff, on August 26th, brought an action for damages for illegal istress; it was held that the trespass to his goods by the distress was "the act omplained of" and not the conviction, and that, therefore, the action was brought n time (Polley v. Fordham (No. 1), [1904] 2 K. B. 345; 68 J. P. 321). In Turley . Daw (1906), 94 L. T. 216; 22 T. L. R. 231, however, it was held in action against he high bailiff of a county court by a plaintiff who had been arrested under a com- ittal order founded on a judgment summons never served upon him, that the six nonths ran not from the date of arrest but from the date when the bailiff wrongly nformed the court that he had duly served the summons.

A plaintiff alleged that a highway authority had pulled down a fence erected by im round a roadside waste, and claimed such waste. He asked for a declaration nd an injunction against trespassing. It was held that the action was barred at he expiration of six months from the pulling down of the fence (Offin v. Rochford R. D. C., [1906] 1 Ch. 342; 70 J. P. 97).

In an action for compensation awarded in respect of damage occasioned by the xercise of the powers of the Metropolis Management Acts, it was held to be no efence that the action was commenced more than six months after the damage vas sustained, as s. 106 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, did not apply o such a claim, and still less to an action on an award made upon such claim (Delany . Metropolitan Board of Works (1867), L. R. 3 C. P. 111; 31 J. P. 788; followed by DAY, J., in Moreton v. Alfreton (unreported), May 6th, 1898). See also cases as to ompensation claims in note (b), p. 891, ante. In the case of an action upon an award f compensation for injurious affection of land, the time under the general Statutes of imitation runs from the date of the award, not from the date of the execution of the vorks complained of (Turner v. Midland Rail. Co., [1911] 1 K. B. 832; 75 J. P. 83).

A plaintiff, whose houses were about to be closed as insanitary without compensa- ion, complained that four years before the defendants had failed to pull down such ouses when condemned by a jury and to compensate her in respect thereof, as re- uired by a local Act; it was held that under the circumstances there was no con- inuing injury, for she had at the time elected to accept the status quo and not compel hem to proceed (Merrick v. Liverpool Corporation, [1910] 2 Ch. 449; 74 J. P. 445).

A Divisional Court held that the six months' limit under the provision in the text uperseded the twelve months provided for in the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 ("Lord ampbell's Act"), and applied to actions brought under that Act (Markey v. Tolworth oint Isolation Hospital District Board, [1900] 2 Q. B. 454; 64 J. P. 647), but in British Electric Railway Co., Ltd. v. Gentile, [1914] A. C. 1034, the decision in Markey's case was disapproved. An action under that Act can only be maintained y the representative of a deceased person, where that person could, if alive, have imself maintained an action in respect of his injuries against the local authority. A plaintiff's husband met with an accident owing to the negligence of the defendants n the execution of a public duty. In consequence of the injury then received he ied two years afterwards without having brought an action against the defendants. Within six months after his death the plaintiff, as his personal representative, brought n action against the defendants; it was held that it could not be maintained, inasmuch s the right of action of the deceased, if alive, would have been barred by s. 1 (a), upra (Williams v. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, [1905] 1 K. B. 804; 69 J. P. 96). See also Gawley v. Belfast Corporation, [1908] 2 I. R. 34, where the injured an had issued a writ before his death.

An action was brought against a local authority to recover expenses caused by xtraordinary traffic on a highway, but it was not commenced within six months of he damage being done. By s. 12 (1) (b) of the Locomotives Act, 1898, proceedings or the recovery of expenses of extraordinary traffic are to be commenced within welve months after the damage has been done; it was held that the authority was ntitled to the protection of the Act of 1893 (Kent C. C. v. Folkestone Corporation 1904), 68 J. P. 590; 20 T. L. R. 780). The decision in this case was reversed on ppeal on another ground; but so far as regards the point for which it is here cited, was approved. See Kent C. C. v. Folkestone Corporation, ante, p. 892. Cf., how- ver, Lanarkshire District Committee v. Airdrie Water Trustees (1906), 8 F. 777.

(f) A judgment by consent was held to be a judgment "obtained" within the Solicitor and meaning of this provision, and to carry costs as between solicitor and client unless client costs. herwise agreed between the parties (Shaw v. Hertfordshire C. C., [1899] 2 Q. B. 32; 63 J. P. 659); but in Aird v. Tarbert School Board (1906), 44 Sc. L. R. 26,

Note to Section 1.

Lord PEARSON doubted whether the provision applied where judgment is entered by consent. But a defendant does in substance obtain a judgment within the meaning of the section so as to entitle himself to solicitor and client costs, if an order is made dismissing the action for want of prosecution (Gilbert v. Gosport U. D. C., [1916] 2 Ch. 587; 81 J. P. 89). So also where the court held that an action was useless and an abuse of legal process (Webster v. Bakewell R. D. C. (1916), 86 L. J. Ch. 89; 80 J. P. 437). But the court will not stay proceedings in an action on the ground that it has not been brought within six months as required by this Act (Wright v. Prescott U. D. C. (1916), 86 L. J. Ch. 221; 81 J. P. 43).

In a Scotch case it appeared that in an action against a public body for injury caused by the negligence of their servant, the Act was not pleaded. The defenders succeeded in the action and moved for their expenses to be taxed as between agent and client. It was held that it was competent to found on the Act with regard to expenses though it was not pleaded on the record: but that to entitle a public authority to take advantage of the Act the authority must either itself aver, and if necessary prove, that the act complained of was done in the execution of a public duty, or else it must be able to point to averments by the other party to that effect; and that as neither of these conditions was fulfilled, the expenses awarded fell to be taxed only as between party and party (Hunter v. Dundee Water Commissioners, [1920] S. C. 628).

Notwithstanding the use of the word "shall" in this provision, there is power for good cause to deprive the defendants of costs under R. S. C., Order LXV., r. 1: see Bostock v. Ramsey U. D. C., [1900] 2 Q. B. 616; 64 J. P. 660 (overruling on this point Cree v. St. Pancras Vestry, [1899] 1 Q. B. 693; and Roberts v. Mayor, etc. of Wrexham (1897), 102 L. T. Newsp. 395 (a county court case)); Aird v. Tarbet School Board (1906), 44 Sc. L. R. 223; East v. Berkshire C. C. (1912), 76 J. P. 355; 106 L. T. 65; Att.-Gen. v. West Ham Corporation, p. 896, ante. But otherwise no special direction is necessary for taxation as between solicitor and client, nor need the judgment show upon the face of it that the action was one falling within the Act (North Metropolitan Tramways Co. v. London C. C., [1898] 2 Ch. 145; 62 J. P. 488).

This Act has not repealed s. 118 of the County Courts Act, 1888, so far as actions against public authorities are concerned, and, therefore, where an authority are successful defendants in county court proceedings, their costs must be taxed as between solicitor and client according to the county court scale (Tory v. Dorchester Corporation, [1907] 1 K. B. 393; 71 J. P. 88).

Where the plaintiff failed on one issue, but otherwise succeeded, he was allowed his costs of the action as between party and party, but the defendants were allowed costs of the issue on which they succeeded as between solicitor and client, the two sets of costs to be set off (Roberts v. Gwyrfai R. D. C., [1899] 1 Ch. 583; 63 J. P. 181).

In Leckhampton Quarries Co., Ltd. v. Ballinger and the Cheltenham R. D. C. (1904; 68 J. P. 464; 20 T. L. R. 559, the plaintiffs claimed a declaration that their land was not subject to five alleged public rights of way. They succeeded as to the most important, but failed as to the remaining four, which were much less important. The judge gave them their general costs of the action, except so far as they had been increased by the issues upon which they had failed, and on those issues the defendants were given their costs as between solicitor and client. Upon a motion to vary the order (69 J. P. 54), the defendants asked for the general costs of the action as between solicitor and client, except so far as they were increased by any issue upon which they had failed, and contended in support that whenever there are several causes of action combined in one action or proceeding, then if the defendants, being a public authority, succeed as to any one of those causes of action, the result of the statute is that they are entitled to the whole costs of the action except so far as increased by any matter on which they have failed. The judge dismissed the motion on the ground that the plaintiffs had substantially succeeded in their action, and that therefore the case was brought within the ordinary rule that, when a plaintiff has substantially succeeded, he gets the general costs of the action except so far as they have been increased by any issues upon which he has failed. An appeal from this decision was dismissed (69 J. P. 377; 93 L. T. 93).

Tender of amends.

(g) Tender of amends is no answer at common law to a claim for unliquidated damages, nor is the common law altered in this respect by the Judicature Acts (Davy v. Richardson (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 202). Where a statute makes a tender of amends a sufficient answer to an action, it is not necessary for the defendant to pay the money into court unless the statute requires it in addition to the tender (Jones v. Goodrich (1842), 9 M. & W. 736: per PARKE, B.). On this principle it would seem that R. S. C. Order XXII., r. 3, is not applicable to cases of plea of tender under this Act. An offer

f compensation under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 308, where the defendants dispute the laintiff's title, does not amount to a sufficient tender (Cleckheaton U. D. C. v. Firth 1898), 62 J. P. 536; 42 Sol. J. 669). Note to Section 1.

In Smith v. Northleach R. D. C., [1902] 1 Ch. 197; 66 J. P. 88, the defendants paid noney into court in respect of one issue out of several with a denial of liability. The plaintiff proceeded with the action for some time afterwards, but ultimately accepted he sum paid into court in satisfaction of all the issues. She recovered her costs of he one issue up to the date of payment in, and the defendants obtained party and party costs of the other issues, and also costs of the one issue after payment in, the court holding that they were not entitled to solicitor and client costs from the date of payment in, inasmuch as s. 1 (c) is confined to cases in which an action is "proceeded with" to judgment, and does not apply to a discontinuance under Order XXVI., r. 1, where money is paid into court under Order XXII., with denial of liability and not in satisfaction.

The discretion which the trial judge possesses of depriving a successful defendant of costs for good cause so far as s. 1 (b) is concerned, is apparently not exercisable so far as s. 1 (c) is concerned: see per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., in Bostock v. Ramsey U. D. C., [1900] 2 Q. B. 616; 64 J. P. 660). It has already been pointed out that the Act does not apply in the case of an application for a certiorari to quash an auditor's surcharge. An application in such a case to tax the auditor's costs as between solicitor and client was therefore refused (Roberts v. Battersea Borough Council (1914), 78 J. P. 265).

(h) Therefore, this section will not apply to proceedings against a local authority under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 299, ante, p. 632.

2. There shall be repealed as to the United Kingdom so much of any public general Act as enacts that in any proceeding to which this Act applies— Repeal.

(a) the proceeding is to be commenced in any particular place; or

(b) the proceeding is to be commenced within any particular time; or

(c) notice of action is to be given; or

(d) the defendant is to be entitled to any particular kind or amount of costs, or the plaintiff is to be deprived of costs in any specified event; or

(e) the defendant may plead the general issue;

and in particular there shall be so repealed the enactments specified in the Schedule to this Act to the extent in that Schedule mentioned.

This repeal shall not affect any proceeding pending at the commencement of this Act (a).

(a) The Schedule contains a long list of repealed enactments, and is here set out only in so far as it repeals portions of statutes included in the present Work. Section 24 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, which is not included in the Schedule, is not repealed by this Act (Humphriss v. Worwood (1894), 64 L. J. Q. B. 437).

3. This Act shall not apply to any action, prosecution, or other proceeding for any act done in pursuance or execution, or intended execution, of any Act of Parliament, or in respect of any alleged neglect or default in the execution of any Act of Parliament, or on account of any act done in any case instituted under an Act of Parliament (a), when that Act of Parliament applies to Scotland only, and contains a limitation of the time and other conditions for the action, prosecution, or proceeding. Saving as to Scotland.

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1894.

(56 & 57 VICT. c. 73.)

An Act to make further provision for Local Government in England and Wales. [5th March 1894

PART I. (a)

PARISH MEETINGS AND PARISH COUNCILS.

Constitution of Parish Meetings and Parish Councils.

* * * * *

(a) Part I. is outside the scope of the present Work, except in so far as expre reference is therein made to district councils, or in so far as the powers of a pari council may be conferred on an urban district council under s. 33, post, p. 943. On those portions of it which concern district councils are printed.

Except where otherwise stated italicised words were repealed by the S. L. R. A 1908.

Use of school-room. 4.—(1) In any rural parish in which there is no suitable public roo vested in the parish council or in the chairman of a parish meeting an the overseers which can be used free of charge for the purposes in th section mentioned, the parochial electors and the parish council sha be entitled to use, free of charge, at all reasonable times, and after reaso able notice, for the purpose of—

(a) the parish meeting or any meeting of the parish council;

(b) any inquiry for parochial purposes by the Local Government Board or any other Government Department or local authority; or

(c) holding meetings convened by the chairman of the parish meeting or by the parish council, or if as to allotments in the manner prescribed by the Allotments Act, 1890, or otherwise as the Local Government Board may by rule prescribe, to discuss any question relating to allotments, under the Allotments Acts, 1887 and 1890, or under this Act; or

(d) the candidature of any person for the district council or the parish council; or

(e) any committee or officer appointed, either by the parish meeting or council or by a county or district council, to administer public funds within or for the purposes of the parish any suitable room in the schoolhouse of any public elementary school receiving a grant out of moneys provided by Parliament, and any suitable room the expense of maintaining which is payable out of any local rate:

Provided that this enactment shall not authorise the use of any room used as part of a private dwelling-house, nor authorise any interference with the school hours of an elementary day or evening school, nor, in the case of a room used for the administration of justice or police, with the hours during which it is used for these purposes.

This sub-section only concerns district councils to the extent of clauses (d) and (e). Possibly the latter clause may apply to meetings of a parochial committee appointed under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 202, ante, p. 467.

In reply to applications under s. 33 the L. G. B. informed many urban district councils that they were advised that the power to use free of charge certain rooms for the purposes specified in the section was not a power which could be conferred upon such a council.

(2) If, by reason of the use of the room for any of the said purposes, any expense is incurred by the persons having control over the room, or any damage is done to the room or to the building of which the room is part or its appurtenances, or the furniture of the room or the apparatus for instruction, the expense or damage shall be defrayed as part of the expenses of the parish meeting or parish council or inquiry as the case may be; but when the meeting is called for the purpose of the candidature of any person, such expense or damage shall be reimbursed to the parish meeting or the parish council by the persons by whom or on whose behalf the meeting is convened.

As to the costs of inquiries, see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 294, ante, p. 627.

(3) If any question arises under this section as to what is reasonable or suitable, it may be determined, in the case of a schoolhouse, by the Education Department, in the case of a room used for the administration of justice or police, by a Secretary of State, and in any other case by the Local Government Board.

The "Board of Education" (established by 62 & 63 Vict. c. 33) took the place of the "Education Department," and the Minister of Health (9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 21) has now superseded the L. G. B.

Section 5.

Powers and Duties of Parish Councils and Parish Meetings.

Parish council to appoint overseers.

5.—(1) The power and duty of appointing overseers of the poor, and the power of appointing and revoking the appointment of an assistant overseer, for every rural parish having a parish council, shall be transferred to and vested in the parish council, and that council shall in each year, at their annual meeting, appoint the overseers of the parish, and shall as soon as may be fill any casual vacancy occurring in the office of overseer of the parish, and shall in either case forthwith give written notice thereof in the prescribed form to the board of guardians.

An assistant overseer may be appointed by resolution of the parish council signed by the chairman. The court will grant a writ of mandamus calling on the overseers to give the assistant overseer temporary possession of the rate books for the purpose of enabling him to perform the duties of his office (R. v. Powell, [1899] 1 Q. B. 396; 63 J. P. 84). When an assistant overseer appointed under this section is indicted for embezzling money collected from the ratepayers, he is rightly charged as the servant of the inhabitants, not of the parish council, and the property is well laid in the inhabitants (R. v. Smallman, [1897] 1 Q. B. 4; 61 J. P. 312). As to revocation of an appointment, see Reynolds v. Hardington Mandeville Parish Council (1898), 62 J. P. 363; and as to appeals against appointments of overseers, see Bowden v. New Mills U. D. C., in notes to s. 33, post, p. 944.

In an urban district the Ministry of Health may, under s. 33, post, p 943, confer on the urban district council or on some other representative body within the district the power of appointing overseers and assistant overseers, and of revoking the appointment of assistant overseers. Where no such order is made overseers and assistant overseers in urban parishes are appointed as before 1894.

It has been held that the inhabitants in vestry have no power to increase the salary of an assistant overseer unless he resigns his office, or they revoke his appointment, or it terminates by effluxion of time (Jones v. Lewis, [1919] 1 K. B. 328; 83 J. P. 61). It was held also in the same case that in the case of an existing assistant overseer, the urban council who had obtained an order under s. 33, post, had no power to revoke his appointment and re-elect him at an increased salary.

(2) As from the appointed day—

(a) The churchwardens of every rural parish shall cease to be overseers, and an additional number of overseers may be appointed to replace the churchwardens, and

(b) References in any Act to the churchwardens and overseers shall, as respects any rural parish, except so far as those references relate to the affairs of the church, be construed as references to the overseers, and

(c) The legal interest in all property vested either in the overseers or in the churchwardens and overseers of a rural parish, other than property connected with the affairs of the church, or held for an ecclesiastical charity, shall, if there is a parish council, vest in that council, subject to all trusts and liabilities affecting the same, and all persons concerned shall make or concur in making such transfers, if any, as are requisite for giving effect to this enactment.

Where an order is made under s. 33, post, p. 943, conferring upon the urban district council the powers of the overseers the churchwardens will automatically cease to be overseers. When application is made to the Ministry of Health by an urban council for the powers of s. 5 (2) (c), the Ministry require to be definitely informed (a) what property there is to which these provisions would apply, and (b) when and how such property was acquired. It is also advisable to give a reference, if possible, to any correspondence which may have taken place at any time on the subject of this property either with the Board or their predecessors, the Poor Law Board.

Note to Section 5.

See, as to what is "ecclesiastical property," St. George, Hanover Square v. Westminster Corporation, [1910] A. C. 225; 74 J. P. 153.

6.—(1) Upon the parish council of a rural parish coming into office, there shall be transferred to that council:

Transfer of certain powers of vestry and other authorities to parish council.

(a) The powers, duties, and liabilities of the vestry of the parish except—

(i) so far as relates to the affairs of the church or to ecclesiastical charities; and

(ii) any power, duty, or liability transferred by this Act from the vestry to any other authority:

(b) The powers, duties, and liabilities of the churchwardens of the parish, except so far as they relate to the affairs of the church or to charities, or are powers and duties of overseers, but inclusive of the obligations of the churchwardens with respect to maintaining and repairing closed churchyards wherever the expenses of such maintenance and repair are repayable out of the poor rate under the Burial Act, 1855: Provided that such obligations shall not in the case of any particular parish be deemed to attach, unless or until the churchwardens subsequently to the passing of this Act shall give a certificate, as in the Burial Act, 1855, provided, in order to obtain the repayment of such expenses out of the poor rate:

(c) The powers, duties, and liabilities of the overseers or of the churchwardens and overseers of the parish with respect to—

(i) appeals or objections by them in respect of the valuation list, or appeals in respect of the poor rate, or county rate, or the basis of the county rate; and

(ii) the provisions of parish books and of a vestry room or parochial office, parish chest, fire engine, fire escape, or matters relating thereto; and

(iii) the holding or management of parish property, not being property relating to affairs of the church or held for an ecclesiastical charity, and the holding or management of village greens, or of allotments, whether for recreation grounds or for gardens or otherwise for the benefit of the inhabitants or any of them:

(d) The powers exerciseable with the approval of the Local Government Board by the board of guardians for the poor law union comprising the parish in respect of the sale, exchange, or letting of any parish property.

The provisions of this sub-section do not concern district councils, except in so far as they give to parish councils powers which may be conferred on urban district councils under s. 33, post, p. 943. Where, however, such powers have been conferred, some decisions must be observed. On an appeal against a poor rate in a parish with a parish council, notice of appeal must be given to the parish council in lieu of the overseers (R. v. Tewkesbury JJ., [1903] 1 K. B. 39; 67 J. P. 54). Whether in an urban parish in which the powers of overseers as to appeals against the poor rate have been transferred to the town council or urban district council by an Order of the L. G. B. notice should be given to that council was regarded as a doubtful question in R. v. De Grey, [1900] 1 Q. B. 521; 64 J. P. 375, and the safer course is to serve a notice both on the overseers and on the council. See also, as to appeals against county rates, West Riding C. C. v. Middleton Parish Council, [1906] 2 K. B. 157; 70 J. P. 326.

An award under an Inclosure Act of 1799 ordered that the herbage on the awarded public and private roads should be let by auction yearly by the surveyor of highways for the parish or such other person and under such restrictions and regulations as the occupiers of lands and tenements in vestry should appoint, and that the proceeds should go towards the repair of the roads in the parish. G. Drove (a private road) was one of the roads mentioned in the award and the herbage on it was always let annually by auction. Before 1894 it was let by the vestry and the proceeds applied in repairing the roads of the parish. After 1894 it was let by the parish council and the proceeds handed to the district council, who applied them in reduction of the amount due for road repair from the parish. An action was brought by the Attorney-General, on the relation of the district council, and by the district council, for damages for injury to the letting value of the herbage, alleged to be due to the defendants' wrongful depasturing the drove, and for an injunction. It was held that the title to the herbage was originally in the parishioners, or, under 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 17, in the churchwardens and overseers as trustees for them, and was now, under the L. G. A., 1894, ss. 6 (1) and 67, in the parish council; and that the district council had no right of action (Att.-Gen. v. Garner (1907), 71 J. P. 357). See, however, as to this case, Weir v. Fermanagh C. C., [1913] 1 I. R. 193.

The transfer of the powers, duties, and liabilities of the vestry do not make the parish council indictable for non-repair of highways (R. v. Shipley Parish Council (1897), 61 J. P. 488; 13 T. L. R. 486).

Under the Parochial Offices Act, 1861, overseers of a parish the population whereof exceeds 4,000 persons according to the census for the time being may, with the consent of the vestry and of the Ministry of Health, provide an office for the transaction of the business of the parish. In any case where the Act applies to a parish having a parish council the parish council, and not the overseers, are, by virtue of s. 6 (1) (c) (ii), supra, the authority who are to undertake the provision of the office. Under s. 8 (1) (a), under which a parish council have power to provide offices for any purposes connected with parish business.

In the case of applications by urban councils for the powers of a parish council under s. 6 (1) (c) (iii), the Ministry of Health require similar particulars to those mentioned in the note to s. 5, ante, p. 904. The L. G. B. have in many instances complied with such applications, and have also conferred powers under other paragraphs of the section.

In regard to the power as to closed churchyards, it will be observed that even the issue of an order under s. 33 will not give an urban council control over a closed churchyard unless and until a certificate is given under the Burial Act, 1855, s. 18. A churchyard may be wholly closed, closed subject to exceptions, or closed in part, but it is beyond the scope of this Work to discuss the cases to which the provision in the Act of 1855 does or does not apply. It should be noted, however, that by the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure, 1921, which obtained the Royal Assent on July 1st, 1921, there was transferred to the parochial church council of every parish the care and maintenance of the churchyard (including a closed churchyard) with all rights possessed by the churchwardens to recover from overseers the cost of maintaining a closed churchyard. In pursuance of this Measure (which under the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act, 1919, has the effect of an Act of Parliament) it is now for the parochial church council to issue a certificate if they find themselves without funds for maintenance purposes.

As regards Wales and Monmouthshire also the law has been altered. The Welsh Church Act, 1914, s. 8 (1) (a) (viii) provided that the Welsh Commissioners should by order, transfer to the "representative body," if so requested by that body, any closed burial grounds in Wales or Monmouthshire; if not so transferred, the burial ground of any parish was to be vested in the existing incumbent during his incumbency and on the determination thereof in the burial board, urban district council, parish council, or other local authority, according to circumstances, s. 8 (1) (b)

Note to Section 6.

Section 25 of the Act transferred to the council of every borough and urban district in Wales and Monmouthshire, except where a closed churchyard was transferred to the representative body, the obligations of churchwardens in the same terms as the L. G. A., 1894, transferred such obligations to parish councils, viz. wherever the expenses fell upon the poor rate. By the Welsh Church (Temporalities) Act, 1919, the Welsh Commissioners might postpone the transfer of property vested in them to local authorities and the latter are not bound to accept the transfer until the Secretary of State so directs.

With regard to fire engines, urban councils have all requisite powers under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 171 (2).

(2) A parish council shall have the same power of making any complaint or representation as to unhealthy dwelling or obstructive buildings as is conferred on inhabitant householders by the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, but without prejudice to the powers of such householders.

Such complaints or representations as to unhealthy dwellings and obstructive buildings may be made by householders under ss. 31 and 38 (1), (2), respectively, of the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890.

By the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1919, 2nd Schedule, complaints or representations may also be made by justices of the peace.

A parish council is authorised by the present section to make similar complaints and representations, and presumably the same consequences will follow where the parish council so acts as follow a complaint or representation made by householders or justices of the peace. The rights of those householders or justices of the peace are not interfered with by the section.

* * * * * *

Additional powers of parish council.

8.—(1) A parish council shall have the following additional powers, namely, power—

(a) To provide or acquire buildings for public officers and for meetings and for any purposes connected with parish business or with the powers or duties of the parish council or parish meeting; and

(b) To provide or acquire land for such buildings and for a recreation ground and for public walks; and

(c) To apply to the Board of Agriculture under section nine of the Commons Act, 1876 (a); and

(d) To exercise with respect to any recreation ground, village green, open space, or public walk, which is for the time being under their control, or to the expense of which they have contributed, such powers as may be exercised by an urban authority under section one hundred and sixty-four of the Public Health Act, 1875, or section forty-four of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890, in relation to recreation grounds or public walks, and sections one hundred and eighty-three to one hundred and eighty-six of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall apply accordingly as if the parish council were a local authority within the meaning of those sections (b); and

(e) To utilise any well, spring or stream, within their parish and provide facilities for obtaining water therefrom, but so as not to interfere with the rights of any corporation or person (c); and

Section 8.

(f) To deal with any pond, pool, open ditch, drain, or place containing, or used for the collection of, any drainage, filth, stagnant water, or matter likely to be prejudicial to health, by draining, cleansing, covering it, or otherwise preventing it from being prejudicial to health, but so as not to interfere with any private right or the sewage or drainage works of any local authority; and

(g) To acquire by agreement any right of way, whether within their parish of an adjoining parish, the acquisition of which is beneficial to the inhabitants of the parish or any part thereof (d); and

(h) To accept and hold any gifts of property, real or personal, for the benefit of the inhabitants of the parish or any part thereof; and

(i) To execute any works (including works of maintenance or improvement) incidental to or consequential on the exercise of any of the foregoing powers, or in relation to any parish property, not being property relating to affairs of the church (e) or held for an ecclesiastical charity; and

(k) To contribute towards the expense of doing any of the things above mentioned, or to agree or combine with any other parish council to do or contribute towards the expense of doing any of the things above mentioned.

Many of the powers mentioned in this sub-section are already possessed by urban district councils under the Public Health and other Acts. See, as to offices, the P. H. A., 1875, s. 197; as to recreation grounds, ibid., s. 164; P. H. A., 1890, ss. 44, 45; as to commons and open spaces, the Commons Acts and Open Spaces Acts; as to wells, springs, etc., the P. H. A., 1875, s. 51; as to ponds, ditches, etc., ibid., ss. 48, 49, 91 et seq.; as to rights of way, ibid., ss. 154, 175; as to combination with other councils, ibid., s. 285; L. G. A., 1894, s. 57.

Urban councils have no distinct power to provide buildings for meetings (see, however, infra, as to this) unless they are a municipal corporation, to deal with ponds etc., likely to be prejudicial to health, to acquire rights of way beyond their district, or to accept gifts except of such things as they have power to provide. Many urban councils have therefore obtained Orders under s. 33 giving them the powers of s. 8 (1) (a), (b), (f), (g), (h), and of (i) and (k) so far as required for the purposes of preceding paragraphs.

In reference to a proposal submitted by an urban district council to use a piece of land as a site for a public hall, the L. G. B. stated that they gathered that the proposal was not to provide the hall in connection with the administration of the business of the district council, but as a separate building to be used for meetings of a public character, entertainments, etc. The Board were advised that the provision of such a building was not within the powers of the district council under the Public Health Acts, and that the fact that the council accepted a gift of land for the erection of a town hall would not enable them to provide and maintain such a building even if they were invested with all the powers of a parish council under s. 8 (1) (a).

The L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health) apparently attach a restricted meaning to paragraph (i) in relation to (h). Thus, where an urban council who, not being a burial authority, had not the powers of the Burial Act, 1852, s. 41, asked for the powers of s. 8 (1) (h) and (i), in order to accept and maintain a hearse and hearse house, the Board seemed to take the view that paragraph (i) would not enable the council to incur expense in maintenance.

(a) See this section in App. I., post, Vol. II.

(b) See also as to the powers of a parish council with respect to commons and open spaces the Commons Act, 1899, and the Open Spaces Act, 1906, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

Note to Section 8.

(c) It is not clear that this power if conferred on an urban authority would increase the powers already possessed by it under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 51, ante, p. 119.

A parish council cannot in their own name without the Attorney-General maintain an action to enforce a right of the inhabitants of the parish to the use of a well or spring (Stoke Parish Council v. Price, [1899] 2 Ch. 277 ; 63 J. P. 502 ; cf. Sheringham U. D. C. v. Holsey, [1904] W. N. 83 ; 68 J. P. 395). The Ministry of Health do not consider that a parish council are empowered by the paragraph to carry out any works of magnitude involving the laying of mains, the construction of reservoirs, etc. These are within the province of the district council, who also have the requisite powers for breaking up streets, charging of water rates, etc. See also sub-s. (3), infra.

(d) It may be important for an urban authority to possess this power. See first note.

(e) See as to the meaning of this term, St. George, Hanover Square v. Westminster Corporation, [1910] A. C. 225 ; 74 J. P. 153.

(2) A parish council may let, or, with the consent of the parish meeting, sell or exchange, any land or buildings vested in the council, but the power of letting for more than a year and the power of sale or exchange shall not be exercised, in the case of property which has been acquired at the expense of any rate, or is at the passing of this Act applied in aid of any rate, or would but for want of income be so applied, without the consent of the Local Government Board, or in any other case without such consent or approval as is required under the Charitable Trusts Acts, 1853 to 1891, for the sale of charity estates, provided that the consent or approval required under those Acts shall not be required for the letting for allotments of land vested in the parish council.

Lettings and sales by parish councils may be under such circumstances that other provisions apply, such as s. 17 of the Burial Act, 1855, or a prescribing order of the L. G. B. or Ministry of Health under sub-s. (9), infra. The subject is outside the scope of this Work.

Wider powers than those conferred by this sub-section are already possessed by urban district councils under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 175. See that section, ante, p. 412, and notes thereto.

(3) Nothing in this section shall derogate from any obligation of a district council with respect to the supply of water or the execution of sanitary works.

This saving clause is inserted in consequence of the powers conferred upon the parish council with regard to water supply, and the sanitary works mentioned in sub-s. (1) (e) and (f), ante. See also note (c), supra.

(4) Notice of any application to the Board of Agriculture in relation to a common shall be served upon the council of every parish in which any part of the common to which the application relates is situate.

Notice of any application under the Commons Act, 1876, in relation to any common within their district must also be served upon the district council. See s. 26 (2), post, p. 937. The Board of Agriculture has now been superseded by the Minister of Agriculture (9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 91).

Powers for acquisition of land.

9.—(1) For the purpose of the acquisition of land by a parish council the Lands Clauses Acts shall be incorporated with this Act, except the provisions of those Acts with respect to the purchase and taking of land otherwise than by agreement, and section one hundred and seventy-eight of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall apply as if the parish council were referred to therein.

The powers of this section are never conferred upon an urban district council by the Ministry of Health under s. 33. Such a council has powers under s. 176 of the P. H. A., 1875, for the compulsory purchase of lands.

(2) If a parish council are unable to acquire by agreement and on reasonable terms suitable land for any purpose for which they are authorised to acquire it, they may represent the case to the county council, and the county council shall inquire into the representation.

(3) If on any such representation, or on any proceeding under the Allotments Acts, 1887 and 1890, a county council are satisfied that suitable land for the said purpose of the parish council or for the purpose of allotments (as the case may be), cannot be acquired on reasonable terms by voluntary agreement, and that the circumstances are such as to justify the county council in proceeding under this section, they shall cause such public inquiry to be made in the parish, and such notice to be given both in the parish and to the owners, lessees, and occupiers of the land proposed to be taken as may be prescribed, and all persons interested shall be permitted to attend at the inquiry, and to support or oppose the taking of the land.

Italicised words repealed by the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1907.

If the county council are satisfied as to the matters referred to above, they are to proceed to give notices and to hold a public inquiry; it may be assumed that the notices will be given before the inquiry is held, though this, the natural, order of events is inverted in the text. The inquiry and the notices are to be "such as may be prescribed," i.e., by Order of the L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health) (see s. 75, post, p. 987, and General Order of January 7th, 1922). The inquiry must be public and held in the parish, and the notices must be given both in the parish and to the owners, lessees, and occupiers of the land proposed to be taken. The inquiry will be held under the provisions of the Allotments Act, 1890, s. 3, which by sub-s. (13), post, p. 914, is incorporated with this section, viz. by such one or more members of the standing committee of the county council established under that section, or such officer of the county council or other person as the standing committee may appoint to hold the same. The person holding the inquiry will have the same powers as an inspector of the Ministry of Health when holding an inquiry, and the county council may make orders as to the costs of such inquiries. See sub-ss. (8), (12), post, pp. 913, 914, and the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 294—296, ante, pp. 627—629. All persons interested may attend the inquiry by themselves or their agents, and support or oppose the taking of the land. Counsel and expert witnesses are not to be heard except in such cases as may be prescribed (sub-s. (11), post, p. 913).

(4) After the completion of the inquiry, and considering all objections made by any persons interested, the county council may make an order for putting in force, as respects the said land or any part thereof, the provisions of the Lands Clauses Acts with respect to the purchase and taking of land otherwise than by agreement.

An order made under this provision will be provisional only and cannot be acted on until it is confirmed under sub-s. (7), post, p. 912. This sub-section must be read with sub-s. (10), post, p. 913; the order is to incorporate not only the Lands Clauses Acts but the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, ss. 77—85, and may make the "necessary adaptations" of those provisions: further, any question of disputed compensation is to be dealt with under s. 3 of the Allotments Act, 1887; as to this, see note on sub-s. (10), post, p. 913.

Note to Section 9

(5) If the county council refuse to make any such order, the parish council, or, if the proceeding is taken on the petition of the district council, then the district council, may petition the Local Government Board, and that Board after local inquiry may, if they think proper, make the order, and this section shall apply as if the order had been made by the county council. Any order made under this sub-section overruling the decision of the county council shall be laid before Parliament by the Local Government Board.

Italicised words repealed by the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1907.

This sub-section gives a right of appeal to the Ministry of Health in any case where a county council has refused to make the order referred to in the last sub-section. Presumably the right will exist where the council has refused to direct an inquiry under sub-s. (3), not being satisfied as to the existence of the conditions there referred to, as well as when after such inquiry they have refused to make an order. It is understood that very few applications of this kind have been made.

It will be noticed that no right of appeal is given under this sub-section against an order made by a county council under the preceding sub-section. The remedy of any person aggrieved by the making of such an order is to memorialise the Ministry of Health against its confirmation under sub-s. (7), infra.

A petition to the Ministry of Health should set out the original representation or petition to the county council, and any evidence in support of it upon which the petitioners rely, whether it has been already adduced at an inquiry by the county council or not. Upon the presentation of such a petition the Ministry will, it appears, be bound to hold a local inquiry, and to any such inquiry, ss. 293—296 and sub ss. (1), (2) of s. 297 of the P. H. A., 1875, will apply (see sub-s. (8), post, p. 913); it will be conducted by an inspector of the Ministry. After the inquiry has been held, the Ministry may make the order, but it will be provisional only until confirmed under sub-s. (7), and will stand on the same footing as an order by the county council made under sub-s. (4). Any order under this sub-section, putting in force compulsory powers of purchasing land, will be an order "overruling the decision of the county council," and must, therefore, in all cases, be laid before Parliament.

The Act is silent as to when such an order is to be laid before Parliament. Neither is any power given to Parliament to deal with such an order, similar to the power given by the Judicature Act, 1875, s. 25, to present an address praying for the annulment of rules of court laid before them under that section. Apparently, the intention of the present provision is that such an order shall merely be brought to the attention of Parliament. A similar provision for the laying of orders before Parliament is contained in the L. G. A., 1888, s. 57, ante, p. 773.

The laying of the order itself before Parliament is in addition to the report by the Ministry of Health of proceedings under this section, which is required by s. 10 (11).

(6) A copy of any order made under this section shall be served in the prescribed manner, together with a statement that the order will become final and have the effect of an Act of Parliament, unless within the prescribed period a memorial by some person interested is presented to the Local Government Board praying that the order shall not become law without further inquiry.

The "order" here referred to includes an order made by the county council or by the Ministry of Health under the preceding sub-sections. As to the presentation of memorials and the final confirmation of orders, see the next sub-section. The copy of the order and the statement referred to in this sub-section is to be served "in the prescribed manner" (s. 75). See General Order of January 7th, 1922, which is set out in App. II., post, Vol. II.

Note to Section 9.

No order can be made under the last sub-section unless notice of its purport has been previously given in a local newspaper circulating in the district to which it relates (P. H. A., 1875, s. 297 (1), incorporated by sub-s. (8), infra).

(7) The order shall be deposited with the Local Government Board, who shall inquire whether the provisions of this section and the prescribed regulations have been in all respects complied with; and if the Board are satisfied that this has been done, then, after the prescribed period—

(a) If no memorial has been presented, or if every such memorial has been withdrawn, the Board shall, without further inquiry, confirm the order:

(b) If a memorial has been presented, the Local Government Board shall proceed to hold a local inquiry, and shall, after such inquiry, either confirm, with or without amendment, or disallow the order:

(c) Upon any such confirmation the order, and if amended as so amended, shall become final and have the effect of an Act of Parliament, and the confirmation by the Local Government Board shall be conclusive evidence that the requirements of this Act have been complied with, and that the order has been duly made, and is within the powers of this Act.

The period for which the order is to lie with the L. G. B. (now the M. of H.) unconfirmed has been fixed as one month (Order of January 7th, 1922). During this period the Ministry will inquire as to whether the provisions of this section and the prescribed regulations have been in all respects complied with. If not satisfied as to this, they will presumably acquaint the promoters of that fact, and the promoters, if unable to satisfy the Board as to the question, will be obliged, if they desire to persist in their proceedings, to commence them de novo, or, at least, from the point at which the provisions of the section or the regulations were infringed.

If no memorial has then been presented the Ministry are bound, after the prescribed period has expired—and "after" must be taken to mean "immediately after"—to confirm the order.

At any time during the prescribed period a memorial may be presented to the Ministry by "some person interested," praying that the order shall not become law without further inquiry (see last sub-section). The expression "person interested" would include the owner, lessee, or occupier of the land proposed to be taken, and any other person who has a definite right of property in that land. The memorial should state the course of the proceedings which have been taken, and the evidence relied on in support of the prayer of the memorial. If a memorial be presented it will be the duty of the Ministry to hold a local inquiry (as to which see note on sub-s. (5), ante, p. 911, and sub-s. (8), post, p. 913); this inquiry must, it seems, be held in all cases where a memorial has been presented, even though the Provisional Order has been made by the Ministry itself upon appeal from the county council under sub-s. (5). This second inquiry by the same body seems to be an unnecessary proceeding, but the language of the present sub-section and of sub-s. (5) seems to leave no option to the Ministry for the provisions of this section, including sub-s. (7) (b), now under consideration, are to apply to an order made by the Ministry under sub-s. (5), "as if the order had been made by the county council." After (i.e., "immediately after") such inquiry the Ministry must either confirm the order with or without amendment or disallow it.

This decision is final. If confirmed, the order (or if amended the order as so amended) becomes final, and has the effect of an Act of Parliament. Once confirmed, it cannot be questioned on the ground that the requirements of this Act have not been complied with, or that it is not within the powers of the Act.

The effect of the provisions of this and the preceding sub-sections in the case land which is required for the purpose mentioned in this section, is to substitute r the established procedure by which land is acquired compulsorily for other public quasi public purposes, viz.: an Act of Parliament or a Provisional Order confirmed y Act of Parliament, another method which will undoubtedly be cheaper where the pposition to the taking of the land is not active, and which will at the same time ve opportunity to persons objecting to the taking of the land of putting their bjections before competent tribunals, and carrying their opposition as far as is stifiable for the protection of their interests.

Note to Section 9.

(8) Sections two hundred and ninety-three to two hundred and ninety-six, and sub-sections (1) and (2) of section two hundred and ninety-seven of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall apply to a local nquiry held by the Local Government Board for the purposes of this ection, as if those sections and sub-sections were herein re-enacted, nd in terms made applicable to such inquiry.

See these sections, ante, pp. 627—630.

(9) The Order shall be carried into effect, when made on the petition f a district council, by that council, and in any other case by the county ouncil.

Italicised words repealed by the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1907.

(10) Any order made under this section for the purpose of the urchase of land otherwise than by agreement shall incorporate he Lands Clauses Acts and sections seventy-seven to eighty-five of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, with the necessary adapta- ions, but any question of disputed compensation shall be dealt with in he manner provided by section three of the Allotments Act, 1887, and rovisoes (a), (b), and (c) of sub-section (4) of that section are incor- orated with this section and shall apply accordingly: Provided that n determining the amount of disputed compensation, the arbitrator shall ot make any additional allowance in respect of the purchase being ompulsory.

The Lands Clauses Acts are set out in App. I., post, Vol. II.

Sections 77—85 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, relate to the ghts of owners of mines and minerals lying under or near a railway. These pro- isions are to be incorporated in orders made by a county council or of the M. of H. nder this section, "with the necessary adaptations."

As to the incorporated provisions of the Allotments Act, 1887, see note to sub-s. (13), ifra. The modification of those provisions by the proviso to this sub-section is of reat practical importance. See also the Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Com- ensation) Act, 1919.

(11) At any inquiry or arbitration held under this section the person r persons holding the inquiry or arbitration shall hear any authorities r parties interested by themselves or their agents, and shall hear itnesses, but shall not, except in such cases as may be prescribed, ear counsel or expert witnesses.

"Prescribed" means prescribed by Order of the L. G. B. (now the Ministry of ealth) (s. 75, post, p. 987).

Section 9.

(12) The person or persons holding a public inquiry for the purpose of this section on behalf of a county council shall have the same power as an inspector or inspectors of the Local Government Board when holding a local inquiry; and section two hundred and ninety-four of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall apply to the costs of inquiries held by the county council for the purpose of this section as if the county council were substituted for the Local Government Board.

By the next sub-section the Allotments Act, 1890, s. 3, is incorporated with this section as to the taking of land, and is to apply with the "prescribed adaptations." That section provides that "an inquiry under this Act or the principal Act shall be held by such one or more members of the standing committee or such officer of the county council or other person as the standing committee may appoint to hold the same." Therefore the person or persons holding a public inquiry on behalf of the county council for the purpose of this section will be appointed by the standing committee of the county council, and will have the powers of inspectors of the Ministry of Health. As to these powers, see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 296, ante, p. 623.

As to the power to award costs of a person holding an inquiry under a statute which is silent as to costs, see Liddall v. Ballingry Parish Council, [1908] S. C. 1088 and cases there cited.

(13) Sub-section (2) of section two, if the land is taken for allotments and whether it is or is not so taken, sub-sections (5), (6), (7), and (8) of section three of the Allotments Act, 1887, and section eleven of that Act, and section three of the Allotments Act, 1890, are incorporated with this section, and shall, with the prescribed adaptations, apply accordingly.

Italicised words repealed by the Small Holdings Allotments Act, 1907.

The General Order of January 7th, 1922, provides that for the purposes of s. 9 of the Act the several provisions of the Allotments Acts, 1887 and 1890 (a), referred to in sub-s. (13) of s. 9 aforesaid, and of any enactments repealing and re-enacting the same with or without modification, shall be adapted in the form and manner set forth in the Schedule to this Order, and shall apply accordingly.

Footpaths and roads.

13.—(1) The consent of the parish council and of the district counc shall be required for the stopping, in whole or in part, or diversion, of public right of way within a rural parish (a), and the consent of th parish council shall be required for a declaration that a highway in rural parish is unnecessary for public use and not repairable at the publi expense (b), and the parish council shall give public notice of a resolutio to give any such consent, and the resolution shall not operate—

(a) Unless it is confirmed by the parish council at a meeting held nc less than two months after the public notice is given; nor

(b) If a parish meeting held before the confirmation resolve that th consent ought not to be given.

Forms for use under this sub-section will be found in the Encyclopædia of Form and Precedents, Vol. VI., at pp. 370 et seq.

In considering this section and the notes thereto, it should be borne in mi that the word "highways" in the Highway Acts includes "roads, bridges (not bei county bridges), carriageways, cartways, horseways, bridleways, footways, caus ways, churchways and pavements" (Highway Act, 1835, s. 5); and further th the powers and duties of the "vestry" of a parish are now transferred to the distri council, who are also the "surveyor" of highways for any parish (P. H. A., 187 s. 144, p. 253, ante, and s. 25 (1) of this Act, p. 933, post). As to who former constituted the "vestry" for these purposes, see Wright v. Frant Overseers (186 27 J. P. 645; 4 B. & S. 118.

Diversion and stopping up.

(a) Under the Highway Act, 1835, ss. 84—92, as amended by the provisions ju referred to, if a district (or borough) council deem it expedient that a highwa should be stopped up or diverted, they must request two justices to view the sam "Any other party" who desires to stop up or divert a highway must submit h proposal to the council; if they do not agree to the proposal, there is an end of th matter; if they do agree, they must request two justices to view, as before. If upo such view it appears to the justices that the way may be diverted with advantag or is unnecessary, they must direct the council's officer to fix notices at the place a by the side of each end of the highway from whence it is proposed to be diverted stopped up, and to advertise the same notice in a local newspaper for four successiv weeks, and to fix the like notice upon the church doors of every parish in which th highway lies for four successive Sundays. As to what notices are sufficient, s R. v. Surrey JJ. (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 466; R. v. Surrey JJ., [1892] 1 Q. B. 86 56 J. P. 695; R. v. Kent JJ., [1905] 1 K. B. 378; 69 J. P. 69; R. v. Derby JJ [1917] 2 K. B. 802; 81 J. P. 292. Upon proof that all the requirements of th Act have been complied with, the justices grant their certificate, stating the reasons for thinking that the highway should be diverted or is unnecessary, an such certificate is enrolled at quarter sessions. As to the matters to be stat in a justices' certificate, see R. v. Wallace (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 641; 43 J. P. 49 and as to what must be shown on the plan delivered to the justices certifyin see R. v. Surrey JJ., [1908] 1 K. B. 374; 72 J. P. 53. Any person thinkin himself aggrieved by the proposed diversion or stopping up of the highway may appeal to quarter sessions by giving to the council fourteen days' notice in writing of such appeal (s. 88; and 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45; see R. v. Maule (1871), 41 L. J. M. C. 7; 35 J. P. 596); and upon such appeal a jury at sessions will determine whether the proposed diversion will be more commodious or whether the highway is unnecessary, and whether the appellant would be aggrieved by the diversion or stopping up (as to the effect of findings of the jury, see Walker v. York Corporation, [1906] 1 K. B. 724; 70 J. P. 270), and if the appeal is upon the ground of defects in the certificate of the justices, the court will decide as to its sufficiency (R. v. Worcestershire JJ. (1854), 23 L. J. M. C. 113; 3 El. & Bl. 447). If there is no appeal, or if the appeal fails, quarter sessions will make an order for the diversion or stopping up of the way. If the appeal succeeds, no such order will be made. For a fuller discussion of this subject and the numerous other decisions with reference thereto, see Pratt on Highways.

Discontinuance of repair.

(b) The proceedings relating to a declaration that a highway is unnecessary for public use and not repairable at the public expense will be found in the Highway Act, 1864, s. 21, and the Highways and Locomotives Amendment Act, 1878, s. 24.

Under the Act of 1864 such proceedings can only be taken by an authority which is the successor of a highway board. The proceedings are commenced by a request to two justices to view the highway, and thereupon the proceedings are to go on in like manner as proceedings under the Highway Act, 1835, for the stopping up or diversion of a highway with the necessary variations.

Under the Act of 1878 the proceedings can be taken by any authority liable to keep the highway in question in repair, and differ from those which may be taken under the Act of 1864. The authority make an application to the court of summary jurisdiction of the petty sessional division in which any parish in which the highway lies is situate that two justices of the court shall view the highway. If on such view the court is of opinion that the application should be proceeded with, they must appoint a time and place for hearing objections to the application, such appointment to be made by a month's public notice, and also by a month's notice to the owners and occupiers of all lands abutting upon the highway in question. The applicant authority must also give public notice of the appointed time and place by advertisement in a local newspaper once in each of the four weeks preceding the hearing, and by causing a copy of such notice to be affixed fourteen days before the hearing to the doors of every church and chapel in the parish in which the highway is situate, or in a conspicuous position near the highway, and the application cannot be entertained by the court unless the giving of this public notice is proved to its satisfaction. On the day and at the place appointed the court must hear any objections, and must either dismiss the application or make an order declaring the highway unnecessary for public use and that it ought not to be repaired at the public expense. If such an order is made the expenses of repairing the highway will cease to be defrayed out of any public rate. An appeal lies from such an order to quarter sessions. Under both Acts (1864 and 1878) a court of quarter sessions, upon the application of any person interested in the maintenance of the highway in respect of which such an order has been made and upon certain evidence, may direct that the liability to repair such highway at the public expense shall be revived.

(2) A parish council may, subject to the provisions of this Act with respect to restrictions on expenditure, undertake the repair and maintenance of all or any of the public footpaths within their parish, not being footpaths at the side of a public road, but this power shall not nor shall the exercise thereof relieve any other authority or person from any liability with respect to such repair or maintenance.

Maintenance of footpaths.

Public footpaths which are highways repairable by the inhabitants at large, are, of course, under the control of the highway authority of the place in which they are situate. That authority (which is now the district council) remain liable for the repair and maintenance of such of the footpaths mentioned in the text as are repairable by the inhabitants at large, even where a parish council has undertaken to repair and maintain them. Footpaths at the side of a public road, even if such road is not repairable by the inhabitants at large, are exempted from the power here given to a parish council.

The powers of this sub-section are readily granted by the M. of H. to any urban district council desiring them. See notes to s. 33.

It will be observed that a parish council (and an urban district council obtaining an order under s. 33) derive no power from this sub-section to compel a landowner to repair a footpath traversing his land. Neither can the council prevent a farmer from periodically ploughing up a footpath which has ordinarily been ploughed up. Cf. Mercer v. Woodgate (1869), L. R. 5 Q. B. 26; 33 J. P. 759; Arnold v. Holbrook (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 96; 37 J. P. 229. But see Dennis & Son, Ltd. v. Good (1919), 88 L. J. K. B. 388; 83 J. P. 110.

As regards stiles on footpaths the L. G. B. have expressed the opinion that, as a general rule, when an existing stile on a public footpath in a rural parish having a parish council is in so defective a state as to render it necessary for the enjoyment by the public of their right of using the path that such stile should be repaired, the parish council can execute the repairs. The same holds good with regard to gates, and bridges forming part of footpaths. As to the dedication of a highway subject to gates for farm purposes, see Att.-Gen. v. Meyrick (1915), 79 J. P. 515.

On the question of the power of a parish council to substitute gates for stiles the Board have expressed themselves favourably as to a parish council's powers, provided, however, that the consent of the landowner is obtained to any consequent enlargement of the rights of the public.

A parish council has no power to expend money for the repair of any part of a footpath situate outside the parish. The council can, however, combine with the parish council in which the part of the footpath requiring repair is situate for the purpose of keeping the whole length of footpath in order, and a joint committee may be appointed under s. 57 of the L. G. A., 1894, for the purpose of exercising the powers of a parish council under s. 13 (2) in respect of the footpath.

Public property and charities.

14.—(1) Where trustees hold any property for the purposes of a public recreation ground or of public meetings, or of allotments, whether under Inclosure Acts or otherwise, for the benefit of the inhabitants of a rural parish, or any of them, or for any public purpose connected with a rural parish, except for an ecclesiastical charity, they may, with the approval of the Charity Commissioners, transfer the property to the parish council of the parish, or to persons appointed by that council, and the parish council, if they accept the transfer, or their appointees, shall hold the property on the trusts and subject to the conditions on which the trustees held the same.

The powers hereby conferred upon a parish council may be conferred upon an urban authority by order under s. 33, post, p. 943. As to what is an ecclesiastical charity, see s. 75, post, at p. 986.

(2) Where overseers of a rural parish as such are, either alone or jointly with any other persons, trustees of any parochial charity, such number of the councillors of the parish or other persons, not exceeding the number of the overseer trustees, as the council may appoint, shall be trustees in their place, and, when the charity is not an ecclesiastical charity, this enactment shall apply as if the churchwardens as such were specified therein as well as the overseers.

The expression "parochial charity" is defined by s. 75, post, p. 986, to mean "a charity the benefits of which are or the separate distribution of the benefits of which is confined to inhabitants of a single parish, or of a single ancient ecclesiastical parish divided into two or more parishes, or of not more than five neighbouring parishes." The section also defines "ecclesiastical charity."

The effect of the last part of this sub-section is that the parish council can appoint trustees in the place of the churchwardens where they, whether joined with the overseers or not, are made trustees by the instrument creating a non-ecclesiastical charity (Re Ross's Charity, [1899] 1 Ch. 21 ; 63 J. P. 52).

The powers of a parish council under this sub-section may be conferred on an urban authority under s. 33, post, p. 943.

(3) Where the governing body of a parochial charity other than an ecclesiastical charity does not include any persons elected by the ratepayers or parochial electors or inhabitants of the parish, or appointed by the parish council or parish meeting, the parish council may appoint additional members of that governing body not exceeding the number allowed by the Charity Commissioners in each case ; and if the management of any such charity is vested in a sole trustee, the number of trustees may, with the approval of the Charity Commissioners, be increased to three, one of whom may be nominated by such sole trustee and one by the parish council or parish meeting. Nothing in this subsection shall prejudicially affect the power or authority of the Charity Commissioners, under any of the Acts relating to charities, to settle or alter schemes for the better administration of any charity.

The powers of a parish council under this sub-section may be conferred on an urban authority under s. 33, post, p. 943.

(4) Where the vestry of a rural parish are entitled, under the trusts of a charity other than an ecclesiastical charity, to appoint any trustees or beneficiaries of the charity, the appointment shall be made by the parish council of the parish, or in the case of beneficiaries, by persons appointed by the parish council.

(5) The draft of every scheme relating to a charity, not being an ecclesiastical charity, which affects a rural parish, shall, on or before the publication of the notice of the proposal to make an order for such scheme in accordance with section six of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1860, be communicated to the council of the parish, and where there is no parish council to the chairman of the parish meeting, and, in the case of a council, the council may, subject to the provisions of this Act with respect to restrictions on expenditure, and to the consent of the parish meeting, either support or oppose the scheme, and shall for that purpose have the same right as any inhabitants of a place directly affected by the scheme.

As to the meaning of this sub-section, see Re Berkhamstead Grammar School, [1908] 2 Ch. 25 ; 72 J. P. 273.

(6) The accounts of all parochial charities, not being ecclesiastical charities, shall annually be laid before the parish meeting of any parish affected thereby, and the Charitable Trusts Amendment Act, 1855, shall apply with the substitution in section forty-four of the parish meeting for the vestry, and of the chairman of the parish meeting for the churchwardens, and the names of the beneficiaries of dole charities shall be published annually in such form as the parish council, or where there is no parish council the parish meeting, think fit.

(7) The term of office of a trustee appointed under this section shall be four years, but of the trustees first appointed as aforesaid one-half.

Section 14.

as nearly as may be, to be determined by lot, shall go out of office at the end of two years from the date of their appointment, but shall be eligible for re-appointment.

(8) The provisions of this section with respect to the appointment of trustees, except so far as the appointment is transferred from the vestry, shall not apply to any charity until the expiration of forty years from the date of the foundation thereof, or, in the case of a charity founded before the passing of this Act by a donor or by several donors any one of whom is living at the passing of this Act, until the expiration of forty years from the passing of this Act, unless with the consent of the surviving donor or donors.

(9) Whilst a person is trustee of a parochial charity he shall not, nor shall his wife or any of his children, receive any benefit from the charity.

Delegated powers of parish councils.

15. A rural district council may delegate to a parish council any power which may be delegated to a parochial committee under the Public Health Acts, and thereupon those Acts shall apply as if the parish council were a parochial committee, and where such district council appoint a parochial committee consisting partly of members of the district council and partly of other persons, those other persons shall, where there is a parish council, be or be selected from the members of the parish council.

See the P. H. A., 1875, s. 202, ante, p. 467, which enables a rural authority to appoint a "parochial committee" for certain purposes.

As to committees and joint committees of parish and district councils, see post, ss. 56, 57, pp. 970, 971.

Complaint by parish council of default of district council.

16.—(1) Where a parish council resolve that a rural district council ought to have provided the parish with sufficient sewers, or to have maintained existing sewers, or to have provided the parish with a supply of water in cases where danger arises to the health of the inhabitants from the insufficiency or unwholesomeness of the existing supply of water, and a proper supply can be got at a reasonable cost, or to have enforced with regard to the parish any provisions of the Public Health Acts which it is their duty (a) to enforce, and have failed so to do (b), or that they have failed to maintain and repair any highway in a good and substantial manner (c), the parish council may complain to the county council, and the county council, if satisfied after due inquiry that the district council have so failed as respects the subject-matter of the complaint, may resolve that the duties and powers of the district council for the purpose of the matter complained of shall be transferred to the county council, and they shall be transferred accordingly.

(a) As to the meaning of this word, see London C. C. v. Bermondsey Borough Council, [1915] 3 K. B. 305.

(b) Up to this point the section follows the words of the P. H. A., 1875, s. 299, ante, p. 632. See also the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1885, s. 7, ante, p. 731. Under the present Act the complaint is to the county council, not to the Ministry of Health.

(c) This was a new provision. It affords a method of enforcing the duty of repairing a highway in addition to that given by the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, s. 10, in App. I., post, Vol. II. On a complaint under this section, the county council will apparently have to decide whether the district council are liable to repair if the liability is disputed.

Note to Section 16.

It would appear that in order to effect a "due inquiry," notice must be given to the district council of the complaint, and such council must be afforded an opportunity of explaining why they have not taken action, and that an order made without observing these requirements is not enforceable against the district council (R. v Huntingdonshire C. C. (1902), C. C. Times Supp. 44).

Reference might be made to R. v. West Sussex C. C. (1921), 85 J. P. 162, a case decided in connection with the hearing of a similar complaint under s. 10 of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878.

Section 63 (2), post, p. 979, makes provision for the mode of making such complaints if a district is situate in more than one county.

(2) Upon any complaint under this section the county council may, instead of resolving that the duties and powers of the rural district council be transferred to them, make such an order as is mentioned in section two hundred and ninety-nine of the Public Health Act, 1875, and may appoint a person to perform the duty mentioned in the order, and upon such appointment sections two hundred and ninety-nine to three hundred and two of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall apply with the substitution of the county council for the Local Government Board.

See the sections above referred to, ante, pp. 632—637. It will be seen that under s. 299 complaint of a default by a district council as to matters specified in that section may be made to the Ministry of Health by any person. The remedy under that section is in no way affected by the above two sub-sections. But a further remedy is given; a parish council may make a complaint to the county council as to the same matters and also as to a default in maintaining and repairing a highway; and by s. 19 (8), in a parish where there is no parish council, the same power of making a complaint is conferred upon the parish meeting. Where such a complaint has been made to a county council, that body may act in one of two ways: (i) they may, under sub-s. (1), resolve to exercise the powers of the district council in respect of the matter of the complaint. In this case the provisions of s. 63, post, p. 978, will apply; notice of the resolution of the county council is to be sent to the district council and to the Ministry of Health; the county council may raise a loan for the purpose of the powers transferred, and their expenses are to be a debt from the district council to the county council; or (ii) they may, instead of taking over the duties and powers of the defaulting district council, take one of the courses open to, but not usually adopted by, the Ministry of Health under s. 299 for securing the execution of the works, and in this case they are to have the powers of the L. G. B. under ss. 299—302.

See s. 63 (2), post, p. 979, as to the mode of making complaints in the case of a rural district situate in more than one county.

(3) Where a rural district council have determined to adopt plans for the sewerage or water supply of any contributory place within the district, they shall give notice thereof to the parish council of any parish for which the works are to be provided before any contract is entered into by them for the execution of the works.

The powers of a district council as to sewerage and water supply are contained in the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 13—34 and 51—70, ante, pp. 45—96, 119—149. As to the expression "contributory place" see ibid., s. 229, ante, p. 510, and notes thereto.

It may be presumed that where a notice of a plan for sewerage or water supply has been given to a parish council under this clause, that council will have power to state objections to those plans, and, generally, to make representations to the district council regarding them. Nothing is said as to what is to be the effect of a

Note to Section 16. failure to give the notice. And in any case it is rather late to receive notice just before a contract is signed and possibly after the Ministry of Health have passed the scheme.

Parish officers and parish documents.

17. . . .

(5) When a parish council act as a parochial committee by delegation from the district council they shall have the services of the clerk of the district council, unless the district council otherwise direct.

As to a parish council acting as a parochial committee by delegation from the district council, see ante, s. 15, and the P. H. A., 1875, s. 202, p. 467, ante.

(8) The custody of the registers of baptisms, marriages, and burials, and of all other books and documents containing entries wholly or partly relating to the affairs of the Church or to ecclesiastical charities, except documents directed by law to be kept with the public books, writings, and papers of the parish, shall remain as provided by the existing law unaffected by this Act. All other public books, writings, and papers of the parish, and all documents directed by law to be kept therewith, shall either remain in their existing custody, or be deposited in such custody as the parish council may direct. The incumbent and churchwardens on the one part, and the parish council on the other, shall have reasonable access to all such books, documents, writings, and papers, as are referred to in this sub-section, and any difference as to custody or access shall be determined by the county council.

The powers of a parish council under this sub-section may be conferred on an urban authority under s. 33, post, p. 943.

A parish council passed a resolution that documents relating to tithes in the possession of the incumbent should be placed in their custody, and such resolution was confirmed by an order of the county council. It was held that justices had power under the Tithe Act, 1860, s. 28, to make an order for the removal of such documents from the custody of the incumbent to that of the parish council (Lewis v. Poole, [1898] 1 Q. B. 164 ; 61 J. P. 776). An order of the county council as to the custody of the tithe apportionment map, which forms a part of the apportionment, does not bind the justices, on an application under s. 28 of the Tithe Act, 1860, to make the same order as to the custody of the map, per DARLING, J., on the ground that an order of the county council dealing with only a part of the tithe apportionment is invalid ; and per AVORY and SHEARMAN, JJ., on the ground that s. 28 of the Act of 1860 has not been impliedly repealed by s. 17 (8) and (9) of the Act of 1894, but the county council and the justices have concurrent jurisdiction, though due weight should be attached by the justices to any prior order made by the county council (Fox v. Pett, [1918] 2 K. B. 196 ; 82 J. P. 252).

* * * * * *

(9) Every county council shall from time to time inquire into the manner in which the public books, writings, papers and documents under the control of the parish council or parish meeting are kept with a view to the proper preservation thereof and shall make such orders as they think necessary for such preservation and those orders shall be complied with by the parish council or parish meeting.

Provisions as to small parishes.

19. In a rural parish not having a separate parish council, the following provisions shall, as from the appointed day, but subject to provisions made by a grouping order, if the parish is grouped with some other parish or parishes, have effect : Section 19.

. . . . . .

(8) The provisions of this Act with respect to the stopping or diversion of a public right of way, or the declaring of a highway to be unnecessary and not repairable at the public expense, and with respect to a complaint to a county council of a default by a district council, shall apply, with the substitution of the parish meeting for the parish council.

See s. 26 (4), post, p. 938.

PART II.

GUARDIANS AND DISTRICT COUNCILS.

Election and qualification of guardians.

20. As from the appointed day the following provisions shall apply to boards of guardians :

(1) There shall be no ex officio or nominated guardians :

(2) A person shall not be qualified to be elected or to be a guardian for a poor law union unless he is a parochial elector (a) of some parish within the union, or has during the whole of the twelve months preceding the election resided (b) in the union or in the case of a guardian for a parish wholly or partly situate within the area of a borough, whether a county borough or not (c), is qualified to be elected a councillor for that borough (d), and no person shall be disqualified by sex or marriage for being elected or being a guardian (e). So much of any enactment, whether in a public general or local and personal Act, as relates to the qualification of a guardian shall be repealed (f) :

Before this Act the guardians for the rural parishes in a union were the rural sanitary authority for the rural sanitary district of the union (see P. H. A., 1875, s. 9). Now rural district councillors are the guardians for the parishes they represent, but the two bodies are entirely distinct. It is necessary, however, to print this section, for by s. 24 (4), post, p. 931, the provisions of the Act with respect to the qualification, election, term of office, and retirement of guardians apply to the district councillors of a rural district.

(a) The Representation of the People Act, 1918, 7 & 8 Geo. 5, c. 64, s. 42, provides that the parliamentary and the local government franchises enacted by that Act shall take the place of all parliamentary, and as far as respects local government elections within the meaning of the Act, of all local government franchises existing at the time of the passing of the Act, and that the provisions of the Sixth Schedule to the Act with respect to the adaptation of Acts shall have effect for the purpose of adapting the law to the provisions of the Act. The Sixth Schedule provides by clause 2 that a reference to local government electors registered under the Act shall, so far as local government elections and the right to vote at any such elections are concerned, be substituted for any reference in any other Act to local government electors, county electors, burgesses, parochial electors or other persons entitled to vote at a local government election, by whatever name called, and local government electors so registered shall for all purposes whether statutory or not, be in the same position as any such local government electors, county electors, burgesses, parochial electors or persons. Clause 3 of the same schedule provides that a reference to the register kept in pursuance of that Act shall, so far as it relates to the local government register of electors, be substituted for the local government register of electors, the county register, the register of parochial electors, and for the register of persons entitled to vote at a local government election, by whatever name called. Clause 7 enables the Ministry of Health to make such further adaptations in the provisions of any Act (including any local act and any Act to conform a provisional order and any scheme under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, as amended by any subsequent Act), as may seem to them necessary to make those provisions conform with the provisions of that Act, and that any order as made shall operate as if enacted in that Act. It should be added that by s. 41 of the Act it is provided that the expression "local government area" means the area for which any county council, municipal borough council, district council, board of guardians, parish council, or any other body elected at the time of the passing of the Act by persons on the local government register or on the register of parochial electors is elected: and that the expression "local government election" means an election for any such council, board, or body.

The effect of these provisions stated shortly is that a parochial elector is a person whose name is on the local government register prepared under the Act of 1918.

(b) It has been said that the meaning of the word "residence" must be determined with reference to the purpose of the statute in which it is used (Blackwell v. England (1858), 27 L. J. Q. B. 124). In the text it appears to mean a personal dwelling within the union, as distinguished from the mere occupation of property. See R. v. Bredwardine, [1920] 1 K. B. 47; 83 J. P. 269. For some purposes a person may have more than one residence; thus he may have houses in different places, each of which may be called his residence (Walcot v. Boyfield (1854), 18 Jur. 570; 1 Kay, 534); and for purposes of this Act, a man can reside in more than one place (Stanford v. Williams (1899), 80 L. T. 490; 15 T. L. R. 316).

Further, the residence must be during the whole of the twelve months preceding the election. This provision resembles that in the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 9 (now repealed), and as but for the passing of the 48 & 49 Vict. c. 9 the letting of a house furnished for any part of the twelve months disqualified a person from being a burgess, so any similar letting would disqualify a person from being elected or being a guardian, if his only qualification were residence. But a mere temporary absence with intention to return, and a right to return at any time, does not defeat a qualification by residence (Stanford v. Williams, supra).

By the Members of Local Authorities Relief Act, 1900, an officer or soldier of the auxiliary forces or of the reserve forces on active service, or on service beyond the seas, is not by reason only of his absence on that service disqualified as a member of any district council. See that Act, post, p. 1010.

(c) The provisions of this Act relating to guardians apply to county boroughs (see s. 30, post, p. 943).

(d) The qualification of the councillor of a borough depends upon the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 11 (as amended by the Representation of the People Act, 1918), and s. 12; the County and Borough Councils (Qualification) Act, 1914, and the Representation of the People Act, 1918, s. 10. See note (e), infra.

Referring to this sub-section the L. G. B. expressed the following opinion:—"There are three alternative qualifications for the office of guardian mentioned in s. 20 (2) of the Act. A person will be qualified if—(1) he is a parochial elector of some parish within the poor law union, or (2) he has during the whole of the twelve months preceding the election resided in the union, or (3) in the case of a guardian for a parish wholly or partly situate within the area of a borough, he is qualified to be elected a councillor of that borough. Clergymen and ministers of a dissenting congregation could not, in view of s. 12 (1) of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, possess the last of these qualifications, but they might be elected as guardians if they possessed either of the other qualifications above mentioned."

It should be added here that in addition to the qualification mentioned in the text, there must now be added that under the Representation of the People Act,

Note to Section 20.

1918, 7 & 8 Geo. 5, c. 64, s. 10, which provides that a person shall in addition to and without prejudice to any other qualification, be qualified to be elected a member of the local government authority for any local government electoral area if he is the owner of property held by freehold, copyhold, leasehold, or any other tenure within the area of that authority.

(e) It is now provided by the Sex Disqualification (Removal) Act, 1919, 9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 71, that a person shall not be disqualified by sex or marriage from the exercise of any public function or from being appointed to or holding any civil or judicial office or post.

(f) The 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 38, provided that the Poor Law Commissioners (afterwards superseded by the Poor Law Board, and eventually by the Ministry of Health) should determine the number of the guardians to be elected in each union, and should also fix the qualification without which no person should be eligible as such guardian, such qualification to consist in being rated to the poor rate of some parish or parishes in the union, but so as not to require a qualification exceeding the annual rateable value of £40, and should also determine the number of guardians to be elected for any one or more of such parishes, having due regard to the circumstances of each such parish, provided always that one or more guardians should be elected for each parish. Amounts were accordingly fixed for the qualification of guardians in the several unions in England and Wales. Still later an Order of the L. G. B. (see 56 J. P. 778) reduced the qualification of guardians in all unions to a uniform rateable value of £5 ; but even that qualification is now abolished, and any person is qualified to be a guardian without regard to whether he is rated or possesses property in the union or elsewhere.

For disqualifications for the office of guardian, see s. 46, post, p. 952.

(3) The parochial electors of a parish (a) shall be the electors of the guardians for the parish, and, if the parish is divided into wards for the election of guardians (b), the electors of the guardians for each ward shall be such of the parochial electors as are registered in respect of qualifications within the ward :

(a) See note (a) to the preceding sub-section.

(b) Under s. 60 (post, p. 975) county councils have power to divide parishes into wards for the election of guardians and rural district councillors.

(4) Each elector may give one vote and no more for each of any number of persons not exceeding the number to be elected :

This provision is applied to the election of rural district councillors by s. 24 (4), post, p. 931.

(5) The election shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, be conducted according to rules framed under this Act by the Local Government Board :

This provision is also applied to the election of rural district councillors by s. 24 (4), post, p. 931. For the rules now in force, see App. II., post, Vol. II. Note that the Rules hitherto in force have been amended by the order referred to in the note to s. 23 (5), post, p. 929.

But for the Local Government Board must now be read the Secretary of State. See the Ministry of Health Registration and Elections Transfer of Powers Order, 1921.

(6) The term of office of a guardian shall be three years, and one third, as nearly as may be, of every board of guardians shall go out of office on the fifteenth day of April in each year, and their places shall be filled by the newly elected guardians. Provided as follows :

Section 20.

(a) Where the county council on the application of the board of guardians of any union in their county consider that it would be expedient to provide for the simultaneous retirement of the whole of the board of guardians for the union, they may direct that the members of the board of guardians for that union shall retire together on the fifteenth day of April in every third year, and such order shall have full effect, and where a union is in more than one county, an order may be made by a joint committee of the councils of those counties :

(b) Where at the passing of this Act the whole of the guardians of any union, in pursuance of an order of the Local Government Board, retire together at the end of every third year, they shall continue so to retire unless, the county council, or a joint committee of the county councils, on the application of the board of guardians or of any district council of a district wholly or partially within the union, otherwise direct :

An order for simultaneous retirement can only be made on the application of the board of guardians or of the rural district council as the case may be. An application (under the District Councillors and Guardians (Term of Office) Act, 1900, post, p. 1009) for the revocation of such an order may come either from the guardians or from the district council of a district within the union.

(7) A board of guardians may elect a chairman or vice-chairman or both, and not more than two other persons, from outside their own body, but from persons qualified to be guardians of the union, and any person so elected shall be an additional guardian and member of the board. Provided that on the first election, if a sufficient number of persons who have been ex officio or nominated guardians of the union, and have actually served as such, are willing to serve, the additional members shall be elected from among those persons.

This does not apply to a rural district council save as regards the qualification of the chairman (see s. 24 (4), post, p 931). As to the vice-chairman of a rural district council, see s. 59 (2), post, p. 974.

The L. G. B. in reply to a question whether rural district councils can elect members from outside their own body in similar manner as guardians are empowered to do by s. 20 (7), stated that they had no authority to determine the question, but that it appeared to them, in view of ss. 59 (1) and 24 (4), that such a council can elect a chairman from outside their own body, but that they are not empowered to so elect either a vice-chairman or any other members.

Names of county districts and district councils.

21. As from the appointed day,—

(1) Urban sanitary authorities shall be called urban district councils, and their districts shall be called urban districts ; but nothing in this section shall alter the style or title of the corporation or council of a borough :

Section 75, post, p. 985, incorporates the L. G. A., 1888, s. 100, ante, p. 783, which defines an urban authority. By the P. H. A., 1875, s. 6, ante, p. 37, urban sanitary districts were of three kinds : 1st, Municipal boroughs ; 2nd, Improvement Act districts ; and 3rd, Local Government districts. In these the urban sanitary authorities were respectively the borough council, the improvement commissioners, and the local board. The title of the borough and its council is not to be altered, but Improvement Act districts and local government districts are now called urban districts, and the urban sanitary authorities over these are now called urban district councils.

Note to Section 21.

(2) For every rural sanitary district there shall be a rural district council whose district shall be called a rural district :

A rural sanitary district, prior to this Act, consisted of the area of a poor law union, exclusive of such parts thereof as were included in an urban district. Where a rural district formerly extended into two administrative counties, the part in each county is now in most cases a separate rural district : see s. 24 (5), post, p. 932.

(3) In this and every other Act of Parliament, unless the context otherwise requires, the expression " district council " shall include the council of every urban district, whether a borough or not, and of every rural district, and the expression " county district " shall include every urban and rural district whether a borough or not.

Apparently (see s. 35, post, p. 947) this provision does not apply to a county borough. See further, the first note to the P. H. A., 1907, s. 13, post, p. 1025.

22. The chairman of a district council unless a woman or personally disqualified by any Act shall be by virtue of his office justice of the peace for the county in which the district is situate, but before acting as such justice he shall, if he has not already done so, take the oaths required by law to be taken by a justice of the peace other than the oath respecting the qualification by estate.

Chairman of council to be justice.

The words in italics were repealed by the Sex Disqualification (Removal) Act, 1919, 9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 71. A man may be personally disqualified to be a justice of the peace if he is sheriff (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55, s. 17). So, if he is a bankrupt, unless the adjudication against him is annulled, or he obtains his discharge with a certificate that his bankruptcy was caused by misfortune ; but this disqualification is not to exceed a period of five years from the date of the order of discharge (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 32 ; 53 & 54 Vict. c. 71, s. 9) ; it did not apply to a person adjudged bankrupt before the passing of the 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52 (In re Pulborough School Board Election, Bourke v. Nutt, [1894] 1 Q. B. 725 ; 58 J. P. 572). See also as to removal from the commission for corrupt practices, 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, s. 38. Practising solicitors were formerly disqualified for being justices of any county in which they practised (34 Vict. c. 18). This disqualification was removed by the Justices of the Peace Act, 1906, which repealed the last-mentioned Act, and provided (s. 3) that " a solicitor, if otherwise qualified, may be appointed a justice of the peace for any county, but it shall not be lawful for any solicitor being a justice, or any partner of his, to practise directly or indirectly before the justices for that county or any borough within the county." The same Act abolished the qualification by estate previously required in the case of a justice of the peace for any county. If a clerk to justices be appointed chairman of a district council and qualifies as a justice, he will by so doing vacate his office as clerk to the justices (R. v. Douglas, [1898] 1 Q. B. 560 ; 62 J. P. 277) ; the same result would probably follow even if he did not qualify (see 70 J. P. N., p. 493).

The oaths to be taken by a justice are the oath of allegiance and the judicial oath (31 & 32 Vict. c. 72, s. 6). They are usually taken at quarter sessions (34 & 35 Vict. c. 48). In the case of ex officio justices the oaths may be, and frequently are, taken before two or more justices in petty sessions in pursuance of a direction issued from the Home Office on February 20th, 1895 (see 59 J. P. 185). As to the power to affirm instead of taking the oath, see 31 & 32 Vict. c. 72, s. 11 ; 51 & 52 Vict. c. 46, s. 1.

By 59 & 60 Vict. c. 22, post, p. 1007, a chairman of a district council who has been re-elected to that office on the expiration or other determination of a previous term of office may continue to act as a justice of the peace without again taking the oaths mentioned in the text. This Act seems applicable, however, only where the two terms of office are consecutive without any interval during which some other person has been elected to and held the office.

As to fees payable by justices on qualification, see 71 J. P. N. 519; 77 J. P. N. 14. No sum can legally be recovered for such fees unless authorised by the table of fees payable to the clerk of the peace (Maule v. White (1896), 60 J. P. 567; 40 Sol. J. 744).

The Lord Chancellor had formerly no power to remove justices virtute officii under this section during their term of office, but now by the Justices of the Peace Act, 1906, s. 4, "any person who is a justice of the peace by virtue only of holding or having held any office may be excluded from the exercise of his functions as such justice by the same authority by which other justices can be removed from the commission of the peace."

The provision in the text is supplemental to that contained in the L. G. A., 1888, s. 2 (5), which provides that the chairman of a county council shall be, by virtue of his office, justice of the peace for the county. And in the case of the mayor of a borough it is provided by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 155, that he shall, by virtue of his office, be a justice of the peace for the borough, and shall, unless disqualified to be mayor, continue to be such justice during the year next after he ceases to be mayor. But while the mayor of a borough is a justice only for the borough, the text provides that the chairman of a district council, urban or rural, shall be a justice of the peace for the county. The mayor of a borough, other than a county borough, is thus made a county justice while he is mayor. For the year succeeding his mayoralty he will be a justice for the borough, but not for the county, and the chairman of every other district council is, while chairman, a county justice.

Upon the question whether a chairman of an urban district council is entitled to act as a magistrate between April 15th and the election of his successor, the L. G. B. expressed the view that if his term of office does not expire on April 15th, and he continues in office as councillor without re-election, he can act as a magistrate up to the time of the appointment of his successor.

A chair*woman* of a board of guardians was not formerly a justice by virtue of her office. (But see now 9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 71.) And a woman has been empowered by the Lord Chancellor under the Lunacy Act, 1891, s. 25, to sign "reception" orders for pauper lunatics as effectually as if she were a justice (77 J. P. N. 272).

Constitution of district councils in urban districts not being boroughs.

23. As from the appointed day, where an urban district is not a borough—

(1) There shall be no ex officio or nominated members of the urban sanitary authority:

For the meaning of "urban district," see s. 21 (1), and note thereto.

The cases in which there were in 1894 ex officio or nominated members of an urban authority were very few in number. There were some provisions relating to "selected" members of local boards in the P. H. A., 1875, Sched. II., r. 71, which related to boards formed before 1858, where the local board district included part of a borough, and a certain proportion of the members were appointed by the council of the borough. After the passing of the L. G. A., 1888, Orders were made under ibid., s. 52, ante, p. 768, dealing with such cases, and there were probably very few, if any, urban authorities to which the provision in the text could apply.

(2) A person shall not be qualified to be elected or to be a councillor unless he is a parochial elector (a) of some parish within the district, or has during the whole of the twelve months preceding the election resided in the district (b), and no person shall be disqualified by sex or marriage for being elected or being a councillor. So much of any enactment whether in a public general or local and personal Act as relates to the qualification of a member of an urban sanitary authority shall be repealed (c) : Section 23.

(a) As to " parochial electors," see note (a) to s. 20 (2), ante, p. 923.

(b) Residence is an alternative qualification. A person may be qualified by esidence though he is not a local government elector. As to what is meant by esidence, see the notes to s. 20 (2), ante, p. 924.

A person qualified by residence within the district does not lose his qualification y reason of his ceasing to reside within the district or of ceasing to be a local govern- ient elector during the period for which he was elected.

(c) See the note to the corresponding provision in s. 20 (2), ante, p. 925. Members f local boards were previously required to possess certain property qualifications rescribed by the P. H. A., 1875, Sched. II., Part I., r. 3. The qualification of nprovement commissioners was generally prescribed by the local improvement Act. 'his sub-section abolished such qualifications. On the other hand, the Representa- ion of the People Act, 1918, s. 10, creates a new qualification consisting in the wnership of property. The section is set out in the note to s. 20, ante, p. 925.

(3) The parochial electors (a) of the parishes in the district shall be the electors of the councillors of the district, and, if the district is divided into wards, the electors of the councillors for each ward shall be such of the parochial electors as are registered in respect of qualifications within the ward (b) :

(a) See note to the preceding sub-section.

(b) As to lists and register of electors for wards, see the Representation of the People Act, 1918, Sch. I. s. 23; Sch. VI. s. 3, post, pp. 1105, 1108.

(4) Each elector may give one vote and no more for each of any number of persons not exceeding the number to be elected :

Urban authorities (other than borough councils) had previously been elected in anner provided by the P. H. A., 1875, Sched. II., the voters being the persons egistered as owners of property within the district (or their proxies) and the rate- ayers, and the number of votes to be given by a voter varying with the value f the property of which he was owner, or for which he was rated; the maximum as six, but an occupying owner might vote both as owner and occupier. Now ach elector may give one vote and no more for each of the number of persons to be ected; thus, if there are six vacancies and seven candidates he can give one vote each of six of the candidates.

(5) The election shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, be conducted according to Rules framed under this Act by the Local Government Board :

For the Local Government Board must now be read the Secretary of State. See e Ministry of Health Registration and Election Transfer Order, 1921.

The provisions referred to are contained in this section and s. 48, post, p. 960. ie election will be by ballot, and the provisions of the Ballot Act, the Municipal rporations Act, and the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, incorporated by the Rules, will apply. For the Rules at present in force, see pp II., post, Vol. II. It should be noticed that the Rules hitherto in force ve been amended by the Local Elections (Alteration of Rules) Order, 1919 (S. R. O., 1919, p. 1031).

Article 13 (2) of the Urban District Councillors Election Order, 1898, provides at if the urban district is divided into polling districts, each parochial elector all give his vote in the polling district in which the property in respect of which is entitled to vote is situate, and if it is situate in more than one polling district, may vote in any one (but in one only) of the polling districts in which it is situate. connection with the rearrangement of certain polling districts, it was found con- nient to appoint as a polling place a building just outside one of the proposed polling districts, and the L. G. B. were consulted in the matter. They stated that in considering any application for their assent to a departure from the article referred to they would pay attention to any objection made to the proposed arrangement by a parochial elector or other person interested; but that if there was no suitable place within the polling district available for taking the poll, the Board, in the absence of any local objection, would not raise a difficulty to the adoption of the course contemplated.

Three seats had to be filled on an urban district council. Only two valid nominations were made, that of one of two retiring councillors being invalid; the other retiring councillor did not seek re-election. Inquiry was made of the L. G. B. as to the course to be adopted. The Board referred to r. 10 (2) of the Election Order, 1898, and stated that it seemed to them that the returning officer should in his notice of the result of the election declare to be deemed re-elected such one of the two retiring councillors who had not been nominated at the present election as was highest on the poll at his election. If he declined to accept office under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 34 (1), as applied in the Fifth Schedule to the Election Order, the Board considered that a casual vacancy would be created.

The L. G. B. expressed the opinion that the resignation of an urban district councillor is of no effect unless payment is made of the fine prescribed for non-acceptance of office. The council have no power to excuse payment of the fine or any part thereof. Regulations can at any time be made by an urban district council determining the amount of the fine "for non-acceptance of office upon election," and the amount so determined would apply as regards the payment to be made to effect a resignation subsequent to the making of the regulations.

(6) The term of office of a councillor shall be three years, and one-third, as nearly as may be, of the council, and if the district is divided into wards one-third, as nearly as may be, of the councillors for each ward, shall go out of office on the fifteenth day of April in each year, and their places shall be filled by the newly-elected councillors. Provided that a county council may on request made by a resolution of an urban district council, passed by two-thirds of the members voting on the resolution, direct that the members of such council shall retire together on the fifteenth day of April in every third year, and such order shall have full effect (a).

(a) See the corresponding enactments relating to guardians in s. 20 (6), ante p. 925, and see also 63 & 64 Vict. c. 16, s. 1 (2), post, p. 1010. It is in the discretion of the county council to make the order, but they can only do so at the instance of the urban council. The resolution of that council may be passed by a two-thirds majority of those voting: a resolution of two-thirds of the entire body is not required, nor even of two-thirds of those present at the meeting.

Rural district councils.

24.—(1) The district council of every rural district shall consist of a chairman and councillors, and the councillors shall be elected by the parishes or other areas for the election of guardians in the district.

The areas for the election of guardians are parishes, wards of parishes, and united parishes. The parishes will include each part of a parish divided by virtue of this Act or by an order under s. 36, post, p. 947. Power is given to county council and joint committees to divide parishes into wards, and to unite them for the purposes of the election of guardians and rural district councillors (s. 60 (1), (3), post, pp. 975, 976).

As to the meaning of "rural district," see s. 21 (2), ante, p. 927.

(2) The number of councillors for each parish or other area in a rural district shall be the same as the number of guardians for that parish or area.

See the next sub-section, under which the district councillors for any rural area are constituted the guardians for that area. Note to Section 24.

(3) The district councillors for any parish or other area in a rural district shall be the representatives of that parish or area on the board of guardians, and when acting in that capacity shall be deemed to be guardians of the poor, and guardians as such shall not be elected for that parish or area.

Under this Act boards of guardians may, and generally do, include representatives of both urban and rural parishes. In an urban parish both guardians and district councillors must be elected; but in a rural parish district councillors only are elected, who represent the parish both on the rural district council and on the board of guardians. In other words a rural district councillor is also a guardian for his parish.

The guardians are, of course, a distinct body having duties and jurisdiction altogether different from the district council, and this is so even where the union and the rural district are co-extensive.

(4) The provisions of this Act with respect to the qualification, election, and term of office and retirement of guardians, and to the qualification of the chairman of the board of guardians, shall apply to district councillors and to the chairman of the district council of a rural district, and any person qualified to be a guardian for a union comprising the district shall be qualified to be a district councillor for the district.

For the provisions referred to, see s. 20, ante, p. 923. For the disqualifications of a district councillor or guardian, see s. 46, post, p. 952.

The chairman will be a justice of the peace by virtue of s. 22, ante, p. 927.

The concluding words of the sub-section must be noticed. A person may be qualified as a local government elector or resident, though his qualification is not within the district. It is sufficient if it is within a union comprising the district.

A person elected or deemed to be re-elected as a rural district councillor must make the declaration of acceptance of office within one month after notice of being elected or deemed to be re-elected. The L. G. B. have stated that if more than one calendar month has elapsed since a person elected as rural district councillor received the notice of his election, and he has not made the declaration of acceptance of office, he cannot then sign the declaration, as a casual vacancy would have arisen by the operation of s. 40 (3) of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, as adapted, which expressly enacts that non-acceptance of office by a person elected or deemed to be re-elected creates a casual vacancy.

Upon the question whether retiring rural district councillors can be deemed to be re-elected when they have ceased to possess any qualification the L. G. B. have stated that it seems to them that r. 10 (3) of the Election Order, 1898, contemplates that the returning officer will in such a case declare the retiring councillor to be deemed to be re-elected, apart from any question as to his qualification for election as a rural district councillor. The Board, however, pointed out that under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 34 (1), as adapted, a declaration of acceptance of office is to be made only by a qualified person elected or deemed to be re-elected, and that if a member does not accept office a casual vacancy will arise under the operation of s. 40 (3) as adapted.

It is open to considerable doubt whether a rural district councillor holding office for a parish is not disqualified for nomination and election as a rural district councillor for another parish in the same rural district. The validity of the election in such a case might be questioned by means of an election petition under Part IV. of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, as amended by the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, and, as applied, altered and adapted by the Rural District Councillors Election Order, 1898.

Section 24.

(5) Where a rural sanitary district is on the appointed day situate in more than one administrative county, such portion thereof as is situate in each administrative county shall, save as otherwise provided by or in pursuance of this or any other Act, be as from the appointed day a rural district (a) ;

Provided that where the number of councillors of any such district will be less than five, the provisions, so far as unrepealed, of section nine of the Public Health Act, 1875, with respect to the nomination of persons to make up the members of a rural authority to five, shall apply (b), unless the Local Government Board by order direct that the affairs of the district shall be temporarily administered by the district council of an adjoining district in another county with which it was united before the appointed day, and, if they so direct, the councillors of the district shall be entitled, so far as regards those affairs, to sit and act as members of that district council, but a separate account shall be kept of receipts and expenses in respect of the district, and the same shall be credited or charged separately to the district.

(a) This provision took effect without any order under s. 36, post, p. 947, but it was one of the cases which the county council, or rather the joint committee, were to take into consideration under that section. It would appear that under that section the county council might for special reasons direct that the rural district should remain in two counties notwithstanding the above provision.

(b) The provisions of the P. H. A., 1875, s. 9, ante, p. 40 (so far as not repealed by this Act), are as follows: "Where the number of elective guardians is less than five, the L. G. B. may from time to time by order nominate such number of persons as may be necessary to make up that number, and the persons so nominated shall be entitled to act and vote as members of the rural authority but not further or otherwise." It was necessary for this power to be exercised unless a temporary order was made in manner provided by the text. In the case of such an order being made the text made provision for separate accounts being kept.

It should be noticed that s. 36 (1), post, p. 947, provides for the county council dealing with every rural district which will have less than five elected councillors. In such a case, unless the county council for special reasons otherwise directed, the district was to be united to some neighbouring district or districts. If no order for uniting the district with a neighbouring district was made, and the county council directed under s. 36 that such union should not be made, the provision in the text became applicable.

(6) The said provisions of section nine of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall apply to the district council of a rural district to which they apply at the passing of this Act.

See notes to the preceding sub-section. It should be observed that s. 9 of the Act of 1875 is of wider application than the provision in sub-s. (5), which is limited to cases in which rural districts are divided by reason of their being in two counties. Section 9 applies where one or more urban districts have been created within a union, leaving only a small rural district outside.

(7) Every district council for a rural district shall be a body corporate by the name of the district council, with the addition of the name of the district, or if there is any doubt as to the latter name, of such name as the county council direct, and shall have perpetual succession and a common seal, and may hold land for the purposes of their powers and duties without licence in mortmain.

Note to Section 24.

There had previously been no need for this provision, for the board of guardians was already a corporate body, and by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 9, the guardians were the rural sanitary authority.

Borough councils are incorporated by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, and other urban district councils by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 7, ante, p. 39.

It is for the county council to give or alter the name of a rural district in case of the division of an old district, etc.

As to holding land without licence in mortmain, see also the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Acts in App. I., post, Vol. II., and notes thereto.

Powers of district councils with respect to sanitary and highway matters.

25.—(1) As from the appointed day, there shall be transferred to the district council of every rural district all the powers, duties, and liabilities of the rural sanitary authority in the district (a), and of any highway authority in the district (b), and highway boards shall cease to exist, and rural district councils shall be the successors of the rural sanitary authority and highway authority, and shall also have as respects highways all the powers, duties, and liabilities of an urban sanitary authority under sections one hundred and forty-four to one hundred and forty-eight of the Public Health Act, 1875, and those sections shall apply in the case of a rural district and of the council thereof in like manner as in the case of an urban district and an urban authority (c). Provided that the council of any county may by order postpone within their county or any part thereof the operation of this section, so far as it relates to highways, for a term not exceeding three years from the appointed day or such further period as the Local Government Board may on the application of such council allow (d).

Sanitary powers.

(a) These are the powers conferred upon a rural sanitary authority as such by the Public Health Acts and other statutes, including powers under adoptive Acts in cases where those Acts had been adopted by the rural sanitary authority. Any urban powers which might have been conferred upon the pre-existing rural authority by Order of the L. G. B. under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 276, or the P. H. A., 1890, s. 5, were also transferred to the rural district council. The section would not seem to apply to the case of a rural district constituted after the appointed day by some order under the Act, but the Order would probably make all necessary provision.

Highway powers.

Where, under an inclosure award, the duty of cleansing a watercourse was imposed upon the surveyor of highways for the time being, it was held that the duty was transferred to the rural district council under this section (Att.-Gen. v. Tamworth R. D. C. (1901), 85 L. T. 190). For other cases arising under inclosure awards in which the position of district councils, as successors to the inhabitants of parishes or to highway surveyors, has been discussed, see Att.-Gen. v. Lunesdale R. D. C. (1902), 86 L. T. 822; Neaverson v. Peterborough R. D. C., [1902] 1 Ch. 557; 66 J. P. 404; Irving v. Carlisle R. D. C. (1907), 71 J. P. 212; 5 L. G. R. 776; Att.-Gen. v. Garner, [1907] 2 K. B. 480; 71 J. P. 357. And see Papworth v. Battersea Corporation, [1916] 1 K. B. 583; 80 J. P. 177. In a recent case it was held by the Court of Appeal that as there was no right of action for damages against a highway authority until actual damage had accrued, the preceding highway authorities were not under any liability which could be passed on to their successors; and further, that on the true construction of the Acts creating the successive highway authorities, there was nothing to make any such authority liable for acts of misfeasance committed by its predecessors (Nash v. Rochford R. D. C., [1917] 1 K. B. 384; 81 J. P. 57).

Where a surveyor of highways had contracted under the Highways and Bridges Act, 1891, to contribute by instalments to the cost of constructing a bridge, it was held that the liability to pay the remaining instalments passed to the rural district council under this section (Hertfordshire C. C. v. Barnet R. D. C., [1902] 2 K. B. 48; 66 J. P. 531).

Note to Section 25.

In Williamson v. Durham R. D. C., [1906] 2 K. B. 65; 70 J. P. 352, it was held that a pipe (originally put in for conveying away surface water from a road) which in 1894 was vested in or under the control of a highway board, and was consequently not then a sewer within the meaning of the P. H. A., 1875, s. 4, did not, upon the passing of the L. G. A., 1894, become a sewer by virtue of s. 25, supra. The decision in this case was followed in Irving v. Carlisle R. D. C., ante, p. 933.

Former highway authorities.

(b) The highway authorities here referred to were the surveyors of highway parishes, highway boards in highway districts, and rural sanitary authorities who had highway powers under the Highway Act, 1878. They included, also, in a few cases, highway authorities under local Acts (see Re Isle of Wight Highway Commissioners and Isle of Wight C. C. (1895), 59 J. P. 438; 72 L. T. 569; Re Marshland Smeeth and Fen District Commissioners and Marshland R. D. C. (1895), 59 J. P. 824; 73 L. T. 563). The powers of these pre-existing highway authorities were not uniform; and therefore the powers of rural district councils in highway matters are not uniform.

See also following note and notes to the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 144—148.

(c) See these sections, ante, pp. 253—273. The effect of their application is shortly as follows: The rural district council have all the powers, duties, and liabilities of surveyors of highways, and also, if a highway board pre-existed in the district, the somewhat wider powers of such a board; further they have all the powers which are given by the Highway Acts to the inhabitants in vestry assembled of any parish within the district. The rural district council may agree with any person for the making of new public roads, and they have power to agree for the making of public bridges under or above railways or canals. They also have power to enter into agreements with any persons liable to repair any road with the view to the taking over by them of the maintenance, repair, cleansing, or watering of such road.

It is perhaps unfortunate that s. 149 of the Act of 1875 was not included among the powers given to rural councils. If such powers are required in any case application should be made to the Ministry of Health for an order under s. 276 of the Act.

The council collectively, and not any individual member, is the "surveyor of highways": therefore the application of these sections does not make a councillor liable to penalties under the Highway Act, 1835, s. 46, for hiring to the council a team to be used in repairing a highway within their district, without any previous licence obtained from justices of the peace (Buckley v. Hanson (1898), 62 J. P. 119; 77 L. T. 664). So, too, the council's surveyor is not "the surveyor of highways" (R. v. Bradford, [1908] 1 K. B. 365; 72 J. P. 61). Cf. Hardcastle v. Bielby, [1892] 1 Q. B. 709; 56 J. P. 549, where the point was apparently missed.

(d) All such postponement orders have expired.

(2) Where a highway repairable ratione tenuræ appears on the report of a competent surveyor not to be in proper repair, and the person liable to repair the same fails when requested so to do by the district council to place it in proper repair, the district council may place the highway in proper repair, and recover from the person liable to repair the highway the necessary expenses of so doing.

Ratione tenuræ highways.

The liability to repair a highway ratione tenuræ exists where an individual or corporation is bound to repair a highway by reason of a condition attached to his or its tenure of certain lands. For modern cases in which the nature or existence of such a liability has been under discussion, see R. v. Barker (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 213; 54 J. P. 615; Heath v. Weaverham Overseers, [1894] 2 Q. B. 108; 58 J. P. 557; Dalton Overseers v. N. E. Rail. Co., [1900] A. C. 345; 64 J. P. 612; Esher U. D. C. v. Marks (1902), 71 L. J. K. B. 309; 66 J. P. 243; Ferrand v. Bingley U. D. C. [1903] 2 K. B. 445; 67 J. P. 370; Maude v. Thirsk Union (1914), 78 J. P. N. 100; In re Earl of Stamford and Warrington, Payne v. Grey (No. 2), [1911] 1 Ch. 648; 75 J. P. 346. The text affords a simple remedy for enforcing the liability. There must be a report of a competent surveyor (not necessarily the surveyor to the council) and there must be a failure on the part of the person liable to put the highway into proper repair. The remedy given is confined to the occupier, and creates no liability in the owner of the land to repay the sums so expended (Cuckfield R. D. C. v. Goring [1898] 1 Q. B. 865; 62 J. P. 358; Daventry R. D. C. v. Parker, [1900] 1 Q. B. 1; 63 J. P. 708).

Note to Section 25.

The expenses appear to be recoverable by action only. A county court judge held that the jurisdiction of the county court in such an action was ousted under the County Courts Act, 1888, ss. 56 and 60, on the ground that the estate sought to be charged ratione tenuræ was worth more than £50 per annum (Barnstaple R. D. C. v. Rudd (1897), 103 L. T. Newsp. 11); a new trial was afterwards granted, and resulted in a verdict for the plaintiffs. As to evidence of liability to repair ratione tenuræ, see Rundle v. Hearle, [1898] 2 Q. B. 83; L. & N. W. Rail. Co. v. Commissioners of Sewers for Fobbing Level (1896), 66 L. J. Q. B. 127; 75 L. T. 629; Esher U. D. C. v. Marks, and Ferrand v. Bingley U. D. C., ante, p. 934.

(3) Where a highway authority receives any contribution from the county council towards the cost of any highway under section eleven, sub-section (10), of the Local Government Act, 1888, such contribution may be made, subject to any such conditions for the proper maintenance and repair of such highways, as may be agreed on between the county council and the highway authority.

By the L. G. A., 1888, s. 11 (10), ante, p. 745, a county council may, if they think fit, contribute towards the cost of the maintenance, repair, enlargement, and improvement of any public highway or public footpath in the county, though the same is not a main road. The text amends this provision by enabling the council to impose terms and conditions upon making such contributions.

(4) Where the council of a rural district become the highway authority for that district, any excluded part of a parish under section two hundred and sixteen of the Public Health Act, 1875, which is situate in that district, shall cease to be part of any urban district for the purpose of highways, but until the council become the highway authority such excluded part of a parish shall continue subject to the said section.

See the P. H. A., 1875, s. 216, ante, p. 496, and the notes thereunder.

(5) Rural district councils shall also have such powers, duties, and liabilities of urban sanitary authorities (a) under the Public Health Acts or any other Act, and such provisions (b) of any of those Acts relating to urban districts shall apply to rural districts, as the Local Government Board by general order direct.

(a) See the note to the next sub-section. The text enables the Ministry of Health by general order to confer on rural authorities powers which are otherwise exercisable only by urban authorities, and that not merely under the Public Health Acts, but under any other Act. Therefore the Board might by general order extend to rural authorities the provisions of Acts which at present are administered only by urban authorities; but no such orders appear to have been made.

(b) There is a distinction between "powers," etc. of urban authorities and "provisions" relating to urban districts. See, for example, the P. H. A., 1875, s. 171 (1), which is an urban provision capable of being applied to rural districts, but which to some extent confers powers upon the police only.

(6) The power to make such general orders shall be in addition to and not in substitution for the powers conferred on the Board by section two hundred and seventy-six of the Public Health Act, 1875, or by any enactment applying that section; and every order made by the Local Government Board under this section shall be forthwith laid before Parliament.

Note to Section 25.

Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 276, ante, p. 613, the Ministry of Health may confer upon any particular rural authority urban powers, that is to say, powers which the P. H. A. itself confers only upon urban authorities. This power is frequently exercised upon application for the purpose of enabling rural authorities to make up private streets, to water, cleanse, name and light streets, to provide urinals, to make byelaws as to nuisances, slaughter-houses, new streets, buildings and offensive trades, to secure the numbering of houses, and, in short, to put in force any of the provisions applicable to urban districts which are required in particular rural parishes. The jurisdiction of the Ministry in these respects is not taken away, but the Ministry may, in addition, by general order (i.e., an order applicable to all rural authorities) confer upon all rural district councils any urban powers. No general order under this section has, however, been issued at present.

The provisions as to laying the orders before Parliament will only apply to the general orders made under the preceding sub-section.

(7) The powers conferred on the Local Government Board by the said section two hundred and seventy-six, or by any enactment applying that section, may be exercised on the application of a county council, or with respect to any parish or part of a parish on the application of the parish council of that parish.

The P. H. A., 1890, s. 5, p. 822, ante, and the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 4, p. 872, ante, may be referred to as examples of "enactments applying" (s. 276).

Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 276, ante, p. 613, the application for urban powers must come from the rural authority or from persons rated to the poor rate to the extent of one-tenth of the district or of any contributory place therein for which the urban powers are applied for. Under the text it may come from the county council or a parish council, but in either case the powers will be conferred on the rural district council alone. In some instances an order has been issued upon the application of a parish council, but no case is known to the editors in which a county council have been the applicants. If the particular provision in question is a power and not a duty (e.g., the power conferred by s. 39 of the Act of 1875), and the rural district council are not willing to exercise the power, the precise value of such an order is not apparent.

Duties and powers of district council as to rights of way, rights of common and roadside waste.

26.—(1) It shall be the duty of every district council to protect all public rights of way, and to prevent as far as possible the stopping or obstruction of any such right of way, whether within their district or in an adjoining district in the county or counties in which the district is situate, where the stoppage or obstruction thereof would in their opinion be prejudicial to the interests of their district, and to prevent any unlawful encroachment on any roadside waste within their district.

This provision is merely declaratory so far as highways within a council's district are concerned, for the duty mentioned is one which would by law devolve upon the highway authority as such. It is the duty of a highway authority to prevent the stopping up or obstruction of any highway, and with regard to encroachment on roadside wastes, it is to be observed that the greensward by the side of the highway and within the fences is in general part of the highway, as much as the metalled portion, and any obstruction thereof is a public nuisance, which may be prevented by indictment or injunction. See R. v. United Kingdom Telegraph Co., and cases cited therewith in note (i) to the L. G. A., 1888, s. 11 (1), ante, p. 739. As to obstruction of a highway by the erection and maintenance of gates, see Att.-Gen. v. Meyrick (1915), 79 J. P. 515.

An urban council has power to remove encroachments upon any highway vested in it by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, without first taking proceedings either summarily or by way of indictment against the person responsible for the encroachment (Reynolds v. Presteign U. D. C., [1896] 1 Q. B. 604; 60 J. P. 296). And according to the dicta in Louth U. D. C. v. West (1896), 65 L. J. Q. B. 535; 60 J. P. 600, it would appear that this power is exercisable by rural councils also on the ground that a statutory duty is cast upon all district councils to protect highways and roadside wastes. See also Harris v. Northamptonshire C. C., post, p. 939, as to the position of a county council in this respect. In the Louth Case, ante, p. 936, it was held that the authority might recover the expenses of removal by action from the person responsible. And see as to costs in the County Court in an action to recover expenses, Dartford R. D. C. v. Stone Court, &c. Co. (1917), 39 M. C. C. 169.

An urban council discharging duties under this sub-section is in the same position as a private individual protecting his own property, and is not acting judicially. Consequently if a member uses his influence in his own private interest, the acts of the council are not thereby invalidated (Murray v. Epsom L. B., [1897] 1 Ch 35 : 61 J. P. 71).

Reference may be made to the cases collected in note (i) on p. 284, ante, showing that a highway authority cannot legally sanction a permanent obstruction to a highway.

It should be observed that the duty of the district council extends to rights of way in an adjoining district, if their own district is prejudiced.

Sub-section (4) of this section requires the district council to take action upon the representation of a parish council.

(2) A district council may with the consent of the county council for the county within which any common land is situate aid persons in maintaining rights of common where, in the opinion of the council, the extinction of such rights would be prejudicial to the inhabitants of the district ; and may with the like consent exercise in relation to any common within their district all such powers as may, under section eight of the Commons Act, 1876, be exercised by an urban sanitary authority in relation to any common referred to in that section ; and notice of any application to the Board of Agriculture in relation to any common within their district shall be served upon the district council.

The necessity for the consent of the county council should be observed.

The aid which the district council may give is not specified, but presumably it includes a grant of money in aid of legal proceedings instituted with reference to the rights in dispute ; and see the next sub-section. There is much misapprehension on the subject of rights of common. These consist strictly of the rights of tenants of the manor, whether freeholders or commoners, over the waste lands of the manor, which belong to the lord of the manor subject to such rights. They may consist of common of pasture, turbary, estovers, foldage, or the like. As to the right of action for interference with rights of common, see King v. Brown, Durant & Co., [1913] 2 Ch. 416 ; Hope v. Osborne, [1913] 2 Ch. 349.

Members of the public, as such, have, in strictness, no rights of common, but there may be in the inhabitants of any particular village or district a right depending on ancient custom to use the wastes or part of them for purposes of recreation. See Hall v. Nottingham (1875), 1 Ex. D. 1, and cases therein cited. A custom for the inhabitants of several adjoining parishes to exercise the right of recreation over land situate in one of such parishes only is bad (Edwards v. Jenkins, [1896] 1 Ch. 308 ; 60 J. P. 167). As to the distinction between a right of recreation and a right of way, see Abercromby v. Town Commissioners of Fermoy, [1900] 1 I. R. 302 ; Dyce v. Lady James Hay (1852), 1 Macq. H. L. 305.

Section 8 of the Commons Act, 1876, which contains important provisions, will be found in App. I., post, Vol. II. See also the Commons Act, 1899, in the same Appendix, post, Vol. II. The Board of Agriculture has now been superseded by the Minister of Agriculture (9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 91).

(3) A district council may, for the purpose of carrying into effect this section, institute or defend any legal proceedings, and generally take such steps as they deem expedient.

This provision is to some extent explanatory of the preceding sub-sections, which enable the council to protect public rights of way and to aid in maintaining rights of common. But it does not exclude other methods of aiding in the maintenance of rights, e.g., by a grant of money. It expressly enables the council to institute or defend legal proceedings, if they think fit, for the protection of a right of way, and they might, where they are in possession of a right of common, institute proceedings to prevent any illegal enclosure of or encroachment on the common. The power of the court to make a declaration under R. S. C., Order XXV., r. 5, is important in this connection: see Locke-King v. Woking U. D. C., ante, p. 739. It has apparently been assumed that the powers given by this sub-section include power to compromise proceedings (see Sprigg v. Warblington U. D. C. (1899), Times, November 18th, and Molyneux v. Horsham R. D. C. (1900), Times, July 19th); but it may be doubted whether in the absence of the Attorney-General a council could effectually bind the public in purporting to abandon any right claimed (cf. Newton Abbot R. D. C. v. Wills, infra). See also note to sub-s. (4).

Note to Section 26.

See, too, Greenwell v. Howell and R. v. Norfolk C. C., cited in the note to the next sub-section, and also the cases as to costs, where a local authority is unsuccessfully sued, collected at p. 899, ante.

(4) Where a parish council have represented to the district council that any public right of way within the district or an adjoining district in the county or counties in which the district is situate has been unlawfully stopped or obstructed, or that an unlawful encroachment has taken place on any roadside waste within the district, it shall be the duty of the district council, unless satisfied that the allegations of such representation are incorrect, to take proper proceedings accordingly; and if the district council refuse or fail to take any proceedings in consequence of such representation, the parish council may petition the county council for the county within which the way or waste is situate, and if that council so resolve the powers and duties of the district council under this section shall be transferred to the county council.

In a rural parish not having a separate parish council a representation may be made under this sub-section by the parish meeting (see s. 19 (8), ante, p. 923). When a representation is made to the district council under this sub-section they must consider it with a view to satisfying themselves whether it is well founded or not. If they think it is well founded they must take legal proceedings which may be (1) summary, under the Highway Act, 1835, s. 72, or the Highway Act, 1864, s. 51; or (2) by indictment; or (3) by action for a declaration and injunction; or they may abate any nuisance or obstruction and defend any resulting action. In the case of an action by the council it has apparently been held that it is not necessary to join the Attorney-General as a plaintiff (Newton Abbot R. D. C. v. Wills (1913), 77 J. P. 333); but see Wallasey L. B. v. Gracey, p. 207, ante. If the council think that the representation is not well founded, they may refuse to take proceedings, but upon such refusal an appeal lies to the county council, who may thereupon take the like proceedings upon resolution in manner provided by s. 63, post, p. 978.

If a council acting under this section assert the existence of a public right of way over a man's land and threaten and intend to exercise it by their servants and agents, an action for an injunction and declaration will lie against them. Quære whether a mere assertion of the existence of the right and the provision of assistance to individuals who are already litigating it on their own initiative would give a cause of action against the council (Thornhill v. Weekes, [1913] 1 Ch. 438; 77 J. P. 231; and at a later stage, [1913] 2 Ch. 464; 77 J. P. 327). An action was brought by certain land owners against private individuals for removing obstructions to an alleged public right of way. The district council having passed and acted on a resolution to defend the action under the above section, were themselves made defendants, and a declaration that there was no public right of way was asked against them. On an application by the district council to be struck out as defendants, the plaintiffs were allowed to amend by alleging that the district council threatened and intended to use the alleged public right of way by their servants or agents. The district council then put in a defence stating that they neither claimed nor denied that the public right of way claimed by their co-defendants in fact existed, and they denied any threat or intention to use it by their servants or agents, but, though really innocent of any such threat or intention, they in fact conducted the whole defence on the main issue, namely, the existence of the public right of way, up to the trial, and failed to establish it. It was held that the plaintiffs were entitled to a declaration with costs against all the defendants, including the district council (Thornhill v. Weekes (No. 3), [1915] 1 Ch. 106; 78 J. P. 154). See also as to costs, Att.-Gen. v. Bowen (1914), 78 J. P. N. 220; London County Council v. Bermondsey Corporation, [1915] 3 K. B. 305; 79 J. P. 449. Officials of a district council or a county council, acting in default of a district council, may, acting under direction of the council, assert the public right by removal of an obstruction, and in the event of an action against them failing, they will be entitled to costs as between solicitor and client, under the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (Greenwell v. Howell, [1900] 1 Q. B. 535). See further as to costs where an unsuccessful action is brought against a public authority, Leckhampton Quarries Co., Ltd. v. Ballinger and other cases collected therewith at p. 900, ante. The district council, or, in their default, the county council, might also, if they thought fit, pay the costs of the defendants in an action brought by the owners of an estate against private persons for trespass in removing obstacles to an alleged public right of way (R. v. Norfolk C. C., [1901] 2 K. B. 268; 65 J. P. 454). In Scotland it has been held that an authority who procure themselves to be added as defendants to an action cannot claim the benefits of the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, as to costs (M'Robert v. Reid (1914), 51 Sc. L. R. 500).

The herbage at the side of a highway is in many cases the property of the district council or other public authority: see Coverdale v. Charlton (1878), 4 Q. B. D. 104; 43 J. P. 268; Haigh v. West, [1893] 2 Q. B. 19; 57 J. P. 358; Neaverson v. Peterborough R. D. C., [1902] 1 Ch. 557; 66 J. P. 404.

Several orders have been issued by county councils under this section transferring to themselves the powers and duties of rural district councils as to the taking of proceedings against persons for encroachments.

(5) Any proceedings or steps taken by a district council or county council in relation to any alleged right of way shall not be deemed to be unauthorised by reason only of such right of way not being found to exist.

This means that the expenditure of a council incurred in pursuance of this section is not to be regarded as illegally incurred by reason of its being eventually found that the right of way sought to be asserted does not in fact exist.

The expenses of a rural council will presumably be chargeable as general expenses of the whole rural district, unless made special by the Ministry of Health by order under the P. H. A., 1890, s. 49 (a course not commonly adopted).

In the event of a county council incurring expense in default of a rural district council, it is not clear that the debt can be thrown upon part of the district. See s. 63, post, p. 978.

(6) Nothing in this section shall affect the powers of the county council in relation to roadside wastes.

The powers of the county council as to roadside wastes depend upon the L. G. A., 1888, s. 11, ante, p. 736, which imposes upon the county council the duty of maintaining main roads. Under that section the county council have the same powers as a highway board for asserting the right of the public to the use and enjoyment of the roadside wastes, and they may abate an encroachment, although the soil is not vested in them (Harris v. Northamptonshire C. C. (1897), 61 J. P. 599; 13 T. L. R. 440).

(7) Nothing in this section shall prejudice any powers exercisable by an urban sanitary authority at the passing of this Act, and the council of every county borough shall have the additional powers conferred on a district council by this section.

This preserved to an urban sanitary authority any special highway powers which they might possess.

Transfer of certain powers of justices to district councils.

27.—(1) As from the appointed day the powers, duties, and liabilities of justices out of session in relation to any of the matters following, that is to say,—

(a) The licensing of gang masters ;

The Agricultural Gangs Act, 1867 (see App. I., post, Vol. II.), defines a "gang-master" as one "who hires children, young persons, or women with a view to their being employed in agricultural labour on lands not in his own occupation."

(b) The grant of pawnbrokers' certificates ;

These certificates were previously granted in areas where there was no stipendiary magistrate by the justices in petty sessions under the Pawnbrokers Act, 1872 (see App. I., post, Vol. II.), upon notice given in accordance with s. 42 of that Act ; they cannot be refused except on the ground that the applicant has failed to give satisfactory evidence of good character, or that his shop or any adjacent property of his is frequented by thieves or persons of bad character, or that he has failed to comply with the requirements of the Act as to notice (s. 43).

Quarter sessions on an appeal against a district council's refusal to grant a pawnbroker's certificate have no jurisdiction to order the appellants' costs to be paid by the council where the council have taken no steps in relation to the appeal and have not appeared at the hearing (R. v. Northumberland JJ. (1907), 71 J. P. 331 ; 96 L. T. 700).

(c) The licensing of dealers in game ;

Until 1894 these licences were granted by justices in special sessions under the Game Act, 1831, s. 18 (see App. I., post, Vol. II.). There is no appeal against the refusal of such a licence.

(d) The grant of licenses for passage brokers and emigrant runners ;

The Act relating to passage brokers and emigrant runners is the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, for the material provisions of which see App. I., post, Vol. II.

(e) The abolition of fairs and alteration of days for holding fairs ;

By the Fairs Acts, 1871 (see App. I., post, Vol. II.), upon representation duly made to him by the magistrates of any petty sessional districts within which any fair is held, or by the owner of any fair, that it would be for the convenience and advantage of the public that any such fair shall be abolished, the Home Secretary may, with the consent of the owner of the fair, order its abolition. By the Fairs Act, 1873 (see App. I., post, Vol. II.), the Home Secretary, upon the like representation, may order that any fair shall be held upon other days than those on which it used to be held. The representations which were originally made by justices under these Acts will for the future be made by district councils. Under both Acts advertisements of the representation and of the Order (if any) must be published.

(f) The execution as the local authority of the Acts relating to petroleum and infant life protection ; when arising within a county district, shall be transferred to the district council of the district.

Note to Section 27.

For the Petroleum Acts (34 & 35 Vict. c. 105; 42 & 43 Vict. c. 47; and 44 & 45 Vict. c. 67) see App. I., post, Vol. II. Formerly the local authority for the execution of these Acts was in an urban district the corporation, local board, or improvement commissioners, as the case might be, and in a rural district the justices in petty sessions. The local authority in every district is now the district council.

The Infant Life Protection Act, 1872 (the statute referred to in this clause), was repealed by the Infant Life Protection Act, 1897, which in turn was repealed by the Children Act, 1908, under which the guardians, and not the district council, are the local authority for the purposes of infant life protection in places outside the county or city of London.

(2) As from the appointed day, the powers, duties, and liabilities of quarter sessions in relation to the licensing of knackers' yards within a county district shall be transferred to the district council of the district.

The term "county district" includes every urban and rural district whether a borough or not (s. 21 (3), ante, p. 927).

From the refusal of such a licence by a district council appeal lies to quarter sessions under s. 7 of the P. H. A., 1890, ante, p. 823, notwithstanding the provision in the text (R. v. Essex JJ., Ex parte Barking U. D. C., [1916] 2 K. B. 406; 80 J. P. 345).

The licences above referred to are those granted under the Knackers Acts, 1786 and 1844 (see App. I., post, Vol. II.). Such a licence is quite distinct from the slaughter-house licence granted by urban authorities under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 169, ante, p. 389.

(3) All fees payable in respect of the powers, duties, and liabilities transferred by this section shall be payable to the district council.

Expenses of urban district council.

28. The expenses incurred by the council of an urban district in the execution of the additional powers conferred on the council by this Act shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, be defrayed in a borough out of the borough fund or rate, and in any other case out of the district fund and general district rate or other fund applicable towards defraying the expenses of the execution of the Public Health Act, 1875.

See the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 207—210, pp. 469—478, ante.

Expenses of rural district council.

29. The expenses incurred by the council of a rural district shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, be defrayed in manner directed by the Public Health Act, 1875, with respect to expenses incurred in the execution of that Act by a rural sanitary authority, and the provisions of the Public Health Acts with respect to those expenses shall apply accordingly (a).

Provided as follows:

(a) Any highway expenses shall be defrayed as general expenses (b):

(a) Provisions for the defraying of these expenses are contained in the P. H A., 1875, ss. 229—232, ante, pp. 510—520. The Ministry of Health consider that any loans required by rural councils for highway purposes should be raised with their sanction under the P. H. A., 1875.

(b) Before this Act, in a highway parish, the highway rate was made by the surveyor of highways upon all property rated to the relief of the poor, and was an equal rate, i.e., was levied equally upon all kinds of property. In highway districts, the expenses of highways had been, since 1878, borne by a common fund raised out of the several parishes according to the rateable value of each (41 & 42 Vict. c. 77, s. 7), the rates in each parish being equal rates. The first provision in the above section, therefore, makes no change in the incidence of rates for highway purposes, which in a rural district are still borne equally by all kinds of rateable property. But legal exemptions from highway rate existing previously to the passing of this Act are not interfered with (Lonsdale v. Lowther Overseers (1896), 60 J. P. 297; Dalton Overseers v. N. E. Rail. Co., Ferrand v. Bingley U. D. C., and Maude v. Thirsk Union, ante, p. 934).

Note to Section 29.

The P. H. A., 1890, s. 49, p. 859, ante, when in force in a district, enables the Ministry of Health to declare any expenses to be special expenses. It is against the practice of the department, however, to declare expenses of highway improvement to be special unless the circumstances are exceptional. Expenses of repair are never so declared. See, however, sub-s. (c), infra.

A rural council who succeeded a highway board have power, with the approval and assent therein mentioned, under the Highways and Bridges Act, 1891, s. 3, to charge the cost of improvements under that Act to particular parishes.

(b) When the Local Government Board determine any expenses under this Act to be special expenses and a separate charge on any contributory place, and such expenses would if not separately chargeable on a contributory place be raised as general expenses, they may further direct that such special expenses shall be raised in like manner as general expenses, and not by such separate rate for special expenses as is mentioned in section two hundred and thirty of the Public Health Act, 1875:

Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 229, ante, p. 510, and the P. H. A., 1890, s. 49, p. 859, ante, the Ministry of Health may order any expenses which would otherwise be payable as general expenses, to be defrayed as special expenses chargeable upon a particular contributory place. Previously, when such an order was made, the expenses (unless quite small in amount) had to be defrayed out of a special rate levied in manner provided by s. 230. Such a rate is not an equal one, for the properties enumerated in s. 230 are rated only at one-fourth of their rateable value. Now, when an order is made relating to expenses which would, if not separately chargeable on a contributory place, be raised as general expenses, the Ministry may direct that the special expenses shall be raised as general expenses, that is to say, out of the poor rate of the parish—an equal rate to which all properties are rateable at their full value. It is, of course, only in respect of a certain class of cases that this provision is of value.

(c) A district council shall have the same power of charging highway expenses under exceptional circumstances on a contributory place as a highway board has in respect of any area under section seven of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878:

The Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, s. 7, after enacting that the expenses of a highway board should be deemed to have been incurred for the common benefit of the several parishes within the district and should be charged on the district fund provided that "if a highway board think it just, by reason of natural differences of soil or locality, or other exceptional circumstances, that any parish or parishes within their district should bear the expenses of maintaining its or their own highways, they may (with the approval of the county authority or authorities of the county or counties within which their district, or any part thereof, is situate) divide their district into two or more parts, and charge exclusively on each of such parts the expenses payable by such highway board in respect of maintaining and keeping in repair the highways situate in each such part; so, nevertheless, that each such part shall consist of one or more highway parish or highway parishes." The applicability of this proviso to a rural sanitary authority exercising the powers of a highway board, though assumed by the court in Sheppey Union v. Elmley Overseers (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 364; 50 J. P. 343, was doubtful having regard to s. 5 (3) of the same Act, but is now put beyond dispute by the text.

Note to Section 29.

This power of dividing their district into parts for the purpose of charging the expenses of the highways in each part upon such part separately will be exercisable by a district council with the approval of the county council.

(d) Where highway expenses would, if this Act had not passed, have been in whole or in part defrayed in any parish or other area out of any property or funds other than rates, the district council shall make such provision as will give to that parish or area the benefit of such property or funds by way of reduction of the rates on the parish or area.

This applies where any parish has property producing an income applicable in relief of highway rates. Such a parish will still be entitled to the benefit of that property. Charitable trusts for the repair of roads are not put an end to by the provisions of this Act (Att.-Gen. v. Day, [1900] 1 Ch. 31; 64 J. P. 88; followed in In re Hall's Charity (1912), 76 J. P. 9; 28 T. L. R. 32 (a bridge case)).

30. The provisions of this Part of this Act respecting guardians shall apply to the administrative county of London and to every county borough. Guardians in London and county boroughs.

The provisions referred to are contained in s. 20, ante, p. 923.

32. The provisions of this Part of this Act respecting the powers, duties, and liabilities of justices out of sessions, or of quarter sessions, which are transferred to a district council, shall apply to a county borough as if it were an urban district, and the county borough council were a district council. Application to county boroughs of provisions as to transfer of justices' powers.

The provisions referred to are contained in s. 27, ante, p. 940. These powers, duties, and liabilities are transferred to the council of a county borough, as in the case of any other urban district council, this express provision being rendered necessary by s. 35, post, p. 947.

33.—(1) The Local Government Board may, on the application of the council of any municipal borough, including a county borough, or of any other urban district, make an order conferring on that council or some other representative body within the borough or district all or any of the following matters, namely, the appointment of overseers and assistant overseers, the revocation of appointment of assistant overseers, any power, duties, or liabilities of overseers, and any powers, duties, or liabilities of a parish council, and applying with the necessary modifications the provisions of this Act with reference thereto. Power to apply certain provisions of Act to urban districts and London.

There is some doubt whether an order made under this section can be amended by a subsequent order. But the order made is not made by the Board or Ministry of Health in their capacity as successors of the Poor Law Commissioners, and it may therefore be questioned otherwise than by certiorari under s. 35 of the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834, see Jones v. Lewis, post, p. 945.

In response to an application by an urban council in general terms for the powers obtainable by order under this section the L. G. B. wrote:—

Note to Section 33.

"As regards the application for any powers, duties, or liabilities of overseers, the Board do not consider that they can properly confer by an Order any powers of overseers other than those which are by the Act transferred to parish councils. If the district council desire any of the powers so transferred, the Board would wish to be furnished with a statement specifying which of the particular powers of overseers among those mentioned in s. 6 (1) (c) of the Act the council would desire. If application is made for any of the powers mentioned in paragraph (ii) of this provision, the precise reasons for the proposed transfer should be stated.

"With regard to the application of the council for any powers, duties, or liabilities of a parish council, the Board request to be informed what powers of a parish council the council desire to have conferred upon them. The Board think that the council should consider with respect to each provision of the Act which confers any power on parish councils, other than those above mentioned, whether the power is required by them, and, if so, why. They will find that some of these powers they already practically possess, and probably that others are not really required by them. When the council have adopted this course, the Board should be furnished with a statement setting out the powers desired and the sections and sub-sections of the Act by which they are conferred on parish councils, and giving briefly the reasons why the several powers are applied for.

"The Board may state for the information of the district council that the powers beyond those of appointing overseers and assistant overseers and of revoking the appointment of assistant overseers which have been applied for and obtained by other councils include those mentioned in ss. 5 (2) (c), 6 (1) (a), (b) as to closed churchyards, and (c) (i) and (iii), s. 8 (1) (g), (h), (i), and (k), s. 13 (2), s. 14, and s. 17 (8) of the Act. In several cases the powers of the vestry under ss. 3 and 4 of the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869, have been applied for and transferred apart from the other powers of the vestry which pass under s. 6 (1) (a) of the Act of 1894.

"If any application should be made for the powers contained in s. 5 (2) (c), or s. 6 (i) (c) (iii) of the Act, the Ministry of Health would desire to be definitely informed (a) what property there is to which these provisions would apply, and (b) when and how such property was acquired. It should also be stated, if practicable, whether the property has formed the subject of correspondence between the overseers and the Board, or their predecessors the Poor Law Board and the Poor Law Commissioners."

The Ministry of Health usually provide in their Order that the expenses of an urban council in executing their new powers shall be chargeable like expenses under the P. H. A., 1875.

In urban districts, unless an order is made under this sub-section, overseers continue to be appointed by justices under 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1, and assistant overseers by justices on the nomination of the vestry under 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 7.

The powers conferred by an order under this section may be given to the urban council or to any other representative body within the district. There is no definition of a representative body, but it may include the guardians if the union is included within the borough. See orders made under this section in 59 J. P. 745, 777, 778.

If no order is made under this section the revocation of the appointment of an assistant overseer remains in the discretion of the vestry, under 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 7.

The transfer of the powers of overseers is important. These powers may include the preparation of the valuation lists, though the approval of such lists will still be the duty of the union assessment committee; also the making of the poor rate, though that will still have to be allowed by justices and published.

An order under this section giving to a district council the power of appointing overseers does not take away an individual's right to appeal against his appointment (Bowden v. New Mills U. D. C. (1908), 72 J. P. 472 (Q. S.)). On a special case in the same matter it was held that a practising solicitor is exempt from serving in the office of overseer and may appeal to sessions against his appointment; but that if the appointing council do not appear at sessions to oppose the appeal, sessions cannot order them to pay the costs of the appeal (R. v. Derbyshire JJ., [1909] 1 K. B. 449; 73 J. P. 147).

As to serving upon the council notice of appeal against a poor rate, if an order has been made under this section transferring to the council the powers, duties, and liabilities of overseers with respect (inter alia) to such appeals, see R. v. De Grey, [1900] 1 Q. B. 521; 64 J. P. 375; R. v. Tewkesbury JJ., [1903] 1 K. B. 39; 67 J. P. 54. Note to Section 33.

See also the notes to the various sections defining the powers of parish councils.

(2) Where it appears to the Local Government Board that, by reason of the circumstances connected with any parish in a municipal borough (including a county borough) or other urban district divided into wards, or with the parochial charities of that parish, the parish will not, if the majority of the body of trustees administering the charity are appointed by the council of the borough or district, be properly represented on that body, they may, by their order, provide that such of those trustees as are appointed by the council, or some of them, shall be appointed on the nomination of the councillors elected for the ward or wards comprising such parish or any part of the parish.

The exercise of this power is left to the discretion of the Ministry of Health, who will probably act only upon a representation made to them by the inhabitants or representatives of the parish interested either before an order is originally made under the preceding sub-section or afterwards. And see sub-s. (5), infra.

The sub-section appears to be a modification of s. 14 (2) and (3), ante, pp. 918, 919, under which a parish council have power to appoint trustees of parish charities. If no order is made under the above provision these powers of the parish council may be transferred to the borough or urban council under the preceding sub-section. It should be observed that an order can only be made when the borough or district is divided into wards.

(3) Any order under this section may provide for its operation extending either to the whole or to specified parts of the area of the borough or urban district, and may make such provisions as seem necessary for carrying the order into effect.

This provision enables the powers conferred by the previous sub-section to be limited to particular areas within the borough or district, but it gives no indication of the cases in which a restriction should be imposed. It is difficult to suggest such cases.

(4) The order shall not alter the incidence of any rate, and shall make such provisions as may seem necessary and just for the preservation of the existing interests of paid officers.

The provision as to the incidence of the rate seems to have been inserted ex cautela, for it is not apparent how an order under this section could alter the incidence of any rate.

The provision as to officers was probably intended for the protection of such officers as an assistant overseer, collector, or vestry clerk. For this purpose the order may apply some of the provisions of s. 81 (7), post, p. 989, as to existing officers.

In a case where an order made under this section contained a clause to the effect that nothing in the order should apply to the revoking of the appointment of a person then holding the office of assistant overseer, it was held by the Court of Appeal that "the existing interests" mentioned in the text included, in the case of an assistant overseer, the possibility of being re-elected and re-appointed at an increased salary by the vestry who originally appointed him; that the order was intra vires; and that it did not transfer to the district council the right to re-appoint at an increased salary one who was assistant overseer at the date of the Act (Jones v. Lewis, [1919] 1 K. B. 328; 83 J. P. 61).

Section 33.

(5) An order under this section may also be made on the application of any representative body within a borough or district.

The use of the word "also" refers apparently to sub-s. (1), under which the order may be made on the application of the borough or district council. As to the expression "representative body," see note to that sub-section. An order under sub-s. (2) may also be made on the application of a representative body.

. . . . . .

(7) The Local Government Board shall consult the Charity Commissioners before making any Order under this section with respect to any charity.

It will be noticed that this provision does not make the approval of the Charity Commissioners necessary to the validity of an order made by the Ministry of Health with respect to a charity; their approval is necessary in the case of a similar order as to a charity made by a county council, under s. 36 (3), post, p. 948.

Supplemental provisions as to control of overseers in urban districts.

34. Where an Order of the Local Government Board under this Act confers on the council of an urban district, or some other representative body within the district, either the appointment of overseers and assistant overseers or the powers, duties, and liabilities of overseers, that Order or any subsequent Order of the Board may confer on such council or body the powers of the vestry under the third and fourth sections of the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869.

Section 3 of the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869, provides that in case the rateable value of any hereditament does not exceed £20 if the hereditament is situate in the metropolis, of £13 if situate in any parish wholly or partly within the borough of Liverpool, or £10 if situate wholly or partly within the city of Manchester or the borough of Birmingham, or £8 if situate elsewhere, and the owner of such hereditament is willing to enter into an agreement in writing with the overseers to become liable to them for the poor rates assessed in respect of such hereditament, for any term not being less than one year from the date of such agreement, and to pay the poor rates whether the hereditament is occupied or not, the overseers may, subject nevertheless to the control of the vestry, agree with the owner to receive the rates from him, and to allow him a commission not exceeding 25 per cent. on the amount thereof.

Section 4 provides that the vestry of any parish may from time to time order that the owners of all rateable hereditaments to which s. 3 of this Act extends, situate within such parish, shall be rated to the poor rate in respect of such rateable hereditaments, instead of the occupiers, on all rates made after the date of such order; and thereupon and as long as such order shall be in force the following enactments shall have effect: 1. The overseers shall rate the owners instead of the occupiers, and shall allow to them an abatement or deduction of 15 per cent. from the amount of the rate. 2. If the owner of one or more of such rateable hereditaments shall give notice to the overseers in writing that he is willing to be rated for any term not less than one year, in respect of all such rateable hereditaments of which he is owner, whether the same be occupied or not, the overseers shall rate such owner accordingly, and allow him a further abatement or deduction not exceeding 15 per cent. from the amount of the rate during the time he is so rated. 3. The vestry may by resolution rescind any such order after a day to be fixed by them, such day not being less than six months after the passing of such resolution, but the order shall continue in force with respect to all rates made before the date on which the resolution takes effect: Provided that this clause shall not be applicable to any rateable hereditament in which a dwelling-house shall not be included.

It should here be mentioned that by the Increase of Rent, etc., Restrictions Act, 1920 (10 & 11 Geo. 5, c. 17), s. 16 (1), these sections, except so far as relates to the Metropolis, are to have effect as though for the limits of value therein specified, there were substituted limits 25 per cent. in excess of the limits so specified. The Act, however, is temporary only and expires on the 4th June, 1923. As to the rating of premises to which the Act applies, see Roberts v. Poplar Assessment Committee (1922), 38 T. L. R. 499.

Note to Section 34.

The effect of the provisions in the text is that when an order has been made under s. 33 giving to the council of the borough or district, or to some representative body, either the power of appointment of overseers and assistant overseers, or the powers, etc. of overseers, the powers of the vestry under the foregoing sections may be transferred to such council or representative body. If such a transfer is made,—then, where the power of appointing overseers and assistant overseers has been conferred, the overseers will act under s. 3, subject to the control of the council or body; and the overseers must give effect to any resolution of the council under s. 4; where the powers of overseers have been conferred, the council, in the exercise of the powers under s. 3, will be freed from the control of the vestry, and any resolution made by them under s. 4 will be carried out by themselves or rescinded by them in manner provided by that section.

An agreement made by an owner under these sections, though purporting to be made for a term of years, is in force only so long as the hereditaments rated are under the values specified in s. 3 (Norwood (Overseers of) v. Salter, [1892] 2 Q. B. 118; 56 J. P. 535).

The Act of 1869 provided by ss. 7, 19 that where an owner paid the rates or was rated under the above sections, the occupier was deemed to be rated and to have paid the rates for the purpose of any qualification or franchise depending on rating. But these sections are now repealed by the Representation of the People Act, 1918, 8 Geo. 5, c. 64, under which rating and the payment of rates form no part of the qualification of an elector.

Restrictions on application of Act to London, etc.

35. Save as specially provided by this Act, this Part of this Act shall not apply to the administrative county of London or to a county borough.

The special provisions in this Part of the Act applicable to the county of London and to a county borough are contained in ss. 30—33 inclusive.

PART III.

AREAS AND BOUNDARIES.

Duties and powers of county council with respect to areas and boundaries

36.—(1) For the purpose of carrying this Act into effect in the case of—

(a) every parish and rural sanitary district which at the passing of this Act is situate partly within and partly without an administrative county; and

(b) every parish which at the passing of this Act is situate partly within and partly without a sanitary district; and

(c) every rural parish which has a population of less than two hundred; and

(d) every rural sanitary district which at the passing of this Act has less than five elective guardians capable of acting and voting as members of the rural sanitary authority of the district (a); and

(e) every rural parish which is co-extensive with a rural sanitary district;

every county council shall forthwith take into consideration every such case within their county, and whether any proposal has or has not been made as mentioned in section fifty-seven of the Local Government Act, 1888, shall as soon as practicable, in accordance with that section, cause inquiries to be made and notices given, and make such orders, if any, as they deem most suitable for carrying into effect this Act in accordance with the following provisions, namely:

Section 36.

(i) the whole of each parish, and, unless the county council for special reasons otherwise direct, the whole of each rural district shall be within the same administrative county (b);

(ii) the whole of each parish shall, unless the county council for special reasons otherwise direct, be within the same county district (c); and

(iii) every rural district which will have less than five elected councillors shall, unless for special reasons the county council otherwise direct, be united to some neighbouring district or districts (a).

Some hundreds of orders were made during 1894 for the purpose of carrying out the sweeping alterations provided for by this section.

(a) See s. 24 (5), ante, p. 932.

(b) In the absence of an order to the contrary a poor law union extending into two counties became divided into two rural districts, one in each county (unless the rural part of the union was wholly in one county). See s. 24 (5), ante, p. 932.

(c) For the definition of a county district, see s. 21 (3), ante, p. 927.

(2) Where a parish is at the passing of this Act situate in more than one urban district, the parts of the parish in each such district shall, as from the appointed day, unless the county council for special reasons otherwise direct, and subject to any alteration of area made by or in pursuance of this or any other Act, be separate parishes, in like manner as if they had been constituted separate parishes under the Divided Parishes and Poor Law Amendment Act, 1876, and the Acts amending the same.

See hereon, R. v. Middlesex JJ., cited at length in the notes under s. 42, post, p. 951.

(3) Where a parish is divided by this Act, the county council may by order provide for the application to different parts of that parish of the provisions of this Act with respect to the appointment of trustees or beneficiaries of a charity and for the custody of parish documents, but the order, so far as regards the charity, shall not have any effect until it has received the approval of the Charity Commissioners.

(4) Where a rural parish is co-extensive with a rural sanitary district, then, until the district is united to some other district or districts, and unless the county council otherwise direct, a separate election of a parish council shall not be held for the parish, but the district council shall, in addition to their own powers, have the powers of, and be deemed to be, the parish council.

The county council might make an order uniting such a district with another district or districts, and if the district had less than five elected councillors, it was their duty to make such an order unless for special reasons they deemed it inadvisable. See s. 24 (5), ante, p. 932. It was also competent for the county council to direct that such a parish should have a parish council as well as a district council, and this was done in the case of Crowland.

There will, of course, be a parish meeting in such a parish having the powers and duties of the parish meeting of a parish which has a parish council. Where the district council and the parish council are one body, some of the powers of each must of necessity disappear, e.g., the power of a parish council to complain of the default of a district council under s. 16, and the consent of the two distinct bodies to the proceedings as to highways which are dealt with by s. 13.

Note to Section 36.

(5) Where an alteration of the boundary of any county or borough seems expedient for any of the purposes mentioned in this section, application shall be made to the Local Government Board for an order under section fifty-four of the Local Government Act, 1888.

Under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 54, p. 768, ante, the Ministry of Health may, after local inquiry, make an order for the alteration of the boundary of a county or borough and for other consequential matters. Such an order is provisional only and has no effect unless confirmed by Parliament.

(6) Where the alteration of a poor law union seems expedient by reason of any of the provisions of this Act, the county council may, by their order, provide for such alteration in accordance with section fifty-eight of the Local Government Act, 1888, or otherwise, but this provision shall not affect the powers of the Local Government Board with respect to the alteration of unions.

On an order under this sub-section claims for adjustment might be made under s. 68, post, p. 980 (In re Rochdale and Haslingden Unions, [1899] 1 Q. B. 540).

(7) Where an order for the alteration of the boundary of any parish of the division thereof, or the union thereof or of any part thereof, with another parish is proposed to be made after the appointed day, notice thereof shall, a reasonable time before it is made, be given to the parish council of that parish, or if there is no parish council, to the parish meeting, and that parish council or parish meeting, as the case may be, shall have the right to appear at any inquiry held by the county council with reference to the order, and shall be at liberty to petition the Local Government Board against the confirmation of the order.

(8) Where the alteration of the boundary of any parish, or the division thereof or the union thereof or of part thereof with another parish, seems expedient for any of the purposes of this Act, provision for such alteration, division, or union may be made by an order of the county council confirmed by the Local Government Board under section fifty-seven of the Local Government Act, 1888.

See the section above referred to, ante, p. 770.

(9) Where a parish is by this Act divided into two or more parishes those parishes shall, until it is otherwise provided, be included in the same poor law union in which the original parish was included.

(10) Subject to the provisions of this Act, any order made by a county council in pursuance of this Part of this Act shall be deemed to be an order under section fifty-seven of the Local Government Act, 1888, and any board of guardians affected by an order shall have the same right of petitioning against that order as is given by that section to any other authority.

See s. 57 of the Act of 1888, ante, p. 770. Sub-section (3) thereof relates to petitions against the confirmation of orders of county councils.

Note to Section 36.

Guardians can hardly be affected unless the union is altered under sub-s. (6). If so, it would seem that an order under that sub-section requires confirmation by the Ministry of Health. See the L. G. A., 1888, s. 57 (3), ante, p. 772. Section 40 of this Act expressly provides that certain orders therein named shall not require confirmation.

(11) Where any of the areas referred to in section fifty-seven of the Local Government Act, 1888, is situate in two or more counties, or the alteration of any such area would alter the boundaries of a poor law union situate in two or more counties, a joint committee appointed by the councils of those counties shall, subject to the terms of delegation, be deemed to have and to have always had power to make orders under that section with respect to that area ; and where at the passing of this Act a rural sanitary district or parish is situate in more than one county, a joint committee of the councils of those counties shall act under this section, and if any of those councils do not, within two months after request from any other of them, appoint members of such joint committee, the members of the committee actually appointed shall act as the joint committee. Provided that any question arising as to the constitution or procedure of any such joint committee shall, if the county councils concerned fail to agree, be determined by the Local Government Board.

(12) Every report made by the Boundary Commissioners under the Local Government Boundaries Act, 1887, shall be laid before the council of any administrative county or borough affected by that report, and before any joint committee of county councils, and it shall be the duty of such councils and joint committees to take such reports into consideration before framing any order under the powers conferred on them under this Act.

These commissioners were appointed under 50 & 51 Vict. c. 61, to inquire—

(a) as to the best mode of so adjusting the boundaries of the county and of other areas of local government as to arrange that no union, borough, sanitary district, or parish shall be situate in more than one county, and

(b) as to the best mode of dealing with parts of the county which are wholly or nearly detached from the county, and

(c) as to the best mode of dealing with the cases where a borough is not an urban sanitary district and is wholly or partly comprised in an urban sanitary district, and

(d) as to any alteration of boundaries, confirmation of areas, or administrative arrangements incidental to or consequential on any alteration which they may recommend in the boundaries of any county, union, borough, sanitary district, or parish.

(13) Every county council shall, within two years after the passing of this Act, or within such further period as the Local Government Board may allow either generally or with reference to any particular matter, make such orders under this section as they deem necessary for the purpose of bringing this Act into operation, and after the expiration of the said two years or further period the powers of the county council for that purpose shall be transferred to the Local Government Board, who may exercise those powers.

Orders under this section were to be made by county councils "as soon as practicable." See sub-s. (1), ante, p. 947, and s. 83, post, p. 994.

41. The time for petitioning against an order under section fifty-seven of the Local Government Act, 1888, shall be six weeks instead of three months after the notice referred to in sub-section three of that section. Section 41. Reduction of time for appealing against county council orders.

See the L. G. A., 1888, s. 57 (3), ante, p. 772. The provision in the text simply shortened the time within which a petition must be sent to the Ministry of Health to disallow an order under that section.

42. When an order under section fifty-seven of the Local Government Act, 1888, has been confirmed by the Local Government Board, such order shall at the expiration of six months from that confirmation be presumed to have been duly made, and to be within the powers of that section, and no objection to the legality thereof shall be entertained in any legal proceeding whatever. Validity of county council orders.

An order under s. 57 of the Act of 1888 is, generally speaking, administrative and not judicial; therefore, as a rule, prohibition does not lie against its making (see R. v. London C. C., [1893] 2 Q. B. 454; 58 J. P. 21). On the same principle, it would seem that, as a rule, certiorari would not lie (see R. v. Watermen's Co., [1897] 1 Q. B. 659). But see generally on this matter a later licensing case, in which most of the previous authorities as to when certiorari will lie were discussed (R. v. Woodhouse, [1906] 2 K. B. 501; 70 J. P. 485). The decision of the C. A. in this case was reversed, but on another point (Leeds Corporation v. Ryder, [1907] A. C. 420; 71 J. P. 484). The certiorari is clearly taken away by s. 220 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, as incorporated by s. 75 of the Act of 1888, except in cases where the order is made entirely without jurisdiction. And see also s. 262 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 582, and the cases cited in the notes thereto. A provision of an order in regard to compensation might be considered to be judicial, so as to be removable by certiorari, if made entirely without jurisdiction. See R. v. St. Olave's, Southwark (1857), 8 El. & Bl. 529; 27 L. J. Q. B. 5. The inference to be drawn from the text appears to be that an order under s. 57 may be questioned by some means within six months from its making.

At the passing of the L. G. A., 1894, a parish was situate in two urban districts. It was divided, and an Order relating to such division was made by a joint committee of county councils under the L. G. Acts, 1888 and 1894, and confirmed by the L. G. B. The Order contained, inter alia, the following articles: "(9) Every person who has acquired, or who, on or before the date of the operation of the Order shall acquire a settlement in any of the existing parishes mentioned in the Articles 1 and 2 of the Order, shall be deemed to have acquired a settlement in the parish comprising the place in which the acts or circumstances conferring such settlement shall have been done or occurred. If such acts or circumstances shall have been done, or occurred in more than one place, such settlement shall be according as the last place of residence of such person shall have been at the time of acquiring such settlement. (10) Any person who shall have acquired a status of irremovability from any of the existing parishes mentioned in Articles 1 and 2 of the Order shall be deemed to have acquired a status of irremovability from the parish in which he shall reside on the date of the operation of the Order, or (if he shall then be in receipt of relief) from the parish comprising the place in which he was residing at the time of becoming chargeable." It was held that the Order, whether or not there was power to include in it the articles in question, must, by reason of s. 42 of the Act of 1894, at the expiration of six months after confirmation, be presumed to have been duly made and to be within the powers of s. 57 of the Act of 1888, and that no objection to its validity could be entertained (R. v. Middlesex JJ.; Ex parte Walsall Union, [1907] 2 K. B. 581; 71 J. P. 393).

Section 46.

PART IV.

SUPPLEMENTAL (a).

(a) Sections 43 and 44 of this Act, which related to the registration of electors and to elections, were repealed by the Representation of the People Act, 1918, 8 Geo. 5, c. 64, post.

Disqualification for parish or district council.

46.—(1) A person shall be disqualified for being elected or being a member or chairman of a council of a parish or of a district other than a borough (a) or of a board of guardians if he—

(a) Is an infant or an alien (b) ; or

(b) Has within twelve months before his election (c), or since his election (c), received union or parochial relief (d) ; or

(c) Has, within five years before his election (c) or since his election, been convicted either on indictment or summarily of any crime, and sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour without the option of a fine, or to any greater punishment, and has not received a free pardon (e), or has, within or during the time aforesaid, been adjudged bankrupt, or made a composition or arrangement with his creditors (f) ; or

(d) Holds any paid office under the parish council or district council or board of guardians, as the case may be (g) ; or

(e) Is concerned in any bargain or contract entered into with the council or board, or participates in the profit of any such bargain or contract or of any work done under the authority of the council or board (h).

Disqualification.

(a) The disqualifications here mentioned apply to members and chairmen of rural district councils, and of urban district councils other than borough councils. The disqualifications of borough councillors are still those set out in the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 12, 39 ; it is outside the scope of this Work to refer to them more fully. Application was recently made for a writ of quo warranto in a case where an alderman of a borough had become insane. A rule nisi was granted, but the case was never argued as the alderman in question died before the return to the writ (R. v. Gilbert (1921), 43 M. C. C. 214).

A person disqualified at the time of nomination is disqualified for being elected (Harford v. Lynskey, [1899] 1 Q. B. 852 ; 63 J. P. 263). And see Ford v. Newth, post, p. 956.

It has been held under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, that although by s. 87 thereof a municipal election may be questioned on the ground that the person elected was at the time of election disqualified by election petition only, yet, bankruptcy being by s. 32 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, a disqualification not merely for election, but also for " holding " office, an information quo warranto would lie (R. v. Beer ; R. v. Ealing Corporation, [1903] 2 K. B. 693 ; 67 J. P. 326) ; and cf. Forrester v. Norton, [1911] 2 K. B. 953 ; 75 J. P. 510.

Disqualifications other than those specified in this section arise under the Felony Act, 1870, s. 2 ; the Corrupt Practices Acts, 1883, ss. 4, 6, 10 ; 1884, ss. 2, 3, and 1889 ; the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 32, as amended by the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, s. 9. The provisions of the last-mentioned sections relating to bankruptcy extend to members of sanitary authorities (district councils) and boards of guardians ; but, as regards these bodies, they may be taken to be superseded by clause (c) of the present sub-section.

(b) Aliens are persons who do not owe allegiance to the Sovereign of the United Kingdom Persons who are aliens by birth cease to be such upon becoming naturalised British subjects. See the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914. A person may be an alien if he has lost his foreign nationality but has not acquired British nationality (Stock v. The Public Trustee, [1921] 2 Ch. 67; and see Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, ibid., 533). Note to Section 46.

(c) By s. 75 (2), the expression "election" includes both nomination and poll, and therefore the disqualification arising from the receipt of relief or conviction of crime will result from such receipt or conviction within the specified periods before the nomination; and cf. Harford v. Lynskey, ante, p. 952. "Election."

(d) The words "or other alms" which occur in the similar clause relating to disqualification of burgesses (Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 9), and have given rise to some difficulty, are here omitted. Relief to a man's father is not, and to his wife or children under the age of sixteen is, relief to himself (R. v. Ireland (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 130). "Relief."

As to what amounts to parochial relief, see R. v. Leycester, Ex parte Greenbaum (1915), 79 J. P. 14.

A person employed by guardians in breaking stones and receiving more than the value of his work may be in receipt of relief (Magarrill v. Whitehaven (Overseers of) (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 242; 49 J. P. 743).

The Medical Relief Disqualification Removal Act, 1885, which removes the disqualification of voters at certain elections incurred by reason of their having received medical or surgical assistance or medicine at the expense of the poor rate, has no application to the disqualifications for offices imposed by the present section. And the same observation applies to the Representation of the People Act, 1918 (7 & 8 Geo. 5, c. 64), s. 9 (1).

(e) A conviction does not disqualify (under this section) unless it is followed by a sentence of imprisonment with hard labour without the option of a fine or some greater punishment, such as penal servitude. An offence punishable on summary conviction is "a crime" within the meaning of the above clause. See Conybeare v. London School Board, [1891] 1 Q. B. 118; 55 J. P. 151. Convictions.

(f) As to adjudication of bankruptcy, see the Bankruptcy Acts, 1883 and 1890. Under these Acts, a person adjudged bankrupt is disqualified for a period of five years for holding the offices of guardian or member of a sanitary authority; but this disqualification is to be removed and cease if and when the adjudication is annulled or the bankrupt obtains his discharge with a certificate to the effect that his bankruptcy was caused by misfortune without any misconduct on his part. A similar provision is contained in sub-s. (4) of the text. These disqualifications are not affected by the Bankruptcy Act, 1914 (4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 59), see s. 168 (5) of that Act. Bankruptcy, etc.

With regard to the disqualification arising from an adjudication of bankruptcy or a composition or arrangement with creditors, the following cases may be referred to:

A candidate for election to a local board assigned all his property by deed to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors who should sign the deed, no sum being mentioned in it as a composition to be paid on the debts therein scheduled as due to them, and the creditors signing the deed thereby discharged him from all debts due to them by him:—Held, that he was not disqualified under the P. H. A., 1875, Sched. II., r. 5, even though at the time of his election some of his creditors had signed the deed, while others did not sign it till after the election, for the deed was not "a composition with creditors" (R. v. Cooban (1886), 18 Q. B. D. 269; 51 J. P. 500).

In Aslatt v. Southampton (Mayor, etc. of) (1880), 16 Ch. D. 143, where the disqualifying words (Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 39) related to compounding "by deed," and a debtor had made a composition with his creditors, but not by deed, and had executed a bill of sale to secure a sum advanced to meet the amount of the composition, an injunction was granted to restrain the corporation from declaring his seat vacant. See also Futcher v. Saunders (1885), 49 J. P. 424, decided on similar words in an earlier Act.

When a firm of partners make an arrangement with the creditors of the firm, every member of the firm makes an arrangement with his creditors within the meaning of this section (Ward v. Radford (1895), 59 J. P. 632; 11 T. L. R. 587). A candidate whose firm had filed a petition for liquidation, and who had not obtained his certificate of discharge in respect of his partnership estate, his separate creditors never having held any meeting, was held disqualified by the provisions of the P. H. A., 1875,

Note to Section 46.

Sched. II., r. 5, on the ground that the creditors of the separate estate had voted neither for the closing of the liquidation nor for the discharge of the debtor; and, per COLERIDGE, L.C.J., he was disqualified by the absence of a certificate of discharge in respect of the partnership estate (Ex parte Atherton (1886), 2 T. L. R. 631).

The provision in the text is not limited to compositions and arrangements made under the Bankruptcy Acts, but applies to compositions and arrangements under the Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887 (now replaced by the Act of 1914) (Corrigan v. Allison (1900), 64 J. P. 678).

A person whose total indebtedness did not exceed £50, and whose estate was being administered by an order of the county court under s. 122 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, was held not to have been "adjudged bankrupt" within the meaning of the disqualifying section (32 (1)) of that Act (Lowe v. Lourie (1902), 18 T. L. R. 553); but it has since been decided that such a person has made a "composition" with his creditors within the meaning of the text (Bradfield v. Cheltenham Board of Guardians, [1906] 2 Ch. 371; 70 J. P. 371).

As to the retrospective effect of such disqualification provisions, cf. Re Pulborough School Board Petition, Bourke v. Nutt, [1894] 1 Q. B. 725; 58 J. P. 572.

Offices.

(g) See as to holding office under a committee, Crump v. Lewis, [1908] 1 K. B. 858; 72 J. P. 149; Greville-Smith v. Tomlin, [1911] 2 K. B. 9; 75 J. P. 314, where it was held that the text disqualifies a person who is a salaried officer of a joint hospital committee appointed by the council in question and a neighbouring authority. These cases were followed in Keefe v. Shaughnessy, [1915] 2 I. R. 105, and in Keefe v. McMahon, ibid. 312. See Delane v. Hillcoat (1829), 9 B. & C. 310, as to accepting an office but allowing another to take the profits. As to what amounts to a paid office see Moriarty v. O'Donnell, [1915] 2 I. R. 393: Lynch v. O'Regan, ibid., 267.

Interest in contracts

(h) The words of the clause are very similar to those in the P. H. A., 1875, Sched. II., r. 64, and the following cases decided with reference to that and similar provisions in other Acts may be referred to:

It is sufficient if the member is concerned in a contract with the authority though he does not participate in the profits. See Star Steam Laundry Co. v. Dukas (1913), 108 L. T. 367.

As to the general rule of law that no one having fiduciary duties to discharge can be allowed to enter into engagements in which he has or can have a personal interest conflicting or which possibly may conflict with the interests of those whom he is bound to protect, see Transvaal Lands Co. v. New Belgium, etc. Land Co., [1914] 2 Ch. 488.

The above section does not apply to rate-compounding agreements entered into with a council under the Poor Law Assessment and Collection Act, 1869, s. 3 (Holden v. Southwark Corporation, [1921] 1 Ch. 550; 85 J. P. 126).

A trustee of a turnpike road who let his horse and cart at a certain sum to the trustees' contractor for use on the particular road, was held liable to a penalty as being interested or concerned in a contract with the turnpike trustees (Towsey v. White (1826), 5 B. & C. 125; 7 D. & R. 810). The local board of S., who were the town council, having contracted with a person to supply iron railings, an alderman of the borough sold, in the way of his trade, to the contractor, some iron to enable him to complete his contract. It was held that the alderman was not interested in the contract (Le Feuvre v. Lancaster (1854), 3 El. & Bl. 530; 18 J. P. 198). But as to this case see Tomkins v. Jolliffe (1887), 51 J. P. 247. There C., who had contracted with a local board to make certain alterations to gas fittings in the town hall, employed the defendant, a member of the board and a builder, to erect scaffolding for the purpose of enabling him to effect the alterations. It was held that the defendant was interested or concerned in a contract with the board.

F. was elected a town councillor in 1846, and was re-elected in 1849. In 1843 he had undertaken to bind the books and documents of the council. No sum was fixed for his remuneration, but in 1849, while he was still engaged in his undertaking, he agreed to complete it for £150, the amount of his disbursements. There was no contract under seal. In July, 1849, he received £50 on account. It was held that he was interested in a contract with the council, though he might not have been able to enforce it for want of the corporate seal (R. v. Francis (1852), 18 Q. B.

Note to Section 46.

526; 16 J. P. 664). It was said by ALDERSON, B, that a somewhat similar clause in a local Act did not apply to a contract made before the defendant became a member, though he had not received the money. He said also that "a single bargain, as if the commissioners bought a brush in a shop, would not disqualify the seller, though the price had not been paid" (Woolley v. Kay (1856), 20 J. P. 776; 1 H. & N. 307). In Nicholson v. Fields (1862), 7 H. & N. 810, the evidence against a commissioner for being concerned in a contract with the commissioners consisted of an invoice in his writing addressed to the commissioners and charging them for lime supplied on several occasions during four months. It was held that this was sufficient evidence. This decision was followed in Lewis v. Carr (1876), 1 Ex. D. 484, where BRAMWELL, B., referring to the corresponding clause in the Municipal Corporations Act, 1835, said: "I think if a shilling's worth of stationery were bought of an alderman, there would be a contract between the corporation and that alderman." But, in another place, he added: "I doubt very much whether the legislature intended these words to comprehend the case when there was a trifling dealing over the counter, and when the price of the articles was well known." When a member of a local board received payment of £19 19*s.* 9*d.* from the board, to reimburse him for work done for the surveyor of the board, the work consisting of the use of men and horses at intervals during two years, it was held that he was disqualified (Fletcher v. Hudson (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 611; 46 J. P. 372).

The defendant's brother entered into a contract with a vestry under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, and in order to carry it out borrowed money from the defendant, who by way of security took an assignment of the contract. Afterwards, the defendant was elected a member of the vestry. It was held that he was interested in a contract with the vestry (Hunnings v. Williamson (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 533; 48 J. P. 132). See also Simpson v. Ready (1844), 12 M. & W. 736 (contract with a councillor's trustee), and R. v. Franklin (1870), 6 Ir. R. C. L. (councillor as guarantor). Where an officer of a local board was appointed to superintend drainage works as their engineer, receiving by way of remuneration a percentage on the outlay, it was held that he had an interest in the contract between the board and their contractor (Whiteley v. Barley (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 154; 52 J. P. 595). The defendant, a member of a local board, was employed by persons who had contracted for the performance of certain work on the board's premises to do a portion of the work contracted for. It was held that he had been concerned in contracts entered into by the board within the meaning of the P. H. A., 1875, Sched. II., r. 64 (now repealed). LOPES, L.J., said: "I express no opinion with regard to such very trifling matters as were suggested in the argument, e.g., the purchase of a paint-brush, or a few nails from a member of the board. It may be that the maxim de minimis non curat lex would be applicable in such cases" (Nutton v. Wilson (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 744; 53 J. P. 644). In R. v. Rowlands, post, p. 956, Lord ALVERSTONE, C.J., with reference to this point, said: "I was at first impressed by the fact that the amount of the commission paid was a small amount; but I am now satisfied that we ought not to take into account the smallness of the sum, because the absolute freedom from the position which the entering into any such contract involves should be maintained"; and cf. also Nell v. Longbottom, p. 958, post.

The defendant, who was a member of a municipal corporation, carried on business as a jeweller and optician. The optical department was managed by his son, who was not a partner but a paid employee. A contract was made between his son in his own name and the corporation for the supply of spectacles to the children of the schools controlled by the Corporation Education Committee. The contract was carried out by the son, the spectacles were paid for by him with his own cheque, and he received payment in his own name from the corporation and paid the amount so received into his own banking account. The spectacles were supplied in cases bearing the son's name, but the defendant's business address, some of the cases being taken at the expense of the defendant out of his stock. The son alone derived direct pecuniary benefit from the contract, but the shop was provided, and the establishment expenses paid by the defendant, and the fact that the spectacle cases bore his address helped to advertise his business with the consequent probability of increasing his custom. It was held that on these facts there was evidence in which the court could find that the defendant had an interest in a contract with the corporation (England v. Inglis, [1920] 2 K. B. 636; 84 J. P. 198).

Note to Section 46.

A. and S. were under contract to repair roads and do other work for a borough council. In October A. dissolved the partnership and made over the contracts to S. In November A. was elected town councillor for a ward in the borough. It was held that A. was disqualified on the ground that he remained liable under his contracts (cf. R. v. Franklin, ante, p. 955). The petitioner had published a notice before the election to the effect that A. was disqualified by reason of the contracts with the council, and the question was publicly discussed in the ward :—Held, that votes given for A., whose disqualification was notorious, were thrown away, and that the petitioner (who had the next highest number of votes) must be declared elected (Cox v. Ambrose (1890), 60 L. J. Q. B. 114 ; 55 J. P. 23). As to the latter point, compare Hobbs v. Morey, [1904] 1 K. B. 74 ; 68 J. P. 132, where it was held that, as the disqualification of the respondent was not apparent on the face of his nomination, and as notice of his disqualification had not been given to the electorate previous to the election, the votes given for him could not be treated as thrown away, and that the petitioner (the only other candidate) could not be deemed to be elected. This case was followed in Boyce v. White (1905), 92 L. T. 240 ; 53 W. R. 430.

A member of a school board sold a quantity of gravel and sand to one who had contracted with the board to build certain schools. He knew that they were to be used in the building of the schools, and it was held that he had committed an offence against the Elementary Education Act, 1870, s. 34, as having been concerned in work done under the authority of the board (Barnacle v. Clark, [1900] 1 Q. B. 279 ; 64 J. P. 87). So, also, a member of a council who supplied coals to the trustees of a school who had an agreement with the council by which the latter eventually paid for the coals, was held to have an interest in such contract (Cox v. Truscott (1905), 69 J. P. 174 ; 92 L. T. 650) ; see also Tanfield v. Reynolds (1875), 39 J. P. 293, a case of a contract to do printing for a school board election. A concealed interest in a contract made colourably in the name of another person is sufficient to disqualify (Walsh v. Grimsley (1900), Times, November 30th). Where a respondent in answer to an advertisement had offered to supply to a council for twelve months certain goods at specified prices and the offer was accepted, it was held that the advertisement, tender, and acceptance constituted a contract in which he had an interest (Ford v. Newth, [1901] 1 Q. B. 683 ; 65 J. P. 391). Whether a member becomes disqualified merely by supplying goods to a contractor in the ordinary way of business and not knowing for what purpose they are wanted by the contractor has apparently never been decided. It is clear that under such circumstances he is not within the terms of a statute which forbid him to be "knowingly" interested in a contract (Norton v. Taylor, [1906] A. C. 378 ; 70 J. P. 433) ; but in the case of a section which (like s. 46, supra) does not make use of the word "knowingly," it may well be that the absence of knowledge does not affect the question.

Whether a person who has actually performed his part of a contract with a council, but has not received payment, is disqualified or not has never been expressly decided. The better opinion, however, would seem to be that he is, on the ground that until actual payment questions or disputes may arise between him and the authority, and that therefore he is still "concerned or interested" in the contract : see Ford v. Newth, supra ; Cox v. Truscott, supra ; O'Carroll v. Hastings, [1905] 2 I. R. 590. How long the interest in the contract continues may be important in considering whether an action for penalties has been brought in time : see Todd v. Robinson (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 739 ; 49 J. P. 278. The disqualification attaches at the moment when a person enters into or becomes concerned or interested in a contract (Ford v. Newth, supra), and a member remains disqualified though his contract is terminated ; where a member has incurred disqualification it is the duty of a council to declare his seat vacant and proceed to another election (R. v. Rowlands, [1906] 2 K. B. 292 ; 70 J. P. 463). Cf. also, as to the duration of the disqualification, Lewis v. Carr, ante, p. 955, and Cox v. Truscott, supra, decided on the differently worded provisions of the Municipal Corporations Acts, 1835 and 1882, and O'Carroll v. Hastings, supra. The ratification by the council of a resolution of a committee releasing a party from his contract with a view to his election cannot relate back to the date of the decision of the committee because the interests of other parties may be affected (Ford v. Newth, supra ; cf. Hyde v. Hosford (1911), 46 Ir. L. T. 59). As to the liability of a member for contracts entered into by an agent without his knowledge or against his orders, see Miles v. McIlwraith (1883), 8 App. Cas. 120. Note to Section 46.

In Kearse v. O'Mahony (1910), 44 Ir. L. T. 231, it was doubted whether the office of rate collector was such a " contract or bargain " as is contemplated by the corresponding Irish provision ; the collector having died insolvent, it was held that his next-of-kin (a councillor) was not interested in the contract or bargain (if any). See R. v. Roscommon JJ., [1906] 2 I. R. 173, as to a guardian buying seed potatoes from his board.

In Melliss v. Shirley L. B. (1884), 16 Q. B. D. 446 ; 50 J. P. 214, it was held that a contract between a local board and an officer of the board was by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 193, altogether void and could not be enforced. The text, however, deals with the question of the disqualification of members, and it would appear from dicta in Read v. Punter (1898), 14 T. L. R. 455, that contracts which entail disqualification under it are not necessarily void. WILLS, J., appeared to take the view that, if (and only if) a member was present at the meeting which entered into the contract and voted for the contract, the contract would be void, because while voting for the contract eo instanti he would be disqualified from entering into it. Whatever may be the position as to contracts entered into whilst a contracting party is a member of an authority, it appears to be clear that the legality of a contract entered into prior to his membership cannot be affected. As to the position in this respect of a contract within s. 193 of the P. H. A., 1875, see Melliss v. Shirley L. B., supra. COTTON, L.J., in that case seemed to be of opinion that a contract in which an officer became interested after it had been made would not be void, though the officer would be prohibited from taking any benefit under it. And see City of London Electric Lighting Co. v. London Corporation, [1903] A. C. 434 ; 67 J. P. 437, a case decided under the City of London Sewers Act, 1848, s. 42. See also Pontefract Corporation v. Lowden (1915), 84 L. J. K. B. 1800 ; 79 J. P. 392.

The stringent provisions of this sub-section are relaxed by the next sub-section and by s. 11 of the Infectious Diseases (Notification) Act, 1889, p. 803, ante.

(2) Provided that a person shall not be disqualified for being elected or being a member or chairman of any such council or board by reason of being interested—

(a) In the sale or lease of any lands or in any loan of money to the council or board, or in any contract with the council for the supply from land, of which he is owner or occupier, of stone, gravel, or other materials for making or repairing highways or bridges, or in the transport of materials for the repair of roads or bridges in his own immediate neighbourhood ; or

(b) In any newspaper in which any advertisement relating to the affairs of the council or board is inserted ; or

(c) In any contract with the council or board as a shareholder in any joint stock company ; but he shall not vote at any meeting of the council or board on any question in which such company are interested, except that in the case of a water company or other company established for the carrying on of works of a like public nature this prohibition may be dispensed with by the county council.

Excepted contracts and interests.

The exceptions as to sales or leases of lands and loans of money are similar to those contained in the P. H. A., 1875, Sched. II., r. 64 (repealed by this Act). Reference may be made to R. v. Gaskarth (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 321 : 44 J. P. 507, where it was held that a member of a sanitary authority was not disqualified by taking from the authority a lease of their sewage farm containing covenants by them to supply, and by him to use on the demised premises, the sewage of the district. LUSH, J., said that the words were intended to cover a lease of a farm for agricultural and sewage purposes, whether made by or to the sanitary authority.

Note to Section 46.

This case was followed in Local Government Board v. Eivers, [1902] 2 I. R. 262. It has also been held that the letting of a building for the purposes of a polling station at an election is within this exception (Nell v. Longbottom, [1894] 1 Q. B. 767). A member might also lawfully sell to his council a right of way, which is an incorporeal hereditament and so included in the word "lands." See Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 3, which provides that the expression "land" shall include messuages, tenements, and hereditaments, houses, and buildings of any tenure (Jones v. Watts (1890), 43 Ch. D. 574).

The remainder of clause (a) was new. It enables the owner or occupier of a quarry or gravel pit who is a member of the council to sell stone or gravel, and the owner or occupier of any land to sell other materials from his land for the making or repair of highways or bridges. (Compare 54 & 55 Vict. c. 63, s. 5.) It further enables a member to contract with his council for the transport of materials for such repairs, with this limitation, that the highways or bridges must be in his own immediate neighbourhood. Formerly a "waywarden" who desired to contract for the supply or cartage of materials for his parish required a justices' licence under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 101, s. 20, but no such licence is required by a member of a district council in cases coming within this clause (Buckley v. Hanson (1898), 62 J. P. 119; 77 L. T. 664). Selling sand or gravel for purposes other than the repair of highways or bridges would not be within the protection of the sub-section (Barnacle v. Clark (1899), 69 L. J. Q. B. 15; 81 L. T. 484).

Clauses (b) and (c) resemble the similar provisions in the P. H. A., 1875, Sched. II., r. 64 (now repealed), except that the prohibition which may be dispensed with under clause (c) may be dispensed with by the county council instead of the L. G. B. A further power of dispensation by the county council is contained in the next sub-section.

Semble, the provision as to shareholders will not cover shareholders who are also directors or officers, if as such they have a special interest in the contract.

(3) Where a person who is a parish councillor, or is a candidate for election as a parish councillor, is concerned in any such bargain or contract, or participates in any such profit, as would disqualify him for being a parish councillor, the disqualification may be removed by the county council if they are of opinion that such removal will be beneficial to the parish.

This provision applies only to parish councillors, not to district councillors. And it extends only to disqualifications arising out of interests in contracts under sub-s. (1) (e). The removal of the disqualification will probably be made in most cases on the application of the councillor or candidate.

(4) Where a person is disqualified by being adjudged bankrupt or making a composition or arrangement with his creditors, the disqualification shall cease, in case of bankruptcy, when the adjudication is annulled, or when he obtains his discharge with a certificate that his bankruptcy was caused by misfortune without any misconduct on his part, and, in case of composition or arrangement, on payment of his debts in full.

This provision is the same as that contained in the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 32, already noticed.

In the case of composition or arrangement the disqualification will continue during the full period of five years unless in the meantime the debts are paid in full. As to the meaning of "payment of debts in full," see In re Keet, [1905] 2 K. B. 666.

(5) A person disqualified for being a guardian shall also be disqualified for being a rural district councillor.

Note to Section 46.

Other disqualifications of guardians and rural councillors.

This provision is necessary, as there are some disqualifications attaching to the office of guardian which do not attach to the office of a rural district councillor under this Act. Thus by the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1842, s. 14, no assistant overseer, paid officer engaged in the administration of the poor laws, and no person who having been such a paid officer has been dismissed under the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834, within five years previously can be a guardian anywhere; further no person receiving a fixed salary or emolument from the poor rates in any parish or union can be a guardian in it. The Poor Law Board considered that the term "paid officer" included a treasurer, chaplain, public vaccinator, and registrar of births and deaths. A salary paid out of a fund supplied in part (by precepts) out of the poor rate has been held not to be paid out of the poor rate (R. v. Rawlins (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 382; 50 J. P. 5). These disqualifications have no application to urban district councillors.

(6) If a member of a council of a parish, or of a district other than a borough, or of a board of guardians, is absent from meetings of the council or board for more than six months consecutively, except in case of illness or for some reason approved by the council or board, his office shall on the expiration of those months become vacant.

Absence from meetings.

A somewhat similar provision relating to the absence from the borough of councillors of a borough is contained in the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 39. Compare also s. 10 (1) of the Trustee Act, 1893, and see In re Walker, Summers v. Barrow, [1901] 1 Ch. 259, decided thereunder. But relief from disqualification by reason of absence as an officer or soldier of the auxiliary or reserve forces on active service or on service beyond the seas, is given by the Members of Local Authorities Relief Act, 1900, post, p. 1010. As to what amounts to an "attendance" at a meeting reference may be made to Richardson v. Methley School Board, post, p. 960. The length of absence is to be determined by reckoning from the first meeting which the member in question failed to attend, and not from the last one which he actually attended (Kershaw v. Shoreditch Borough Council (1906), 70 J. P. 190; 95 L. T. 55). A councillor whose absence is due to illness need not notify such illness to the council (R. v. Hunton (1911), 75 J. P. 335).

As to whether it is necessary that the seat should be declared vacant under the next sub-section before a vacancy actually takes place, see notes thereto.

(7) Where a member of a council or board of guardians becomes disqualified for holding office, or vacates his seat for absence, the council or board shall forthwith declare the office to be vacant, and signify the same by notice signed by three members and countersigned by the clerk of the council or board, and notified in such manner as the council or board direct, and the office shall thereupon become vacant.

Declaration of vacancy.

The L. G. B. informed a district council that they had been advised by the Law Officers that the office of a member who had been absent did not become vacant until the council had declared the office to be vacant. A council must, as the Law Officers advised, consider whether illness or an excuse approved by them prevents the office from being vacated, and they further advised that the approval of a reason for absence may be effectually given after the expiration of six months of absence. In support of this view reference may be made to the similar provision in the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 39, and cases decided with reference to it (R. v. Leeds (Mayor, etc. of) (1838), 7 A. & E. 963; Hardwick v. Brown (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 406; 37 J. P. 407; R. v. Welshpool (Mayor, etc. of) (1876), 35 L. T. 594). But in R. v. Hunton, supra, the court appeared to think that if the absence is not due to illness the councillor is disqualified from acting, at all events until his excuse has been considered and accepted by the council; and that he cannot by merely resuming attendance do away with the disqualification. See also R. v. Kilkenny JJ., [1912] 2 I. R. 1. There under differently worded provisions it was held in proceedings for a penalty that absence for six months amounted to a "disqualification" without any "declaration" of a vacancy and that the "illness or reason approved by the council" was a matter of defence to be proved by evidence before the justices.

It was held under the Education Act, 1870, that a school board was not entitled to proceed to the election of a new member without first giving the defaulting member an opportunity of explaining or excusing his absence (Richardson v. Methley School Board, [1893] 3 Ch. 510).

(8) If any person acts when disqualified, or votes when prohibited under this section, he shall for each offence be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding twenty pounds.

Penalty.

This fine will be recoverable before justices in manner provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts: see 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 51. Any person may prosecute (Kenealy v. O'Keeffe, [1901] 2 I. R. 39). But the fine is payable to the treasurer of the county under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 31. The amount of the fine to be imposed in any given case will be in the discretion of the justices. There is no appeal to quarter sessions against the conviction, but a special case may be stated upon any point of law.

A person disqualified may also be restrained by injunction from acting (Walsh v. Grimsley, ante, p. 956).

It has been held that a person duly elected is not "disqualified" within the corresponding provision of the Irish Act by reason of his not having made the declaration of acceptance of office (R. v. Longford JJ., [1903] 2 I. R. 677).

Under a similar provision in the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, a disqualified person was held liable to a fine though the time for presenting an election petition had elapsed (De Souza v. Cobden, [1891] 1 Q. B. 687; 55 J. P. 565). Note that a conviction under this sub-section will not of itself amount to a disqualification under sub-s. (1) (c). Compare the provisions of an Irish statute and the case of Hastings v. O'Carroll, [1915] 2 I. R. 4.

(9) This section shall apply in the case of any authority whose members are elected in accordance with this Act in like manner as if that authority were a district council. . . .

The remainder of this section related to London auditors and is repealed.

Supplemental provisions as to elections, polls and tenure of office.

48.—(1) . . .

(2) Rules framed under this Act by the Local Government Board in relation to elections shall, notwithstanding anything in any other Act, have effect as if enacted in this Act (a), and shall provide, amongst other things—

(i) For every candidate being nominated in writing by two parochial electors as proposer and seconder and no more (b);

(ii) For preventing an elector at an election for a union or for a district not a borough from subscribing a nomination paper or voting in more than one parish or other area in the union or district (c);

(iii) For preventing an elector at an election for a parish divided into parish wards from subscribing a nomination paper or voting for more than one ward (d);

(iv) For fixing or enabling the county council to fix the day of the poll and the hours during which the poll is to be kept open, so,

however, that the poll shall always be open between the hours of six and eight in the evening (e);

(v) For the polls at elections held at the same date and in the same area being taken together, except where this is impracticable (f);

(vi) For the appointment of returning officers for the elections (g).

(a) For the Local Government Board must now be read the Secretary of State. See the Ministry of Health Registrations and Elections Transfer Order, 1921.

For the rules now in force see App. II., post. The rules hitherto in force have been amended by the order of 1919 referred to in the note to s. 23 (5), ante.

(b) The rules prescribe the form of the nomination paper and the mode in which it is to be signed. It has been held with reference to the Rural District Councillors Election Order, 1898, that a nomination paper may be signed by the proposer and seconder before the name of the candidate is filled in (Cox v. Davies, [1898] 2 Q. B. 202).

Where, at a contested election of county councillors, a candidate dies between the date of the nomination and that of the poll, it is the duty of the returning officer to countermand the notice of the poll and to stop the proceedings (R. v. Stewart, [1898] 1 Q. B. 552; 62 J. P. 229). This decision was based on the view that a provision in s. 1 of the Ballot Act, 1872, was applied to the election of county councillors, but that section is not one of the provisions of the Act of 1872 applied by the election orders to elections under this Act. Where a candidate's death was not reported to the returning officer until after the poll had opened, it was held that the poll should have been allowed to proceed (Urquhart v. Air, [1910] S. C. 54). The election rules do not prescribe the course which should be adopted by the returning officer in a case of this kind, and he should apply to the L. G. B. for a direction, as in the rules the Board have reserved to themselves a power of giving directions as to the conduct of an election.

(c) A voter at an election of guardians or district councillors may nominate or vote only once, though he may be qualified to nominate or vote in more than one parish or area. In such a case he may elect in which parish or area in the same union or district he proposes to nominate or vote.

(d) Where a parish is divided into wards, no elector is to nominate or vote in more than one ward.

(e) The poll must always be kept open from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m., but, subject to this, the hours are to be fixed by the county council.

(f) The intention appears to be that in rural districts the elections of parish and rural district councillors shall be conducted at the same time, and in urban districts the election of guardians and urban district councillors. Reference should be made to the rules to determine in what cases the polls at elections of parish and rural district councillors and of guardians and urban district councillors shall be taken together. In boroughs in ordinary years the guardians will come into office on April 15th (s. 20 (6), ante, p. 925), while the borough councillors are elected on November 1st, so that these elections cannot be held together.

(g) By r. 12 of the Guardians (Outside London) Election Order, 1898, if any parish is co-extensive with an urban district for which an election of urban district councillors is to be held other than a borough, or with any ward or wards of any such urban district, or is wholly comprised in any such district which is not divided into wards, or in any one ward of such a district which is divided into wards, the poll for the election of guardians for the parish and any poll for the election of urban district councillors shall be taken together, and by r. 13 under such circumstances the returning officer at the election of urban district councillors shall be the deputy returning officer for certain purposes in relation to the poll for the election of guardians. It was held under these rules that a clerk to an urban district council was not entitled to act as deputy returning officer for the election of guardians of a parish which was not co-extensive with the urban district or with any ward or wards of such district. The parish contained the whole of three wards and a portion of a fourth ward, but the clerk based his claim on the fact that the urban district was co-extensive with the area of three parishes in the union (R. v. Carter (1904),

Note to Section 48.

68 J. P. 466). The county council might have given directions to the contrary, but had not done so.

Under the rules the returning officer is not entitled to vote unless there is a tie. If he does, a petition will lie to unseat the candidate for whom he so votes (Re Whitley and Monkseaton Election, Brittain v. Ritchie (1899), 43 Sol. J. 532), and he himself will be liable to an action for penalties (Brittain v. Whitehorn (1900), Times, March 30th). Neither a returning officer nor a deputy returning officer may give a casting vote in the case of a tie unless he is a voter in the place (i.e., ward or other district) for which the election is held. See Watts v. Hemming (1907), 71 J. P. 504, where on such a vote being given the person who received the vote was unseated on petition. See also the same case upon the question of the costs of a petition under such circumstances.

(3) At every election regulated by rules framed under this Act, the poll shall be taken by ballot, and the Ballot Act, 1872, and the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, and sections seventy-four and seventy-five and Part IV. of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, as amended by the last-mentioned Act (including the penal provisions of those Acts), shall, subject to adaptations, alterations, and exceptions made by such rules, apply in like manner as in the case of a municipal election. Provided that—

(a) Section six of the Ballot Act, 1872, shall apply in the case of such elections, and the returning officer may, in addition to using the schools and public rooms therein referred to free of charge, for taking the poll, use the same, free of charge, for hearing objections to nomination papers and for counting votes; and

(b) Section thirty-seven of the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, shall apply as if the election were an election mentioned in the First Schedule to that Act.

Section 74 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, deals with certain offences in relation to nomination papers. It provides that if any person forges (as to forged papers see now the Forgery Act, 1913) or fraudulently defaces or fraudulently destroys any nomination paper, or knowingly delivers any forged nomination paper, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour and liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding six months. An attempt to commit any of these offences is punishable in the same way. Section 75 relates to offences by overseers and returning officers. The rules contain adaptations of both these sections. Part IV. relates to corrupt practices and election petitions, and as amended by the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884 was already applicable to elections of borough councillors, local boards, improvement commissioners, and guardians. The provisions of both these Acts are set out in App. I., post, Vol. II., and they are applied to elections under this Act with slight modifications by the rules. See App. I. also for the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1911.

Section 6 of the Ballot Act, 1872, enables the returning officer to use, free of charge, for the purpose of taking the poll, any room in a school receiving a grant out of moneys provided by Parliament, and any room the expense of maintaining which is defrayed out of a local rate, but he must make good any damage done to the room and defray any expense consequent on its being used for the poll. The text enables the room to be used for hearing objections to nomination papers and for counting votes.

Section 37 of the Act of 1884 exempts certain elections from the provisions contained in the Act as to maximum expenses. Such exemption extends to elections under this Act.

Section 48.

(4) The provisions of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, and the enactments amending the same, with respect to the expenses of elections (a) of councillors of a borough, and to the acceptance of office (b), resignation (c), re-eligibility of holders of office (d), and the filling of casual vacancies (e), and section fifty-six of that Act (f), shall, subject to the adaptations, alterations, and exceptions made by the said rules, apply in the case of guardians and of district councillors of a county district not a borough, and of members of the local board of Woolwich (g), and of a vestry under the Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 to 1890, and any Act amending the same (h). Provided that—

(a) The provisions as to resignation shall not apply to guardians, and district councillors of a rural district shall be in the same position with respect to resignation as members of a board of guardians (i); and

(b) Nothing in the enactments applied by this section shall authorise or require a returning officer to hold an election to fill a casual vacancy which occurs within six months before the ordinary day of retirement from the office in which the vacancy occurs, and the vacancy shall be filled at the next ordinary election (k); and

(c) The rules may provide for the incidence of the charge for the expenses of the elections of guardians being the same as heretofore.

(a) In municipal elections the expenses are payable out of the borough fund (Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 140, Sched. III., Part 3, r. (5), and Sched. V., Part 2, r. (1)). As to the expenses at other elections, see the rules which are set out in App. II., post, Vol. II.

(b) In a borough every qualified person elected to a corporate office must accept the office or pay to the council a fine (in the case of a councillor) of such amount, not exceeding £50, as may be fixed by a byelaw of the council, or if there is no byelaw, £25 (Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 34). In the case of a district council the fine is such an amount not exceeding £50, as the council by regulation determine, or if there are no regulations determining fines, £20 (Sched. V. of the Election Order).

As to the various exemptions from serving in public offices, see note to the Post Office Act, 1908, s. 43, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

(c) In a borough a councillor may resign at any time by writing, signed by him and delivered to the town clerk, on payment of the fine provided for non-acceptance of office (Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 36), and on delivery of the writing and payment of the fine the resignation is complete and cannot afterwards be withdrawn (R. v. Mayor of Wigan (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 908; 49 J. P. 372); although there is no actual vacancy until the council "declare" one (Pease v. Lowden, [1899] 1 Q. B. 386; 63 J. P. 56). These provisions are only to apply to urban district councillors (see sub-s. (a), supra). The rules adapt this provision in the case of urban district councils other than those of boroughs by substituting the clerk of the urban district council for the town clerk.

(d) In a borough a person ceasing to hold a corporate office, unless disqualified to hold the office, is re-eligible (Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 37). The rules now in force repeat this provision.

(e) By the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 40, on a casual vacancy in a corporate office, an election is to be held by the same persons and in the same manner as an election to fill an ordinary vacancy; and the person elected is to hold the office until the time when the person in whose place he is elected would regularly have gone out of office, and is then to go out of office. In case of more than one casual vacancy being filled at the same election, the councillor elected by the smallest number of votes is to be deemed to be elected in the place of him who would regularly have first gone out of office, and the councillor elected by the next smallest number of votes is to be deemed to be elected in the place of him who would regularly have next gone out of office, and so with respect to the others; and if there has not been a contested election, or any doubt arises, the order of rotation is to be determined by the council. Section 66 of the same Act prescribed the time for the filling of casual vacancies. The rules adapting these enactments are set out in App. II., post, Vol. II.; effect is given therein to proviso (b), supra. Non-acceptance of office creates a casual vacancy.

(f) Section 56 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, provides as follows:

(1) If the number of valid nominations exceeds that of the vacancies, the councillors shall be elected from among the persons nominated.

(2) If the number of valid nominations is the same as that of the vacancies, the persons nominated shall be deemed to be elected.

(3) If the number of valid nominations is less than that of the vacancies, the persons nominated shall be deemed to be elected, and such of the retiring councillors for the borough or ward as were highest on the poll at their election, or if the poll was equal, or there was no poll, as are selected for that purpose by the mayor, shall be deemed to be re-elected to make up the required number.

(4) If there is no valid nomination the retiring councillors shall be deemed to be re-elected.

(g) These words relating to the local board of Woolwich were repealed by 62 & 63 Vict. c. 14, s. 35 (2), and Sched. III.

(h) Metropolitan borough councils were substituted for the vestries by s. 4 of London Government Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 14).

(i) The resignation of guardians is regulated by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 57, s. 11, which enables the Ministry of Health to accept the resignation of any person "elected as" a guardian for any cause they may deem reasonable.

The resignation of a rural district councillor elected in the ordinary way requires to be accepted by the Ministry of Health in the same manner as that of a guardian; but the Ministry apparently consider that a chairman elected from outside the council can resign without any such consent.

(k) This proviso is similar to that applicable to elections of county councillors in 54 & 55 Vict. c. 68, s. 1 (4). The law officers have advised that unless the person whose retirement has caused a casual vacancy would himself have retired at the election to be held within six months after the occurrence of the casual vacancy a special election to fill the vacancy must be held (60 J. P. 800).

(5) If any difficulty arises as respects the election of any individual councillor or guardian, or member of any such . . . vestry as aforesaid, . . . and there is no provision for holding another election, the county council may order a new election to be held and give such directions as may be necessary for the purpose of holding the election.

Omitted words relating to the Woolwich local board and London auditors, were repealed by 62 & 63 Vict. c. 14, s. 35 (2), and Sched. III.

The text does not in any way indicate the kind of difficulties for which it provides and the language is so wide and vague that it might apply to any objection which could be raised to the validity of an election. It will not, however, supersede the ordinary modes of trying a question of validity of an election, viz., by election petition or quo warranto. The section has been made use of in cases where, by reason of equality of votes, there have been double returns. It may be applicable to cases where a candidate has died after nomination and before poll. See the observations as to the power of the county council under this section and s. 80 (1) post, p. 987 (now practically re-enacted as to elections other than first elections by the Local Government (Elections) Act, 1896), in R. v. Miles (Ex parte Col... (1895), 64 L. J. Q. B. 420; 59 J. P. 407.

(6) Any ballot boxes, fittings, and compartments provided by or belonging to any public authority, for any election (whether parliamentary, county council, municipal, school board, or other), shall, on request, and if not required for immediate use by the said authority, be lent to the returning officer for an election under this Act, upon such conditions and either free of charge, or, except in the prescribed cases, for such reasonable charge as may be prescribed. Section 48.

The conditions and rates of charge will be prescribed by the Ministry of Health: see s. 75 (2), post, at p. 985.

(7) The expenses of any election under this Act shall not exceed the scale fixed by the county council, and if at the beginning of one month before the first election under this Act a county council have not framed any such scale for their county, the Local Government Board may frame a scale for the county, and the scale so framed shall apply to the first election, and shall have effect as if it had been made by the county council, but shall not be alterable until after the first election.

The expenses here referred to are those of the returning officer.

50. If, in the case of a rural parish or of any urban parish in respect to which the power of appointing overseers has been transferred under this Act, notice in the prescribed form of the appointment of overseers is not received by the guardians of the poor law union comprising the parish within three weeks after the fifteenth day of April, or after the occurrence of a vacancy in the office of overseer, as the case may be, the guardians shall make the appointment or fill the vacancy, and any overseer appointed by the guardians shall supersede any overseer previously appointed whose appointment has not been notified. Any such notice shall be admissible as evidence that the appointment has been duly made. Supplemental provisions as to overseers.

The power of appointing overseers in an urban parish may be transferred to the urban authority or any representative body within the district, by order of the Ministry of Health under s. 33, ante, p. 943. When the power is transferred to an urban authority they must give notice to the guardians under this section, and such notice is admissible as evidence that the appointment was duly made.

The section prescribes a time within which the notice is to be given, viz., within three weeks after April 15th (the day on which the new parish council comes into office in each year) or after the occurrence of a vacancy in the office of overseer. If the notice is not received by the guardians within that period, they are required by this section to make the appointment themselves, and the overseer appointed by them is to supersede any previously appointed overseer whose appointment has not been notified. This supersession will, it is submitted, only take place as from the date of the appointment of the overseer by the board of guardians, and acts done before that date by any overseer whose appointment fails for want of notification will not be void.

52. . . . Supplemental provisions as to transfer of powers.

(3) The consent of justices shall not be required for the sale of land belonging to a parish which has been used for materials for the repair

Section 52. of highways or for the purchase of land with the proceeds of any such sale.

By s. 48 of the Highway Act, 1835, where land has been allotted to parishes under the Inclosure Acts (see the Inclosure Act, 1845, s. 72), for the purpose of obtaining materials for the repair of the highways in such parish, and the materials have been exhausted: "It shall and may be lawful for the surveyor of such parish for the time being, by and with the consent of the vestry, and he is hereby authorised and required, with the consent in writing of the justices of the peace at a special sessions for the highways, to sell and convey to some person whose lands adjoin thereto, or, if he refuse to purchase, to any other person, the said parcels of land from which the said materials have been so exhausted as aforesaid, at and for such price as the said justices may deem fair and reasonable, and with the money arising therefrom, and with such consent as aforesaid, to purchase other lands in lieu thereof." The 8 & 9 Vict. c. 71 extended these provisions to all lands belonging to parishes, or to the surveyor of highways for the purpose of the repair of highways, the materials in which have been exhausted.

In an urban district the powers of the surveyor, and also those given to the vestry by the Act of 1835, are exercisable by the urban authority (P. H. A., 1875, s. 144). In a rural district such powers are exercisable by the rural district council (see s. 25 of this Act).

The consent of justices required by s. 48 of the Act of 1835 is no longer necessary.

Where the lands have been acquired by a parish, not only for the purpose of the supply of material for the repair of the roads, but for other purposes also, s. 48 of the Act of 1835 does not apply, and in order to sell the land, when the materials are exhausted or are not suitable, and the land is not available for the other purposes, recourse must be had to the Exhausted Parish Lands Act, 1876. Under that Act the land is to be dealt with as parish property under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 69, and the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 18, and no consent of justices to the sale is required.

Supplemental provisions as to adoptive Acts.

53.—(1) Where on the appointed day any of the adoptive Acts is in force in a part only of a rural parish, the existing authority under the Act, or the parish meeting for that part, may transfer the powers, duties, and liabilities of the authority to the parish council, subject to any conditions with respect to the execution thereof by means of a committee as to the authority or parish meeting may seem fit, and any such conditions may be altered by any such parish meeting.

The adoptive Acts are enumerated in s. 7 of this Act. They are the Lighting and Watching Act, 1833; the Baths and Washhouses Acts, 1846 to 1882; the Burial Acts, 1852 to 1906; the Public Improvements Act, 1860; and the Public Libraries Acts, 1892 to 1919.

(2) If the area on the appointed day under any authority under any of the adoptive Acts will not after that day be comprised within one rural parish, the powers and duties of the authority shall be transferred to the parish councils of the rural parishes wholly or partly comprised in the area, or, if the area is partly comprised in an urban district, to those parish councils and the district council of the urban district, and shall, until other provision is made in pursuance of this Act, be exercised by a joint committee appointed by those councils. Where any such rural parish has not a parish council the parish meeting shall, for the purposes of this provision, be substituted for the parish council.

Note to Section 53.

Under sub-s. (1) the executive authority, e.g., a burial board, lighting inspectors, or parish meeting, "may transfer the powers, duties, and liabilities of the authority"; under this sub-section "the powers and duties of the authority shall be transferred." See sub-s. (3), infra, and s. 67, post, p. 979, as to the effect of this transfer.

This sub-section had an extensive application, particularly in regard to burial areas. In many instances before the passing of this Act a parish in which the Burial Acts were in force was partly in an urban district. That part, speaking generally, became a separate parish. In such cases the provisions of this sub-section applied, and the powers and duties of the commissioners or other authority under the adoptive Act passed upon the appointed day to the governing bodies of the areas which were wholly or partly comprised in the area under the adoptive Act. These governing bodies are, in the case of a rural parish wholly or partly comprised in the area under the adoptive Act, the parish council, where it exists, and where it does not exist, the parish meeting; in the case of an urban district comprising part of the area under the adoptive Act, the urban district council.

The bodies to whom these powers and duties were jointly transferred were required to appoint a joint committee to exercise and perform them. Doubts having arisen whether the provisions of s. 57, post, p. 971, were applicable to a joint committee appointed under this section, the Local Government (Joint Committees) Act, 1897, post, p. 1007, was passed to clear up part of the difficulty. By that Act in the case of a joint committee appointed under this section for the purposes of the Burial Acts, expenses are to be defrayed and money borrowed and receipts divided by the councils appointing the committee; the consent of the Ministry of Health, but no other consent, is necessary to borrowing; and the proceedings of the committee are regulated by Part IV. of the First Schedule to this Act. Differences as to the constitution of any committee may be determined by the Ministry; and parish meetings joining in the appointment of a committee have the same power of borrowing as a parish council.

Notwithstanding the provision in the Act of 1897 that no other consent than that of the Ministry of Health shall be necessary to the borrowing of money by the councils appointing the joint committee, the Ministry now always require evidence of the consent of the parish meeting of a rural parish and of the vestry of an urban parish to the incurring of the expenditure, having been advised that this is still necessary. The consents of those bodies are also required to the site selected for a burial ground: see s. 7 (3) of this Act, and the Burial Act, 1852, ss. 19, 26.

The Ministry of Health state that they are advised that a grant of exclusive rights of burial or a conveyance of lands held for burial purposes cannot be made by a joint committee formed under s. 53 (2). In order to be binding at law a grant or conveyance must be executed and sealed by all the councils or meetings covering the area of the superseded burial board. The action of the committee, however, binds all the councils, so that they can be compelled by suit for specific performance, or by mandamus, to affix their seals in order to carry out what has been agreed to by the joint committee.

Similarly lands purchased by a joint committee of this kind must be conveyed to the constituent councils.

In the view of the Ministry of Health only members of the appointing councils are eligible to serve on a joint committee under s. 53.

The provision made by the text was not intended to be permanent; it is to hold good "until other provision is made in pursuance of this Act." The reference seems to be to the power given by sub-s. (4), infra, to a county council to alter the boundaries of an area under the adoptive Act; but where on the appointed day such an area extended into several rural parishes or urban districts, it will probably be found a matter of great difficulty to bring it within the area of one governing body.

(3) The property, debts, and liabilities of any authority under any of the adoptive Acts whose powers are transferred in pursuance of this Act shall continue to be the property, debts, and liabilities of the area of that authority, and the proceeds of the property shall be credited, and the debts and liabilities and the expenses incurred in respect of the said powers, duties, and liabilities, shall be charged to the account of the rates or contributions levied in that area, and where that area is situate in more than one parish the sums credited to and paid by each parish shall be apportioned in such manner as to give effect to this enactment.

This obscurely-worded clause must be interpreted in the light of s. 67, post, p. 979. The meaning seems to be that when a parish council (under sub-s. (1)) or the governing bodies mentioned in sub-s. (2) become invested with the powers and duties of a previously existing authority under an adoptive Act, the benefit and the burden of the property, debts, and liabilities of the superseded authority are to remain the benefit and burden of the area of that authority. Where that area is a part of a rural parish and a transfer has been made under sub-s. (1), the parish council will be the authority for the execution of the Act, but the expenses of the execution will be paid out of the rate levied under the adoptive Act upon the part of the parish which has adopted it, and not out of a rate levied upon the whole parish. On the other hand, the income (if any) arising out of the execution of the adoptive Act will go in reduction of the rate under the adoptive Act, and not in augmentation of the general revenues of the parish. Where the area under the adoptive Act is made up of parts of different parishes (whether rural or not), the executive authority will be the bodies mentioned in sub-s. (2), acting by their joint committee. The rate will be levied as before the transfer upon the area which has adopted the Act, each part of a parish contributing its apportioned part and having credited to it its apportioned share of the revenue arising under the Act. Provision is made by the Local Government (Joint Committees) Act, 1897, post, at p. 1007, as to how the apportionment is to be made in the case of a joint committee for the purposes of the Burial Acts; in other cases no provision is made, but presumably the apportionment may be made by the bodies appointing the joint committee upon the basis of rateable value.

The fund for defraying expenses is not altered by the transfer of powers and duties. For instance, it would appear from R. v. Connah's Quay Overseers, post, p. 977, that the share of the expenses of a joint burial committee to be defrayed by an urban council is payable out of the poor rate, not the general district rate.

By the L. G. A., 1888, s. 100 (incorporated with this Act by s. 75, post, p. 985), the expression "liabilities" includes liability to any proceeding for enforcing any duty or for punishing the breach of any duty, and includes all debts and liabilities to which any authority are or would but for that Act be liable or subject to, whether accrued due at the date of the transfer or subsequently accruing, and includes any obligation to carry or apply any money to any sinking fund or to any particular purpose. See cases collected in note to the L. G. A., 1888, s. 62 (1), at p. 776, ante, as to the meaning to be attached to the word "liabilities." See also Nash v. Rochford R. D. C. cited in the note to s. 25 (1), ante, p. 933.

Agreements may be made under s. 68, post, p. 980, as to the adjustment of property and liabilities between the authorities interested, and questions as to the transfer of powers, duties, and liabilities may be determined summarily by the High Court under s. 70, post, p. 982.

(4) The county council on the application of a parish council may, by order, alter the boundaries of any such area if they consider that the alteration can properly be made without any undue alteration of the incidence of liability to rates and contributions or of the right to property belonging to the area, regard being had to any corresponding advantage to persons subject to the liability or entitled to the right.

The powers of a county council under this sub-section can only be exercised upon the application of a parish council. No power to apply is given to a district council unless an order is first made under s. 33, ante, p. 943, giving it the power of a parish council under the sub-section. The power to "alter the boundaries" does not empower a county council to divide an area into distinct areas. Thus an order of a county council purporting to do this in relation to a burial area comprising two rural parishes would be ultra vires. It is also extremely doubtful whether an order under this sub-section would be valid which purported to alter an area under the adoptive Acts which was not in existence on the appointed day. See the word "such" in the sub-section.

54.—(1) Where a new borough is created, or any other new urban district is constituted, or the area of an urban district is extended, then— Section 54. —— Effect on parish council of constitution of urban district.

(a) As respects any rural parish or part of a rural parish which will be comprised in the borough or urban district, provision shall be made, either by the constitution of a new parish or by the annexation of the parish or parts thereof to another parish or parishes, or otherwise, for the appointment of overseers and for placing the parish or part in the same position as other parishes in the borough or district, and

(b) As respects any parish or part which remains rural, provision shall be made for the constitution of a new parish council for the same, or for the annexation of the parish or part to some other parish or parishes, or otherwise for the government of the parish or part, and

(c) Provision shall also where necessary be made for the adjustment of any property, debts, and liabilities affected by the said creation, constitution, or extension.

A new borough is created by charter of the King in Council under Part XI. of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882. A new urban district other than a borough is created by order of the county council confirmed by the Ministry of Health under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 57. Under the same section and in the same manner the area of an urban district other than a borough may be extended. The boundaries of a borough may be extended under s. 54 of the same Act by Provisional Order of the Ministry of Health confirmed by Act of Parliament.

The necessary consequence of creating or extending an urban district (unless the newly-included part is already part of an urban district) is to take in all, or part of one or more rural parishes. Such parts are by the order to be made separate parishes, or are to be annexed to parishes already within the borough or district, and provision is to be made for the appointment of overseers as stated in the text. Similar provision is to be made for the remainder of a rural parish, of which part has been taken into the borough or district. And where necessary there is to be an adjustment of property, debts, and liabilities.

(2) The provision aforesaid shall be made—

(a) Where a new borough is created, by a scheme under section two hundred and thirteen of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (a);

(b) Where any other new urban district is constituted, by an order of the county council under section fifty-seven of the Local Government Act, 1888;

(c) Where the area of an urban district is extended, by an Order of the Local Government Board under section fifty-four, or of the county council under section fifty-seven, as the case may be, of the Local Government Act, 1888 (b).

(a) Under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 213, the "Committee of Council" may settle a scheme for the adjustment of the powers, rights, privileges, franchises, duties, property, and liabilities of any then existing local authority whose district comprises the whole or part of the area of that borough, either with or without any adjoining or other place, and also of any officer of that authority. Such scheme is to provide for the matters mentioned in the preceding sub-section.

(b) See the sections referred to, ante, pp. 768, 770.

Section 54.

(3) Where the area of an urban district is diminished this section shall apply with the necessary modifications.

This will generally happen when a borough is extended so as to include part of another urban district. When the sub-section applies the order or scheme must make a provision corresponding to those contained in sub-s. (1), with such modifications as are necessary to make that sub-section applicable to an urban parish.

Power to change name of district or parish.

55. . . .

(3) Any district council may, with the sanction of the county council, change their name and the name of their district.

The district council itself is the body to decide whether the name shall be changed or not; but the consent of the county council is necessary. Section 311 of the P. H. A., 1875, under which a local board might change its name with the sanction of the L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health), is still in force, but in practice is never used.

(4) Every change of name made in pursuance of this section shall be published in such manner as the authority authorising the change may direct, and shall be notified to the Local Government Board.

The authorising authority will, it seems, be in all cases the county council.

(5) Any such change of name shall not affect any rights or obligations of any parish, district, council, authority, or person, or render defective any legal proceedings, and any legal proceedings may be continued or commenced as if there were no change of name.

As to the transfer of stock standing in the name of a district council upon a change of name under this Act, see 58 & 59 Vict. c. 32, post, p. 1000.

Committees of parish or district councils.

56.—(1) A parish or district council may appoint committees, consisting either wholly or partly of members of the council, for the exercise of any powers which, in the opinion of the council, can be properly exercised by committees, but a committee shall not hold office beyond the next annual meeting of the council, and the acts of every such committee shall be submitted to the council for their approval.

Provided that where a committee is appointed by any district council for any of the purposes of the Public Health Acts or Highway Acts, the council may authorise the committee to institute any proceeding or do any act which the council might have instituted or done for that purpose other than the raising of any loan or the making of any rate or contract.

This provision applies to all parish councils and to rural district councils, and to the councils of urban districts other than boroughs (sub-s. (4)). So far as it relates to district councils, it is in substitution for ss. 200, 201 (ante, pp. 465, 466) of the P. H. A., 1875, which are repealed by this Act (see Sched. II.), the latter section entirely, the former except so far as it applies to boroughs. Under the new provision the constitution of these committees of district councils is altered; they need no longer consist exclusively of members of the council.

The effect of the proviso upon the earlier part of the clause is not quite clear, but it appears that under that part the district council may delegate to the committee any of their powers, and any delegated power may be exercised by the committee as if they were the district council, as the case may be, but the acts of the committee will always require the approval of the council which appointed it, and will not be valid until that approval has been obtained. An exception to this rule is made by the proviso in cases where a district council appoints a committee for purposes of the Public Health or Highway Acts; in such cases the district council may authorise the committee to institute certain proceedings or to do certain acts, and in respect of such proceedings or acts no subsequent confirmation by the district council will be required. But no such authorisation can be given with respect to raising loans or making rates or contracts. All committees will retire at the next annual meeting after their appointment. The annual meeting of a district counci is to be held as soon as may be after April 15th (s. 59 (1), post, p. 974, and P. H. A., 1875, s. 199, and First Schedule, Part 1, Rule 11, ante, pp. 465, 675).

On the approval of the council being given the acts of a committee become valid as from the time they were done upon the ordinary principles of ratification by a principal of the acts of his agent (Firth v. Staines, [1897] 2 Q. B. 70; 61 J. P. 452; Hussey v. Exeter Corporation (1918), 87 L. J. Ch. 443; 82 J. P. 67; R. v. Chapman, [1918] 2 K. B. 298; 82 J. P. 229). But see also Bowyer v. Mather, [1919] 1 K. B. 419; 83 J. P. 50. See further, as to the acts of committees, note (a) under s. 174 of the Public Health Act, 1875, ante, at p. 398.

It would seem that a council appointing a committee does not permanently resign its control over matters entrusted to such committee, but can at any time resume such control (Huth v. Clarke (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 391; 55 J. P. 86). As to the power of a member of a committee to resign his post thereon, see R. v. Sunderland Corporation, [1911] 2 K. B. 458; 75 J. P. 365.

(3) With respect to committees of parish and district councils the provisions in the First Schedule to this Act shall have effect.

Part 4 of the First Schedule deals with the proceedings of committees of parish or district councils, but merely empowers the appointing council to frame regulations as to the quorum, proceedings, place of meeting, and area of authority of a committee, and subject to such regulations enables a committee to regulate its own quorum, proceedings, and place of meeting, and gives a second or casting vote to the chairman of the committee. See Sched. I., Part 4, post, p. 997.

The rules applicable to committees of local authorities contained in Sched. I. of the P. H. A., 1875, are repealed by this Act: see Sched. II., post, p. 999.

(4) This section shall not apply to the council of a borough.

Section 200 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 465, still applies to the appointment of committees by councils of boroughs.

Joint committees.

57.—(1) A parish or district council may concur with any other parish or district council or councils in appointing out of their respective bodies a joint committee for any purpose in respect of which they are jointly interested, and in conferring, with or without conditions or restrictions, on any such committee any powers which the appointing council might exercise if the purpose related exclusively to their own parish or district.

Under this sub-section joint committees may be appointed by two or more district councils, by two or more parish councils, and by any number of parish and district councils for any purpose in which the appointing councils are jointly interested. Such purposes are numerous, being in fact all the purposes for which combinations of district councils (without the setting up of a joint board—see s. 279 of the P. H. A., 1875) are authorised by s. 285 of that Act and other enactments, and for which parish councils may act jointly under the present Act.

In a case, however, in which an urban district council and a parish council proposed to combine and appoint a joint committee under the section for the provision of a fire engine, the L. G. B. expressed doubt whether such a course was legally practicable seeing that the powers which the two councils could exercise were not identical. See s. 171 (2) of the P. H. A., 1875, and ss. 6 (1) (c) (ii) and 7 (1) of the present Act. The point could be met if the rural council obtained urban powers in respect of the rural parish, and then combined with the urban council.

It will be noticed that very large powers may be conferred upon a joint committee by the appointing councils under the present clause.

As to a paid officer of such a joint committee being disqualified for membership of one of the appointing councils, see Greville-Smith v. Tomlin, p. 954, ante.

Committees appointed under s. 57 are of a different character from those acting under s. 53. The Local Government (Joint Committees) Act, 1897, does not apply to a voluntary combination under s. 57 and there is no statutory provision for the settlement of disputes as to the constitution of such a committee.

(2) Provided that a council shall not delegate to any such committee any power to borrow money or make any rate.

It will be observed that the power to make contracts is not reserved, as it is under s. 56 (1), in the case of a committee authorised by a district council to exercise their powers under the Public Health or Highways Acts.

(3) A joint committee appointed under this section shall not hold office beyond the expiration of fourteen days after the next annual meeting of any of the councils who appointed it.

As to the annual meetings of district councils, see note to s. 56 (1), supra.

The sub-section inferentially allows a joint committee to be continued in office for a period of fourteen days after the annual meeting of any of the appointing councils, and the reason for this was doubtless as follows, viz., one appointing council might meet on April 16th and the other on April 20th, and, but for this provision, there would for a period of four days be no committee in existence to carry on the work entrusted to the joint committee.

(4) The costs of a joint committee under this section shall be defrayed by the councils by whom it is appointed in such proportions as they may agree upon, or as may be determined in case of difference by the county council.

(5) Where a parish council can under this Act be required to appoint a committee consisting partly of members of the council and partly of other persons, that requirement may also be made in the case of a joint committee, and shall be duly complied with by the parish councils concerned at the time of the appointment of such committee.

The reference is to s. 56 (2) of the Act. Where a parish council is about to join in appointing a joint committee with power to perform duties in relation to a part of the parish having a defined boundary and separate interests, the council will be bound, upon the request of a parish meeting held for the part, to appoint a representative or representatives of that part to sit upon the joint committee.

Audit of accounts of district and parish councils, and inspection.

58.—(1) The accounts of the receipts and payments of parish and district councils, and of parish meetings for parishes not having parish councils, and their committees and officers, shall be made up yearly to the thirty-first day of March, or in the case of accounts which are required to be audited half-yearly, then half-yearly to the thirtieth day of September and the thirty-first day of March in each year, and in such form as the Local Government Board prescribe.

Note to Section 58.

The accounts in a borough are audited half-yearly under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 26, and this applies to the accounts of the corporation as urban sanitary authority: see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 246, ante, p. 540. The accounts of an urban authority other than the council of a borough are audited yearly under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 246, ante, p. 540. The accounts of rural district councils and of their committees and officers are under this and the next sub-section to be made up half-yearly to September 30th and March 31st in each year, and in such form as the Ministry of Health prescribe. As to accounts of parish meetings, see Circular and Order of March 20th, 1911.

(2) The said accounts shall, except in the case of accounts audited by the auditors of a borough (but inclusive of the accounts of a joint committee appointed by a borough council with another council not being a borough council), be audited by a district auditor, and the enactments relating to audit by district auditors of accounts of urban sanitary authorities and their officers, and to all matters incidental thereto and consequential thereon, shall apply accordingly, except that in the case of the accounts of rural district councils, their committees and officers, the audit shall be half-yearly instead of yearly.

The principal enactments here incorporated are those contained in the P. H. A., 1875, s. 247, ante, p. 541, and s. 250, ante, p. 550, as amended by the District Auditors Act, 1879 (in App. I., post, Vol. II.), s. 5 of which provides that the L. G. B. (now the M. of H.) may make the necessary regulations as to the audit of accounts. For the Acts relating to district auditors, viz., 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, ss. 32—36; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 91, ss. 4—9; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 103, ss. 9, 11; 29 & 30 Vict. c. 113, ss. 5—7; 42 Vict. c. 6, see App. I., post, Vol. II.

The joint committees referred to in the text are those which may be appointed under ss. 53, 57, ante, pp. 966, 971. The accounts of such a joint committee will be audited by the district auditors, even when one of the councils is that of a borough.

(3) The Local Government Board may, with respect to any audit to which this section applies, make rules modifying the enactments as to publication of notice of the audit and of the abstract of accounts and the report of the auditor.

This provision enables the L. G. B. to modify the enactments contained in the P. H. A., 1875, s. 247 (3), (4), (10), ante, pp. 542, 543. For Orders made by the Board, see App. II., post, Vol. II.

The power of modification under this section was extended by the Local Government (Emergency Provisions) Act, 1916, 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 12, s. 14, to the audit of all accounts of a local authority which were subject to audit by a district auditor; but that section was temporary only and is now spent.

(5) Every parochial elector of a parish in a rural district may, at all reasonable times, without payment, inspect and take copies of and extracts from all books, accounts, and documents belonging to or under the control of the district council of the district.

No penalty is imposed for refusal to permit or hindering inspection; but inspection may in a proper case be enforced by mandamus (R. (or Finch) v. Bishop of Ely (1828), 8 B. & C. 112; 32 R. R. 350; R. v. Great Faringdon (1829), 8 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 3; 9 B. & C. 541).

The L. G. B. expressed the opinion that in view of this section it is open to a parochial elector of a parish in a rural district at all reasonable times and without payment to inspect and take copies and extracts of the minute book of the rural district council; and it has been decided that the documents referred to in the sub-section are not merely those documents which would be brought before an auditor for the purposes of the audit, but include cases for the opinion of counsel with their accompanying documents and plans and opinions of counsel taken by the district council (R. v. Godstone R. D. C., [1911] 2 K. B. 465; 75 J. P. 413). But where litigation is imminent between a parochial elector and a district council the court may in its discretion refuse to compel the council by mandamus to afford the parochial elector inspection of cases for the opinion and opinions of counsel relating to the subject-matter of the threatened litigation which would, if the parties were private persons, be privileged from inspection (ibid., and cf. R. v. Andover R. D. C., infra, and Woodhouse & Co., Ltd. v. Woodhouse (1914), Times, May 25th).

In an earlier case (R. v. Bradford-on-Avon R. D. C. (1908), 72 J. P. 348; 99 L T. 89), proceedings had been taken by T. against E. to have it declared that no public right of way existed over certain lands. A petition having been presented to the rural district council requesting them to take action in support of alleged public rights, the council submitted a case to counsel for his opinion. T., who was a parochial elector, then applied to the council for inspection of the petition, case and opinion. He was shown the petition, but not the two other documents. There was no litigation going on between T. and the council; but it was held that in the circumstances s. 58 (5) gave him no right to see the case and opinion. And it was held that although a member of a borough council has primâ facie a common law right to inspect the documents of the council, yet the court will not grant a mandamus to enable him to obtain such inspection where he is inspired by the indirect motive of assisting a person who is engaged in litigation with the council (R. v. Hampstead Borough Council, Ex parte Woodward (1917), 116 L. T. 213; 81 J. P. 65. See also the cases in notes to the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 233, in App. I., post, Vol. II.)

It has been said that when the clerk to a rural district council goes away, he should leave some person with authority to produce the minute-book to anyone entitled to see it (R. v. Andover R. D. C. (1913), 77 J. P. 296; 29 T. L. R. 419).

As to the inspection of rate books in the hands of overseers reference may be made to the Poor Rate Act, 1743, s. 2, and the Parochial Assessments Act, 1836, s. 5.

Supplemental provisions as to district councils.

59.—(1) Section one hundred and ninety-nine and Schedule I. of the Public Health Act, 1875, so far as that Schedule is unrepealed (which relate to the meetings of urban authorities, and to the meetings and proceedings of local boards), shall apply in the case of every urban district council other than a borough council and of every rural district council and board of guardians, as if such district council or board were a local board, except that the chairman of the council or board may be elected from outside the councillors or guardians.

See the P. H. A., 1875, s. 199, ante, p. 465, and Sched. I., Part 1, ante, p. 669.

The provision in the text applies those rules and also the enactment contained in s. 199 as to the meetings of urban authorities to all district councils, urban and rural (except the council of a borough).

A variation is made to r. 3 of Part 1 of the First Schedule above mentioned; under that rule a local board is to appoint at their annual meeting one of their number to be chairman for one year at all meetings at which he is present. The chairman of a district council or board of guardians may be elected from outside the councillors or guardians. This has already been enacted as regards boards of guardians and rural district councils (ante, pp. 926, 931, ss. 20 (7), 24 (4)); but the provision in the text extends to the chairmen of urban district councils (other than councils of boroughs).

(2) Any urban district council other than a borough council, and any rural district council and board of guardians may, if they think fit, appoint a vice-chairman to hold office during the term of office of the chairman, and the vice-chairman shall, in the absence or during the inability of the chairman, have the powers and authority of the chairman. Section 59.

Under s. 20 (7), power has already been given to a board of guardians to elect a vice-chairman from outside their own body. Under the present clause it is competent for any of these bodies to appoint a vice-chairman, but semble (except in the case of guardians) he may not be appointed from outside. A vice-chairman so appointed will retire at the expiration of the chairman's year of office.

(3) Any rural district council shall be entitled to use for the purpose of their meetings and proceedings the board room and offices of any board of guardians for the union comprising their district at all reasonable hours, and if any question arises as to what hours are reasonable it may be determined by the Local Government Board.

The object of this provision was to enable the rural district council to meet at the board room of the guardians in the same manner as the rural sanitary authority of the union had previously done. See note (a) under s. 197 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, at p. 463.

(5) If any district council, other than a borough council, become unable to act, whether from failure to elect or otherwise, the county council of the county in which the district is situate may order elections to be held and may appoint persons to form the district council until the newly elected members come into office.

It does not appear that the power of the county council under this clause can be exercised by a joint committee of county councils where the district is situate in more than one county, as may in exceptional circumstances be the case (s. 36 (1), ante, p. 947). See also the Local Government (Elections) Act, 1896, post, p. 1002, now made permanent by 7 & 8 Geo. 5, c. 64, s. 35, post, p. 1099.

(6) Nothing in this Act shall affect any powers of the Secretary of State under the Public Health Supplemental Act for Aldershot, 1857, or the position of persons nominated under those powers.

Under the Public Health Supplemental Act for Aldershot, 1857, the Secretary of State for War has power to nominate from time to time three members of the local board of health in addition to the elected members of that body.

Miscellaneous.

60.—(1) The council of each county may, from time to time, by order, fix or alter the number of guardians or rural district councillors to be elected for each parish within their county, and for those purposes may exercise powers of adding parishes to each other and dividing parishes into wards, similar to those which by the Acts relating to the relief of the poor are, for the purpose of the election of guardians, vested in the Local Government Board. Supplemental provisions as to guardians.

Previously the power to fix and alter the number of guardians had exclusively belonged to the L. G. B. under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 38, and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 18. The same body derived their power of adding parishes to each other from 31 & 32 Vict. c. 122, s. 6. That section provides that the Board (now the Ministry of Health) may by order add any parish in a union, the population of which, according to the last census, does not exceed 300, and the annual rateable value of which does not exceed the average rateable value of the parishes in the same union, according to the valuation lists in force for the time being, to some adjoining parish in the same union, for the purpose of the election of guardians. By 39 & 40 Vict. c. 61, s. 12, the Board may by their order divide any parish into wards for the election of guardians, and determine the number of guardians to be elected for every such ward, having due regard to the value of the rateable property therein; and each such ward is, for the purpose of such election, to be deemed a separate parish except so far as the Board may otherwise order. These powers are by the text conferred on the county council or on the joint committee in the case mentioned in sub-s. (3).

(2) The council of each county may for the purpose of regulating the retirement of guardians or rural district councillors, in cases where they retire by thirds, and in order that as nearly as may be one third of the persons elected as guardians for the union, and one third of the persons elected as rural district councillors for the district, shall retire in each year, direct in which year or years of each triennial period the guardians or district councillors for each parish, ward, or other area in the union or rural district shall retire.

Guardians and rural district councillors will retire by thirds unless an order is made for their simultaneous retirement under s. 20 (6), ante, p. 925. As each parish, ward, or group of united parishes will not have three guardians or councillors, but some may have more and others less than that number, it is necessary to provide for the years in which the guardians or councillors of each parish will retire. Thus, in a parish having only one guardian, the election of a guardian can take place only once in three years, though in a parish with three there may be one retirement every year. Power to rescind orders made under this section is given by 63 & 64 Vict. c. 16, post, p. 1009.

(3) Where a poor law union is situate in more than one county, the power under this section of fixing or altering the number of guardians or rural district councillors, and of regulating the retirement of guardians and of district councillors, shall be exercised by a joint committee of the councils of the counties concerned, but if any of those councils do not, within two months after request from any other of them, appoint members of such joint committee, the members of the committee actually appointed shall act as the joint committee.

Provided that if any order under this sub-section is, within six weeks after the making thereof, objected to by any of the county councils concerned, or by any committee of any of those councils authorised in that behalf, it shall be of no effect until confirmed by the Local Government Board.

Although the area of a poor law union may be altered under s. 36 (6), ante, p 949, the general scheme of the Act is to leave the area of the union untouched even when it extends into two counties. But in that case it is necessary that the powers of fixing and altering the number of guardians and rural district councillors and of regulating the retirement of guardians and rural district councillors should be exercised by the county councils of both counties into which the union extends; hence the necessity of a joint committee to act for the entire union. The power of dividing a parish into wards is not given to the joint committee; that power apparently rests with the council of the county in which the parish is situate.

The number of members appointed by each county council to serve on the joint committee will apparently be fixed by agreement. Power to rescind orders made under this section is given by 63 & 64 Vict. c. 16, post, p. 1009

Note to Section 60.

The proviso gives in effect an appeal to the Ministry of Health, at the instance of any county council concerned, or any committee specially authorised by them to consider the orders made by the joint committee and to appeal therefrom if necessary. The proviso is applicable to rescinding orders made under 63 & 64 Vict. c. 16, post, p. 1009.

(4) Where under any local and personal Act guardians of a poor law union are elected for districts, whether called by that name or not, the provisions of this Act with respect to the election of guardians shall apply as if each of the districts were a parish.

In a few unions and parishes guardians or, as they are sometimes called, governors of the poor are elected under local Acts. Where the areas for which separate guardians are elected are not parishes, they are to be deemed parishes so that the county council will have the same powers for the purposes of the election of guardians for such areas as if they were parishes.

Place of meeting of parish or district council or board of guardians.

61. No parish meeting or meeting of a parish council, or of a district council, or of a board of guardians shall be held in premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquor, except in cases where no other suitable room is available for such meeting either free of charge or at a reasonable cost.

Permissive transfer to urban district council of powers of other authorities.

62.—(1) Where there is in any urban district, or part of an urban district, any authority constituted under any of the adoptive Acts, the council of that district may resolve that the powers, duties, property debts, and liabilities of that authority shall be transferred to the council as from the date specified in the resolution, and upon that date the same shall be transferred accordingly, and the authority shall cease to exist, and the council shall be the successors of that authority.

As to the adoptive Acts, see the note to s. 53 (1), ante, p. 966. The present provision refers to a case where such an Act has been adopted in an urban district or part thereof either before or after the appointed day. It has been held that it applies in a county borough (Kirkdale Burial Board v. Liverpool Corporation, [1904] 1 Ch. 829; 68 J. P. 289). The transfer is effected by a resolution of the council.

Where a district council takes over the powers, etc. of a special authority executing an adoptive Act, the expenditure of the council in administering the Act must be charged to the rate from which the expenses of the superseded authority were defrayed. Thus, it has been held that where an urban council takes over the powers and duties of a burial board the expenses incurred by the council in executing the Burial Acts, and the interest upon, and repayments of, money borrowed in pursuance of those Acts are chargeable on the poor rates of the parish or parishes for which the burial board was formed, and are not payable out of the general district rate (R. v. Connah's Quay Overseers, [1901] 2 K. B. 174; 65 J. P. 500). This decision supports the submission contained in a former edition "that upon such a transfer being effected the burden of the expenses incurred in the execution of the adoptive Act, and the benefit of the property and income applicable to or arising out of its execution will remain the burden and the benefit of the area under the adoptive Act, and will not be thrown upon or enjoyed by the parts of the urban districts which have not adopted the Act."

Reference may be made to 29 & 30 Vict. c. 90, s. 44, which is re-enacted by the P. H. A., 1875, Sched. V., ante, p. 700. That section gives power to burial boards in certain cases to transfer their powers to an urban authority.

Section 62.

(2) After the appointed day any of the adoptive Acts shall not be adopted for any part of an urban district without the approval of the council of that district.

Provisions as to county council acquiring powers of district council.

63.—(1) Where the powers of a district council are by virtue of a resolution under this Act transferred to a county council, the following provisions shall have effect :

(a) Notice of the resolution of the county council by virtue of which the transfer is made shall be forthwith sent to the district council and to the Local Government Board :

(b) The expenses incurred by the county council shall be a debt from the district council to the county council, and shall be defrayed as part of the expenses of the district council in the execution of the Public Health Acts, and the district council shall have the like power of raising the money as for the defraying of those expenses :

(c) The county council for the purpose of the powers transferred may on behalf of the district council borrow subject to the like conditions, in the like manner, and on the security of the like fund or rate, as the district council might have borrowed for the purpose of those powers :

(d) The county council may charge the said fund or rate with the payment of the principal and interest of the loan, and the loan with the interest thereon shall be paid by the district council in like manner, and the charge shall have the like effect, as if the loan were lawfully raised and charged on that fund or rate by the district council :

(e) The county council shall keep separate accounts of all receipts and expenditure in respect of the said powers :

(f) The county council may by order vest in the district council all or any of the powers, duties, property, debts, and liabilities of the county council in relation to any of the said powers, and the property, debts, and liabilities so vested shall be deemed to have been acquired or incurred by the district council for the purpose of those powers.

This sub-section will apply where a county council resolves upon complaint by a parish council of the default of a district council that the duties and powers of the district council for the purpose of the matter complained of shall be transferred to the county council (s. 16 and s. 26 (4), ante, pp. 920, 938). It will also apply where a county council resolves to act in default of a rural district council under the Housing, Town Planning, etc., Act, 1909, s. 12, post, Vol. II., or acts instead of the district council under ibid., s. 10 (3), (4), post, Vol. II. It will also apply to the transfer to a county council of the powers of a district council who have made default in enforcing the provisions of the Milk and Dairies Consolidation Act, 1915, 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 66, s. 13, post, Vol. II.

As to the manner in which the expenses of a rural council are to be defrayed, see s. 29, and notes, ante, p. 941. With regard to the expenses of the county council, these are, under the provision in the text, recoverable as a debt in the High Court or the County Court. Compare the provisions of the P. H. (London) A., 1891, ss. 100, 117 (London County Council v. Bermondsey Borough Council, [1915] 3 K. B. 305 ; 79 J. P. 449). It would seem that the provisoes to s. 29 will apply to the expenses to which the present sub-section relates. As to the borrowing powers of a rural council, see notes to s. 68 (4), post, p. 981.

Clause (f) enables the county council to hand over any property acquired for the purposes of the exercise of the powers of the district council by the county council, and to put the district council in the same position as regards powers, duties, debts, and liabilities relating to the subject-matter of the complaint, as if the powers of the district council had been exercised by that council in the first instance, and no complaint had been made.

Note to Section 63.

(2) Where a rural district is situate in two or more counties a parish council complaining under this Act may complain to the county council of the county in which the parish is situate, and if the subject-matter of the complaint affects any other county the complaint shall be referred to a joint committee of the councils of the counties concerned, and any question arising as to the constitution of such joint committee shall be determined by the Local Government Board, and if any members of the joint committee are not appointed, the members who are actually appointed shall act as the joint committee.

Where a complaint is so referred to a joint committee, it appears that such committee will have power to determine whether any action is to be taken in the matter of the complaint, and, if so, whether it shall be by taking over the powers of the defaulting council, or by appointing a person to perform the duty. See note to s. 16, ante, p. 921. The body to take action in either of these ways will be, it is submitted, the joint committee, and not the county council to whom the complaint was originally made.

64. A county council may employ a district council as their agents in the transaction of any administrative business on matters arising in, or affecting the interests of, its own district.

Power to act through district council.

This section may relate to most of the administrative business referred to by that description in the L. G. A., 1888, s. 3.

65. Where any improvement commission affected by this Act have any powers, duties, property, debts, or liabilities in respect of any harbour, the improvement commission shall continue to exist and be elected for the purpose thereof, and shall continue as a separate body, as if this Act had not passed, and the property, debts, and liabilities shall be apportioned between the district council for the district and the commission so continuing, and the adjustment arising out of the apportionment shall be determined in manner provided by this Act.

Saving for harbour powers.

This section met the case where the commissioners under an Improvement Act had powers, etc., in respect of a harbour. They continued to be elected and to have the same powers as to the harbour, and their property, debts, and liabilities were apportioned between the district council and the commissioners for harbour purposes.

67. Where any powers and duties are transferred by this Act from one authority to another authority—

Transfer of property and debts and liabilities.

(1) All property held by the first authority for the purpose or by virtue of such powers and duties shall pass to and vest in the other authority, subject to all debts and liabilities affecting the same; and

Section 67.

(2) The latter authority shall hold the same for the estate, interest, and purposes, and subject to the covenants, conditions, and restrictions for and subject to which the property would have been held if this Act had not passed, so far as the same are not modified by or in pursuance of this Act; and

(3) All debts and liabilities of the first authority incurred by virtue of such powers and duties shall become debts and liabilities of the latter authority, and be defrayed out of the like property and funds out of which they would have been defrayed if this Act had not passed.

For instances see transfer of powers, etc., of authority under the adoptive Acts to urban district council (s. 62); transfer to rural district council of powers, etc., of rural sanitary authority and highway authority (s. 25); transfer to district councils of powers of justices out of sessions and of quarter sessions (ss. 27, 32).

The definition of "liabilities" in the L. G. A., 1888, s. 100 (incorporated with this Act by s. 75, post, p. 985), should be referred to. See also Jackson v. Plympton St. Mary R. D. C., and other cases referred to in note to the L. G. A., 1888, s. 62 (1), ante, at p. 777 (Nash v. Rochford R. D. C., [1917] 1 K. B. 384; 81 J. P. 57). With reference to sub-s. (3) of the text generally, see R. v. Connah's Quay Overseers, ante p. 977.

See as to the transfer, for the purposes of this Act, of stock standing in the name of an authority, the Local Government (Stock Transfer) Act, 1895, post, p. 1000.

Adjustment of property and liabilities.

68.—(1) Where any adjustment is required for the purpose of this Act, or of any order, or thing made or done under this Act, then, if the adjustment is not otherwise made, the authorities interested may make agreements for the purpose, and may thereby adjust any property income, debts, liabilities, and expenses, so far as affected by this Act, or such scheme, order, or thing, of the parties to the agreement.

In some cases an adjustment under this Act is specially provided for. See, for example, s. 54 (1) (c), ante, p. 969. When there is no such special provision, an adjustment may be necessary under this section. It is impossible to exhaust the cases in which such adjustment will be required, but there will, in general, be an adjustment in all cases where the area of a district is changed. And there will generally be some adjustment in respect of compensation to existing officers.

The words "any order" in this sub-section comprise an order under s. 36 (6), ante, p. 949, transferring part of a union to another union. In such case the adjustment should be between the two unions, not between the area transferred and the union from which it was taken (In re Rochdale and Haslingden Unions [1899] 1 Q. B. 540). As to the binding nature of an agreement when once entered into, see Holsworthy U. D. C. v. Holsworthy R. D. C. and Att.-Gen. v. Essex C. C. cited at p. 777, ante.

Numerous cases as to adjustments under this and similar sections will be found collected in the notes to the L. G. A., 1888, s. 62, ante, p. 776. Reference should be made to such notes, but many of the cases are now superseded by the recent Local Government (Adjustments) Act, 1913, post, p. 1082, which will apply to all future adjustments under this section and must be carefully studied.

(2) The agreement may provide for the transfer or retention of any property, debts, or liabilities, with or without any conditions, and for the joint use of any property, and for payment by either party to the agreement in respect of property, debts, and liabilities so transferred or retained, or of such joint user, and in respect of the salary or remuneration of any officer or person, and that either by way of an annu-payment or, except in the case of a salary or remuneration, by way of a capital sum, or of a terminable annuity for a period not exceeding that allowed by the Local Government Board: Provided that where any of the authorities interested is a board of guardians, any such agreement, so far as it relates to the joint use of any property, shall be subject to the approval of the Local Government Board. Section 68.

Property belonging to the undivided area may be retained by or transferred to one of the divisions. If so, it must make some return, as by taking the sole burden or a greater share of some liability, or by the payment of some capital or annual sum. Debts and liabilities may be adjusted in like manner. The payment or remuneration of an officer may be a subject of adjustment if the officer remains in the service of more than one authority. And the compensation payable to an officer under s. 81 (7), post, p. 989, may have to be adjusted in like manner.

The proviso only applies where one of the authorities is a board of guardians, and the agreement relates to the joint use of property.

(3) In default of an agreement, and as far as any such agreement does not extend, such adjustment shall be referred to arbitration in accordance with the Arbitration Act, 1889, and the arbitrator shall have power to disallow as costs in the arbitration the costs of any witness whom he considers to have been called unnecessarily, and any other costs which he considers to have been incurred unnecessarily, and his award may provide for any matter for which an agreement might have provided.

The award will be by a single arbitrator appointed by agreement or by order of the court in case of difference. The terms of the submission, unless altered by agreement, will be those mentioned in the First Schedule to the Act of 1889 (see App. I., post, Vol. II.), with the additional power as to costs mentioned in the text. As to the position where an arbitrator omits to deal with the question of costs, see the cases in the note to the L. G. A., 1888, s. 62 (3), at p. 778, ante.

(4) Any sum required to be paid by any authority for the purpose of adjustment may be paid as part of the general expenses (a) of exercising their duties under this Act, or out of such special fund as the authority, with the approval of the Local Government Board, direct, and if it is a capital sum the payment thereof shall be a purpose for which the authority may borrow under the Acts relating to such authority, on the security of all or any of the funds, rates, and revenues of the authority, and any such sum may be borrowed without the consent of any authority, so that it be repaid within such period as the Local Government Board may sanction (b).

(a) See the notes to s. 29, ante, p. 941.

(b) Urban and rural district councils may borrow in manner provided by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 233, ante, p. 521, and following sections. In the case of a rural council the security for the loan is the common fund out of which the general expenses of the council are payable, and in the case of special expenses the rates leviable for special expenses in the particular parish or parishes upon which the expenses are chargeable. No consent will be required for the loan, but the period of repayment will be fixed by the Ministry of Health.

(5) Any capital sum paid to any authority for the purpose of any adjustment under this Act shall be treated as capital, and applied with Section 68. the sanction of the Local Government Board, either in the repayment of debt or for any other purpose for which capital money may be applied.

The effect of this provision is to prevent the application of the sums in question in aid of current rates. Such sums may be applied in repayment of debt or for any other purpose for which money might be borrowed.

Power to deal with matters arising out of alteration of boundaries.

69. Where an alteration of any area is made by this Act, an order for any of the matters mentioned in section fifty-nine of the Local Government Act, 1888, may, if it appears to the county council desirable, be made by the county council, or, in the case of an area situate in more than one county, by a joint committee of county councils, but nothing in this section shall empower a county council or joint committee to alter the boundaries of a county.

See the L. G. A., 1888, s. 59, ante, p. 773; and as to the power of a county council under this section, see R. v. Middlesex JJ., ante, p. 773.

The alterations of the boundaries of a county can be effected only by means of a Provisional Order of the Ministry of Health, under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 54, ante, p. 768. A county council may apply to the Ministry for such an Order (s. 36 (5), ante, p. 949).

Summary proceeding for determination of questions as to transfer of powers.

70.—(1) If any question arises, or is about to arise, as to whether any power, duty, or liability is or is not transferred by or under this Act to any parish council, parish meeting, or district council, or any property is or is not vested in the parish council, or in the chairman and overseers of a rural parish, or in a district council, that question, without prejudice to any other mode of trying it, may, on the application of the council, meeting, or other local authority concerned, be submitted for decision to the High Court in such summary manner as, subject to any rules of court, may be directed by the court; and the court, after hearing such parties and taking such evidence (if any) as it thinks just, shall decide the question.

This provision resembles the L. G. A., 1888, s. 29, ante, p. 759, under which many questions were decided. Rules under the section came into operation on October 1st, 1894, and April 6th, 1895. They provide that the summary proceeding for submitting any question under this section for the decision of the High Court shall be by special case to be agreed upon by the parties, or in default of such agreement to be settled by an arbitrator to be agreed on by the parties or appointed by a judge in chambers, or to be settled by a judge in chambers. The special case, when settled, is to be filed in the Crown Office within eight days, and to be put into the Crown Paper for argument. See the Yearly Practice, 1922, p. 551.

Under the corresponding section of the Act of 1888 it was held that the court would not answer abstract questions on the construction of the Act: see Ex parte Cardigan C. C. (1890), 54 J. P. 792.

(2) If any question arises or is about to arise under this Act as to the appointment of the trustees or beneficiaries of any charity, or as to the persons in whom the property of any charity is vested, such question shall, at the request of any trustee, beneficiary, or other person interested, be determined in the first instance by the Charity Commissioners, subject to an appeal to the High Court brought within three months after such determination. Provided that an appeal to the High Court of Justice from any determination of the Charity Commissioners under this section may be presented only under the same conditions as are prescribed in the case of appeals to the High Court from orders made by the Charity Commissioners under the Charitable Trusts Acts, 1853 to 1891. Section 70.

Under the Charitable Trusts Act, 1860, s. 8, and 1869, ss. 10, 11, the Attorney-General or any person authorised by him or by the commissioners may present a petition to the Chancery Division of the High Court in a summary way appealing from certain orders of the commissioners. The conditions of appeal which are there prescribed, and which will apply to appeals under this section, are the following: (1) The petition must be presented within three months after the definitive publication of the order; and "definitive publication" has been held to mean "the final publication when the time expired for the receipt of suggestions and objections" (Re Hackney Charities (1864), 12 W. R. 1131). (2) Twenty-one days' written notice of the intention to appeal must be given to the Charity Commissioners, and to the Attorney-General. (3) The court may deal with the costs, and may require security for costs to be given by an appellant other than the Attorney-General.

A question having arisen as to whether the income of a local charity was or was not exclusively applicable for church purposes, a letter was sent to the Charity Commissioners by the chairman of the parish council setting forth his contention on the subject. The commissioners, after receiving a report, wrote a letter expressing their opinion. It was held that this letter constituted a determination under this sub-section, which was conclusive, not having been appealed against within three months (Att.-Gen. v. Hughes (1899), 81 L. T. 679; 48 W. R. 150).

As to the liability of the Charity Commissioners for costs, see In re Perry Almshouses, [1898] 1 Ch. 391, at p. 402.

(3) An appeal shall, with the leave of the High Court or Court of Appeal, but not otherwise, lie to the Court of Appeal against any decision under this section.

Under the corresponding provision in the L. G. A., 1888, s. 29, there is no appeal to the Court of Appeal (Ex parte Kent C. C., [1891] 1 Q. B. 725; 55 J. P. 647). The text gives such an appeal, but only with leave; if the High Court refuses leave the Court of Appeal may grant it (Godman v. Moses (1900), 69 L. J. Q. B. 823; 83 L. T. 46).

71. A copy of every order made by a county council or joint committee in pursuance of this Act shall be sent to the Local Government Board, and, if it alters any local area or name, also to the Board of Agriculture. Supplemental provisions as to county council orders.

As to orders by a joint committee of county councils, see s. 36 (1), (11), ante, pp. 947, 950; and as to orders altering local names, see s. 55, ante, p. 970.

By the Ministry of Health (Registration and Elections, Transfer of Powers) Order, 1921, the Secretary of State is substituted for the L. G. B. as regards orders relating to elections.

For "Board of Agriculture" now read "Minister of Agriculture" (9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 91).

72.—(1) The expenses incurred by the Local Government Board in respect of inquiries or other proceedings under this Act shall be paid by such authorities and persons and out of such funds and rates as the Board may by Order direct, and the Board may certify the amount of the expenses so incurred, and any sum so certified and directed by the Board to be paid by any authority or person shall be a debt from that authority or person to the Crown. Provisions as to local inquiries.

Compare the provisions of the P. H. A., 1875, s. 294, ante, p. 627. The provision as to the costs being a debt due to the Crown was new. It renders the costs recoverable by the prerogative writ of extent, and other special remedies, in priority to all other debts.

(2) Such expenses may include the salary of any inspector or officer of the Board engaged in the inquiry or proceeding, not exceeding three guineas a day.

(3) The Local Government Board and their inspectors shall have for the purposes of an inquiry in pursuance of this Act the same powers as they respectively have for the purpose of an inquiry under the Public Health Act, 1875.

See the P. H. A., 1875, s. 296, ante, p. 629, and the notes thereto.

(4) Where a county council hold a local inquiry under this Act or under the Local Government Act, 1888, on the application of the council of a parish or district, or of any inhabitants of a parish or district, the expenses incurred by the county council in relation to the inquiry (including the expenses of any committee or person authorised by the county council) shall be paid by the council of that parish or district, or, in the case of a parish which has not a parish council, by the parish meeting; but, save as aforesaid, the expenses of the county council incurred in the case of inquiries under this Act shall be paid out of the county fund.

Sub-section (1) applies to all inquiries by the Ministry of Health under this Act. This sub-section applies only to local inquiries held by a county council on the application of a parish or district council or inhabitants.

The expenses recoverable by a county council are limited to out-of-pocket expenses, and do not include any remuneration paid to a commissioner appointed by the council to hold an inquiry (Middlesex C. C. v. Kingsbury U. D. C., [1909] 1 K. B. 554; 73 J. P. 153). Expenses not so recoverable will fall on the county fund.

See also as to the costs of inquiries by a county council with reference to the compulsory acquisition of land, s. 9 (12), and notes, ante, p. 914.

Provision as to Sundays and bank holidays.

73. When the day on which anything is required by or in pursuance of this Act to be done is Sunday, Christmas Day, or Good Friday, or a bank holiday, that thing shall be done on the next following day, not being one of the days above mentioned.

It will be noticed that this provision is not permissive merely.

Provisions as to Scilly Islands.

74. This Act shall be deemed to be an Act touching local government within the meaning of section forty-nine of the Local Government Act, 1888, and a Provisional Order for the Scilly Islands may, on the application of the council of the Isles of Scilly, and after such public notice as appears to the Local Government Board sufficient for giving information to all persons interested, be made accordingly.

By s. 49 (1) of the Act of 1888 "It shall be lawful for the Local Government Board to make a Provisional Order for regulating the application of this Act to the Scilly Islands, and for providing for the exercise and performance in those islands of the powers and duties both of county councils and also of authorities under the Acts relating to highways and the P. H. A., 1875, and the Acts amending the same and for the application to the islands of any provisions of any Act touching local government, and any such Order may provide for the establishment of councils and other local authorities separate from those in the county of Cornwall, and for the contribution by the Scilly Islands to the county council of Cornwall in respect of costs incurred by the county council for matters specified in the said Order as benefiting the Scilly Islands, and such Order may also provide for all matters which appear to the Local Government Board necessary or proper for carrying the Order into full effect." A Provisional Order establishing a separate council for the Scilly Islands, and conferring thereon the powers of a county council and of a highway and sanitary authority, was made under this section, and confirmed by 53 & 54 Vict. c. clxxvi.

Note to Section 74.

75.—(1) The definition of "parish" in section one hundred of the Local Government Act, 1888, shall not apply to this Act, but, save as aforesaid, expressions used in this Act shall, unless the context otherwise requires, have the same meaning as in the said Act.

Construction of Act.

By the section referred to "'parish' means a place for which a separate overseer is or can be appointed, and where part of a parish is situate within, and part of it without, any county, borough, urban sanitary district, or other area, means each such part." The application of this definition being expressly excluded, the definition of "parish" in the Interpretation Act, 1889, applies, whereby (s. 5) "parish" is defined to mean, "as respects England and Wales, a place for which a separate poor rate is or can be made, or for which a separate overseer is or can be appointed." The part of the definition in the Act of 1888 which relates to parts of parishes would obviously be inapplicable to the present Act, having regard to its provisions as to parishes situate partly within and partly without a larger area.

For expressions which are defined by the Act of 1888, and have the same meaning when used in this Act, see the Act of 1888, s. 100, ante, p. 783. Such expressions bear the meaning given to them by the earlier Act, "unless the context otherwise requires." It may be mentioned that the definition of "county" in the Act of 1888 is varied (infra, sub-s. (2)) so as to include a "county borough," and that the definitions of "district council" and "county district" (which had reference to future legislation which might establish district councils) must now be read as referring to the district councils established by this Act, and to the districts of such councils. See s. 21, ante, p. 926.

(2) In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires—

Any reference to population means the population according to the census of one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

The expression "parochial elector," when used with reference to a parish in an urban district, or in the county of London or any county borough, means any person who would be a parochial elector of the parish if it were a rural parish.

As to "parochial electors," see the Representation of the People Act, 1918, Sched. 6, r. 2, post. The effect of that Act is to substitute local government electors for parochial electors.

The expression "election" includes both the nomination and the poll.

The election rules framed by the L. G. B. under s. 23 (6), s. 20 (5), and s. 3 (5), accordingly regulate the proceedings preliminary to the actual poll, including the nomination; the definition is not intended to be exhaustive, the word "includes" and not "means" being used (R. v. Kershaw (1856), 6 El. & Bl. 999; 20 J. P. 741).

Election rules will in future be made by the Secretary of State under the Order of 1921 referred to in the note to s. 20 (5), ante, p. 925

Section 75.

The expression "trustees" includes persons administering or managing any charity or recreation ground, or other property or thing in relation to which the word is used.

This definition has especial reference to s. 14, ante, p. 918. Persons acting as trustees, though not trustees in the strict legal sense, are included in the term.

The expression "ecclesiastical charity" includes a charity, the endowment whereof is held for some one or more of the following purposes:

(a) For any spiritual purpose which is a legal purpose; or

(b) For the benefit of any spiritual person or ecclesiastical officer as such; or

(c) For use, if a building, as a church, chapel, mission room, or Sunday school, or otherwise, by any particular church or denomination; or

(d) For the maintenance, repair, or improvement of any such building as aforesaid, or for the maintenance of divine service therein; or

(e) Otherwise for the benefit of any particular church or denomination, or of any members thereof as such.

Provided that where any endowment of a charity, other than a building held for any of the purposes aforesaid, is held in part only for some of the purposes aforesaid, the charity, so far as that endowment is concerned, shall be an ecclesiastical charity within the meaning of this Act; and the Charity Commissioners shall, on application by any person interested, make such provision for the apportionment and management of that endowment as seems to them necessary or expedient for giving effect to this Act.

The expression shall also include any building which in the opinion of the Charity Commissioners has been erected or provided within forty years before the passing of this Act mainly by or at the cost of members of any particular church or denomination.

The words "as such" in clause (e) show that no charity is an ecclesiastical charity within that clause unless, upon the true construction of the instrument of endowment, its benefits are exclusively confined to members of a particular church or denomination. Ecclesiastical charities within the meaning of this definition are not confined to charities for the spiritual or religious benefit of a church, but include eleemosynary charities (Re Ross's Charity, Re Perry Almshouses, [1899] 1 Ch. 21; 63 J. P. 52). See also In re Spendluffe's Charity (1900), 65 J. P. 72; 83 L. T. 498.

The expression "affairs of the church" shall include the distribution of offertories or other collections made in any church.

Cf. as to this phrase, St. George's, Hanover Square v. Westminster Corporation, [1910] A. C. 225; 74 J. P. 153 (a closed burial ground).

The expression "parochial charity" means a charity the benefits of which are or the separate distribution of the benefits of which is confined to inhabitants of a single parish, or of a single ancient ecclesiastical parish divided into two or more parishes, or of not more than five neighbouring parishes.

Section 75.

The expression " vestry " in relation to a parish means the inhabitants of the parish whether in vestry assembled or not, and includes any select vestry either by statute or at common law.

See R. v. Shipley Parish Council, ante, p. 264.

The expression " rateable value " means the rateable value stated in the valuation list in force, or, if there is no such list, in the last poor rate.

The expression " county " includes a county borough, and the expression " county council " includes the council of a county borough.

The expression " elementary school " means an elementary school within the meaning of the Elementary Education Act, 1870.

The Elementary Education Act, 1870, has been repealed and enacted by the Education Act, 1921, ss. 27, 172.

The expression " local and personal Act " includes a Provisional Order confirmed by an Act and the Act confirming the Order.

As to what is a local and personal Act, reference may be made to R. v. London C. C., [1893] 2 Q. B. 454 ; 58 J. P. 21.

The expression " prescribed " means prescribed by order of the Local Government Board.

Now Minister of Health (9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 21).

Extent of Act.

76. This Act shall not extend to Scotland or Ireland.

Short title.

77. This Act may be cited as the Local Government Act, 1894.

PART V.

TRANSITORY PROVISIONS.

* * * * * *

Power of county council to remove difficulties.

80.—(1) If any difficulty arises with respect to the holding of the first parish meeting of a rural parish, or to the first election of parish or district councillors, or of guardians, or of members of the local board of Woolwich, or any vestry in the county of London, or of auditors in the county of London, or to the first meeting of a parish or district council, or board of guardians, or such local board or vestry as aforesaid, or if, from no election being held or an election being defective or otherwise, the first parish or district council, or board of guardians, or local board or vestry has not been properly constituted, or there are no auditors under the Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 to 1890, or an insufficient number, properly elected, the county council may by order make any appointment or do any thing which appears to them necessary or expedient for the proper holding of any such first meeting or election and properly constituting the parish or district council, board of guardians, local board, or vestry, or auditors, and may, if it appears to them necessary, direct the holding of a meeting or election, and fix the dates for any such meeting or election, but a parish shall, notwithstanding any such failure to constitute the parish council, be deemed to be a parish having a parish council within the meaning of this Act. Any such order may modify the provisions of this Act, and the enactments applied by or rules framed under this Act so far as may appear to the county council necessary or expedient for carrying the order into effect.

This sub-section is spent, but is practically re-enacted by the Local Government (Elections) Act, 1896, post, p. 1002, now made permanent by the Representation of the People Act, 1918, s. 35, post. See R. v. Miles, cited in the notes to s. 48 (5), ante, p. 964, as to the powers of the county council under that sub-section and this sub-section.

Italicised words in sub-s. (1) and sub-s. (2) (which is spent) were repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1908.

Existing officers.

81.—(1) Where the powers and duties of any authority other than justices are transferred by this Act to any parish or district council, the officers of that authority shall become the officers of that council, and for the purposes of this section the body appointed a surveyor of highways shall be deemed to be a highway authority and any paid surveyor to be an officer of that body.

As an illustration of this sub-section, the officers of highway boards became officers of the rural district council when the latter became the highway authority under s. 25. In a highway parish the body appointing a surveyor were the inhabitants in vestry, or meeting in the nature of a vestry (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, ss. 6, 18).

This sub-section did not prevent a council distributing the work as it liked amongst all its various officers, whether appointed by or transferred to it (Genn v. East Kerrier R. D. C. (1898), 62 J. P. 215).

Sub-sections (2) and (3) relate to vestry clerks and assistant overseers.

(4) Every such officer, vestry clerk, and assistant overseer, as above in this section mentioned shall hold his office by the same tenure and upon the same terms and conditions as heretofore, and while performing the same duties shall receive not less salary or remuneration than heretofore.

Compare the corresponding provision in the L. G. A., 1888, s. 119.

The expression "salary or remuneration" apparently means "remuneration whether by salary or by fees." See Wyatt v. London C. C. (1901), 66 J. P. 325; 85 L. T. 629.

As to the position of an officer who is required to perform duties which are not analogous, or are an unreasonable addition, to his existing duties, see Gray v. Hackney Borough Council (1904), 2 L. G. R. 429.

The right of an officer to receive not less salary, etc., is subject to the right of the new employers to determine the original contract of service. See Rowsell v. Metropolitan Water Board (1915), 84 L. J. K. B. 1869; 79 J. P. 267. Where a usage is an implied term of all contracts entered into with employees in a particular trade, then after notice by an employer to discontinue the usage, every person employed by him who on promotion undertakes fresh duties at a different salary, must be taken to have been offered and accepted a fresh contract of service of which the usage is not an implied term (Meek v. Port of London Authority, [1918] 2 Ch. 96; 82 J. P. 225. And see Jones v. Lewis, cited in the note to s. 33 (4), ante, p. 945).

By an order of the year 1900 certain parishes of some of which the applicant was assistant overseer, were amalgamated, and the order provided that he was to hold office on the same terms as to remuneration as before, as far as possible. The applicant's salary had previously been fixed at 5 per cent. commission. In accordance with the order the collection of the poor rate in a portion of the amalgamated parish was allotted to the applicant, and he was given a fixed salary based on a three years average of the commission which he had previously earned. In 1914 the applicant applied for a mandamus to the overseers to pay him on the original basis. It was held that on the facts the applicant's terms of remuneration were as nearly as possible the same as before, and that in any case the writ being discretionary ought not in the circumstances to issue after so great a lapse of time (R. v. Hertford Overseers (1914), 111 L. T. 716; 78 J. P. 405). Note to Section 81

(5) Where a parish or rural sanitary district is divided by this Act, any officer for the parish or district so divided shall hold his office as such officer for each parish or district formed by the division, and his salary shall be borne by the respective parishes or districts in proportion to their rateable value at the commencement of the local financial year next after the passing of this Act.

(6) So much of any enactment as authorises the appointment of assistant overseers by a board of guardians shall be repealed as from the appointed day.

(7) Section one hundred and twenty of the Local Government Act, 1888, which relates to compensation to existing officers, shall apply in the case of existing officers affected by this Act, whether officers above in this section mentioned or not, as if references in that section to the county council were references to the parish council, or the district council, or board of guardians or other authority whose officer the person affected is when the claim for compensation arises as the case may require. Provided that all expenses incurred by a district council in pursuance of this section shall be paid as general expenses of the council, and any expenses incurred by a board of guardians in pursuance of this section shall be paid out of their common fund, and any expenses incurred by any other authority in pursuance of this section shall be paid out of the fund applicable to payment of the salary of the officers affected.

For earlier provisions (now largely superseded) as to compensation for loss of office, see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 309, p. 650, ante.

In 1897 the plaintiff was verbally appointed by the chief engineer of the New River Company to act as draughtsman and surveyor in relation to certain waterworks which that company were carrying out in pursuance of parliamentary powers. He was subsequently employed by the company to perform other works, and continued to act for the defendant Board after its formation pursuant to an Act of 1902. In December, 1909, his services were dispensed with. It was held that he was entitled to a superannuation allowance as an existing officer (Webster v. Metropolitan Water Board (1912), 76 J. P. 474; 10 L. G. R. 1025).

Compensation to existing officers: incorporated provisions of L. G. A., 1888, s. 120.

Section 120 of the L. G. A., 1888 (which has also been incorporated, with or without modifications, in the London Government Act, 1899, the Metropolis Water Act, 1902, the Education Act, 1902, the Port of London Act, 1908, the Milk and Dairies Act, 1915, s. 16, the Scotch and Irish Local Government Acts, and numerous local Acts and Orders of the L. G. B.), provides as follows:—

"(1) Every existing officer declared by this Act to be entitled to compensation, and every other existing officer, whether before mentioned in this Act or not, who by virtue of this Act, or anything done in pursuance of or in consequence of this Act, suffers any direct pecuniary loss by abolition of office or by diminution or loss of fees or salary, shall be entitled to have compensation paid to him for such pecuniary loss by the county council, to whom the powers of the authority, whose officer he was, are transferred under this Act, regard being had to the conditions on which his appointment was made, to the nature of his office or employment, to the duration of his service, to any additional emoluments which he acquires by virtue of this Act or of anything done in pursuance of or in consequence of this Act, and to the emoluments which he might have acquired if he had not refused to accept any office offered by any council or other body acting under this Act, and to all the other circumstances of the case, and the compensation shall not exceed the amount which, under the Acts and rules relating to her Majesty's Civil Service, is paid to a person on abolition of office.

"(2) Every person who is entitled to compensation, as above mentioned, shall deliver to the county council a claim under his hand setting forth the whole amount received and expended by him or his predecessors in office, in every year during the period of five years next before the passing of this Act, on account of the emoluments for which he claims compensation, distinguishing the offices in respect of which the same have been received, and accompanied by a statutory declaration under the Statutory Declaration Act, 1835, that the same is a true statement according to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief.

"(3) Such statement shall be submitted to the county council, who shall forthwith take the same into consideration, and assess the just amount of compensation (if any), and shall forthwith inform the claimant of their decision.

"(4) If a claimant is aggrieved by the refusal of the county council to grant any compensation, or by the amount of compensation assessed, or if not less than one-third of the members of such council subscribe a protest against the amount of the compensation as being excessive, the claimant or any subscriber to such protest (as the case may be) may, within three months after the decision of the council, appeal to the Treasury, who shall consider the case and determine whether any compensation, and if so, what amount ought to be granted to the claimant, and such determination shall be final.

"(5) Any claimant under this section, if so required by any member of the county council, shall attend at a meeting of the council and answer upon oath, which any justice present may administer, all questions asked by any member of the council touching the matters set forth in his claim, and shall further produce all books, papers, and documents in his possession or under his control relating to such claim.

"(6) The sum payable as compensation to any person in pursuance of this section shall commence to be payable at the date fixed by the council on granting the compensation, or, in case of appeal, by the Treasury, and shall be a specialty debt due to him from the county council, and may be enforced accordingly in like manner as if the council had entered into a bond to pay the same.

"(7) If a person receiving compensation in pursuance of this section is appointed to any office under the same or any other county council, or by virtue of this Act, or anything done in pursuance of or in consequence of this Act, receives any increase of emoluments of the office held by him, he shall not, while receiving the emoluments of that office, receive any greater amount of his compensation, if any, than, with the emoluments of the said office, is equal to the emoluments for which compensation was granted to him, and if the emoluments of the office he holds are equal to or greater than the emoluments for which compensation was granted, his compensation shall be suspended while he holds such office.

"(8) All expenses incurred by a county council in pursuance of this section shall be paid out of the county fund, as a payment for general county purposes."

It will be observed that, under the section above set out, in fixing the amount of compensation, regard must be had to the following considerations:

1. The direct pecuniary loss which the officer suffers.
2. The conditions of his appointment, e.g., whether it is for life or for a fixed term, or at pleasure. On this subject reference may be made to R. v. Norwich

Note to Section 81.

(Mayor, etc. of) (1838), 8 A. & E. 633, as showing that, although an office may be held during pleasure, the authority assessing compensation is not bound to consider only the legal tenure, but may, under certain circumstances, award compensation as for an office held for life. Cf. also R. v. Poor Law Board (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 785. See also the cases cited in the note to s. 81 (4), ante, p. 988.

3. The nature of his office, i.e., whether it is an important or subordinate one.
4. The duration of his service.
5. Any additional emoluments which he acquires under the Act which alters his position by the abolition of his office or diminution of his salary.
6. Any emoluments which he might have acquired if he had not refused to accept a new office.
7. All the other circumstances of the case.

It has been suggested that sub-s. (7) applies only to the case where an officer is appointed to an office under an authority of the same kind as that in which he was formerly employed: in other words, that the words "the same or any other county council" must if necessary be read as applying to a district council, etc.

It should be noticed that not only is the decision of the Treasury final, but the appeal to the Treasury is the only means by which a claim for compensation can be enforced. An action does not lie to recover compensation (Rowsell v. Metropolitan Water Board, ante, p. 988. And see also Yorke v. R., [1915] 1 K. B. 852; 84 L. J. K. B. 947).

Where a council acting under statutory power to "abolish" an office (compensation being provided for) dismiss an officer contrary to the terms of his engagement he cannot maintain an action for wrongful dismissal, but is relegated to his right to compensation (Clarke v. Lewisham Borough Council (1903), 67 J. P. 195; 19 T. L. R. 62).

A private Act which authorised the defendants to construct a bridge over the Arun and to acquire the ferry rights from certain trustees, stipulated that they should pay compensation to any servants in the regular employment of the trustees who should not be retained in the same or similar employment, and at the salary and on the terms and conditions in, at, and on which they were employed by the trustees at the date of the execution of the contract for the construction of the bridge in respect of any loss of office or diminution of salary by reason of the transfer of the undertaking by the trustees to the defendants. The plaintiffs, who had been in the employment of the trustees as ferrymen, were on the transfer of the ferry undertaking continued by the defendants in the same employment and at the same salary for two years until the completion of the bridge, when they were dismissed by the defendants without notice. It was held that the plaintiffs were entitled to the same notice as the trustees would have been bound to give them or to wages in lieu of notice, but that they were not entitled to compensation under the Act (Latter v. Littlehampton U. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 426; 101 L. T. 172). See also R. v. London C. C., Ex parte Scriven (1907), 23 T. L. R. 493; R. v. Westport U. D. C., [1903] 2 I. R. 179, and R. v. London C. C., Ex parte Norris, infra, as to when a loss of office can be said to be a consequence of an Act; and Webster v. Metropolitan Water Board, ante, p. 989, as to an employment alleged to be only temporary.

As to when a person whose services are dispensed with, his duties for the future being performed not by a successor with the same rank, but by an inferior official, can say that his office has been "abolished," reference may be made to Williams v. Greville, [1909] A. C. 353.

"Officer."

An officer means a person holding "any place, situation, or employment," and "existing" means existing at the appointed day (see L. G. A., 1888, s. 100, ante, p. 784, and s. 75 (1) of this Act, ante, p. 985). It was held in Legg v. Stoke Newington Vestry (1895), 59 J. P. 696, that a sanitary inspector, clerk to a sanitary committee, messenger, hall porter, and office boy were "officers" within the compensation clause of a local Act, and not merely "servants." As to solicitors appointed permanently to advise an authority being "officers," see R. v. Poor Law Board, supra, R. v. Local Government Board (1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 148; 38 J. P. 165. In In re Carpenter and the Bristol Corporation, [1907] 2 K. B. 617; 71 J. P. 417, a solicitor acted for many years for the guardians of a union and for a district council. He was never formally appointed solicitor to either body, but was specially retained on every occasion when the services of a solicitor were required and was paid costs and charges upon the usual scale for the work actually done by him. By a local Act, which abolished the union and dissolved the district council, it was provided that any officer who suffered direct pecuniary loss by virtue of the Act should be deemed to be an officer entitled to compensation within the meaning of s. 120 of the L. G. A., 1888. It was held (following R. v. Armagh U. D. C., [1901] 2 I. R. 28) that the solicitor was not an "officer" within the definition contained in s. 100 of the L. G. A., 1888, and was therefore not entitled to compensation under s. 120. A public vaccinator has been held not to be an officer or servant of the guardians (Lawson v. Marlborough Union, [1912] 2 Ch. 154; 76 J. P. 305). A "warrant officer" of a council, i.e., a bailiff whom they always employed to levy distresses on their behalf, was held not to be "designated" as an officer within the meaning of a local Act (Newton v. Marylebone Borough Council (1914), 84 L. J. K. B. 1721; 79 J. P. 410).

By the Education Act, 1902, the powers and duties of school boards were transferred to county councils. Previous to the passing of the Act the applicant, a rate collector in the employ of the corporation of the city of London, was employed to collect the education rate levied by the school board. After the passing of the Act the education rate was collected by the guardians as part of the poor rate, and the applicant suffered a pecuniary loss from the loss of fees for collecting the education rate. It was held that the applicant, not being an officer in the employment of the school board, was not entitled to compensation under s. 120 of the L. G. A., 1888, and Sched. II., r. 21, of the Education Act, 1902 (R. v. London C. C., Ex parte Norris, [1906] 1 K. B. 346; 70 J. P. 160).

Scale of compensation.

In no case is the compensation to exceed he amount which under the Acts and Rules relating to civil servants is paid to a person on abolition of office. Those Acts are the Superannuation Acts, 1859, 1884, and 1909. Until the passing of the Act of 1909 it was the "practice" of the Treasury—there were no "Rules"—to grant as compensation in cases of abolition of office an allowance of one-sixtieth of the annual salary and emoluments for every year of service, plus an additional allowance of

For 20 years of service and upwards	–	–	10/60ths additional.
„ 15 „ but under 20	–	–	7/60ths „
„ 10 „ „ 15	–	–	5/60ths „
„ 5 „ „ 10	–	–	3/60ths „
Under 5 years – – – – –	–	–	1/60th „

In no case, however, was the allowance to exceed two-thirds of the annual salary and emoluments, and it was also the "practice" to make a deduction of one-fourth of the amount when an officer had not been required to devote his whole time to the duties of his office. The Act of 1884, s. 3, authorised a special additional allowance in respect of an office requiring a professional or other peculiar qualification, but this section and s. 3 of the Act of 1859 was repealed by the Act of 1909 subject to a saving of the rights of persons who before the passing of that Act had been appointed to an office to which an order, warrant, or minute of the Treasury issued under the earlier Acts applied.

The Act of 1909, which applies (generally speaking) only to civil servants appointed after its date, altered the basis of calculation in their case from one-sixtieth to one-eightieth, but gave in return certain benefits by way of a lump sum payment and otherwise; it also abolished in their case the system of "added years." In the Neath Order, 1921, as issued by the Ministry of Health, s. 120 (1) was incorporated without qualification. Before the House of Commons Committee, however, it was represented on behalf of the officers affected that in view of the altered Treasury practice the following provision was necessary: "Provided that for the purposes of this Article the expression 'the Acts and Rules relating to Her Majesty's Civil Service'" in sub-s. (1) of s. 120 shall mean the Acts and Rules relating to Her Majesty's Civil Service which were in operation at the date of the passing of the Act of 1888. It was stated that the amendment had been adopted in various Acts such as the Representation of the People Act, 1918, the Education Act, 1918, the Ministry of Transport Act, 1919, and in various local Bills and Orders. The amendment was accepted; but it cannot at the moment be definitely stated that it will be inserted as a matter of course in all orders issued by the Ministry.

An authority in fixing the amount of compensation must not blindly follow the

Note to Section 81.

Treasury " practice," but must in each case exercise its own discretion (R. v. Stepney Borough Council, [1902] 1 K. B. 317 ; 66 J. P. 183).

A claimant for compensation must deliver his claim to the particular body to whom the powers of the authority whose officer he was are transferred, and his claim must state the matters and be accompanied by the statutory declaration mentioned in sub-s. (2) of the section above set out ; he may be required to attend before the body in question and be examined on oath as to his claim if a justice is present to administer an oath ; if dissatisfied with the decision of that body, he may appeal to the Commissioners of the Treasury.

It would seem that, although in sending in his claim an officer is required (s. 120 (2)) to give particulars of his salary and emoluments for five years, the maximum compensation is to be governed by his ultimate salary and emoluments, and not by an average of the five years (Livingstone v. Westminster Corporation, [1904] 2 K. B. 109 ; 68 J. P. 276). It is the province of the local authority, subject to an appeal to the Treasury, to determine what the salary and emoluments amounted to, and when the authority have so determined, the court cannot interfere (ibid.). Where an authority have once passed a resolution fixing the amount of compensation to be paid to an officer, a specialty debt is in existence, and they cannot rescind their resolution (ibid.).

"Emoluments."

As to what are " emoluments," see R. v. Postmaster-General (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 428 (travelling allowances) ; Livingstone v. Westminster Corporation, supra (allowance for the keep of a horse) ; R. v. Poor Law Board (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 785 ; and R. v. Local Government Board (1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 148 ; 38 J. P. 165 (solicitors acting as clerks or legal advisers to authorities) ; Lawson v. Marlborough Union, [1912] 2 Ch. 154 ; 76 J. P. 305 (district medical officer and public vaccinator) ; R. v. Lyon, Ex parte Harrison, [1921] 1 K. B. 203 ; 85 J. P. 78 (special duty grants to officers).

The proviso to the sub-section in the text varies the provision above set out of the Act of 1888 as to the fund out of which payment of compensation is to be made ; such payments are to be paid in the case of district councils as general expenses (as to which see note to s. 29, ante, p. 941).

As to whether a pension or gratuity is attachable, see Timothy v. Day, [1908] 2 I. R. 26, 386.

Provision as to highways.

82.—(1) Where before the appointed day the highway expenses were charged on a particular parish or other area and not on a district, the district council may determine that the highways in that parish or area shall be placed in proper repair before the expenses of repairing the same become a charge upon the district, and, failing such highways being placed in proper repair to the satisfaction of the district council, the district council may themselves place the highways in proper repair, and the expense incurred by them of placing those highways in proper repair shall be a separate charge on the parish or area, and any question which arises as to whether any such expenses are properly a separate charge on the parish or area shall be determined by the county council.

This provision enabled a district council to require that the highways, which before the appointed day were repairable at the expense of a parish or other area not co-extensive with the district, should be placed in proper repair at the expense of such parish or area before being taken over by the district council as highway authority, under s. 25, ante, p. 933. As to the meaning of the expression " appointed day " where the operation of s. 25 as to highways was postponed, see the proviso to s. 84 (4), post, p. 994.

(2) Where in pursuance of an order of a county council a parish continues to maintain its own highways after the appointed day, the highway expenses shall not be deemed to be expenses of the parish council or of the parish meeting within the meaning of this Act.

Note to Section 82. So long as a highway parish remained such (by virtue of an order postponing the operation of s. 25) the highway rate continued to be assessed and levied by the surveyor of highways as before the passing of the Act.

Duty of county council to bring Act into operation.

83. It shall be the duty of every county council to exercise all such of their powers as may be requisite for bringing this Act into full operation within their county as soon as may be after the passing thereof, and a county council may delegate their powers under this Act to a committee.

See further as to the duty of county councils to use their powers under this Act with expedition, s. 36 (13) (ante, p. 950), and s. 80 (ante, p. 987).

84. . . .

Sub-sections (1) and (2), as to the first elections under the Act, were repealed as spent by the S. L. R. A., 1908.

. . . . . .

"Appointed day."

(4) Subject as in this Act mentioned, "the appointed day" shall,

(a) for the purpose of elections and of parish meetings in parishes not having a parish council, be the day or respective days fixed for the first elections under this Act, or such prior day as may be necessary for the purpose of giving notices or doing other acts preliminary to such elections; and

(b) for the purpose of the powers, duties, and liabilities of councils or other bodies elected under this Act, or other matters not specifically mentioned, be the day on which the members of such councils or other bodies first elected under this Act come into office; and

(c) for the purpose of powers, duties, and liabilities transferred to a council of a borough by this Act, be the first day of November next after the passing of this Act; and the lists and registers of parochial electors shall be made out in such parts as may be necessary for the purpose of the first elections under this Act.

Provided that where an order of a county council postpones the operation of the section with respect to highways as respects their county or any part thereof the day on which such postponement ceases shall, as respects such county or part, be the appointed day, and the order of postponement shall make such provision as may be necessary for holding elections of highway boards during the interval before the appointed day.

The effect of the proviso was to postpone the "appointed day" as regards highway powers where those powers were temporarily withheld from a district council by an order for postponement, under s. 25, ante, p. 933.

Current rates.

85.—(1) Every rate and precept for contributions made before the appointed day may be assessed, levied, and collected, and proceedings for the enforcement thereof taken, in like manner as nearly as may be as if this Act had not passed.

(2) The accounts of all receipts and expenditure before the appointed day shall be audited, and disallowances, surcharges, and penalties recovered and enforced, and other consequential proceedings had, in like manner as nearly as may be as if this Act had not passed, but as soon as practicable after the appointed day ; and every authority, committee, or officer whose duty it is to make up any accounts, or to account for any portion of the receipts or expenditure in any account, shall, until the audit is completed, be deemed for the purpose of such audit to continue in office, and be bound to perform the same duties and render the same accounts and be subject to the same liabilities as before the appointed day. Section 85.

(3) All proceedings, legal and other, commenced before the appointed day, may be carried on in like manner, as nearly as may be, as if this Act had not passed, and any such legal proceeding may be amended in such manner as may appear necessary or proper in order to bring it into conformity with the provisions of this Act.

(4) Every valuation list made for a parish divided by this Act shall continue in force until a new valuation list is made.

(5) The change of name of an urban sanitary authority shall not affect their identity as a corporate body or derogate from their powers, and any enactment in any Act, whether public general or local and personal, referring to the members of such authority shall, unless inconsistent with this Act, continue to refer to the members of such authority under its new name.

As to the change of name of urban sanitary authorities, see s. 21 (1), ante, p. 926, and s. 55, ante, p. 970.

This and the next three sections were applied, with modifications, in the Education Act, 1902. See Sched. II. (8) of that Act.

86.—(1) Nothing in this Act shall prejudicially affect any securities granted before the passing of this Act on the credit of any rate or property transferred to a council or parish meeting by this Act : and all such securities, as well as all unsecured debts, liabilities, and obligations incurred by any authority in the exercise of any powers or in relation to any property transferred from them to a council or parish meeting shall be discharged, paid, and satisfied by that council or parish meeting, and where for that purpose it is necessary to continue the levy of any rate or the exercise of any power which would have existed but for this Act, that rate may continue to be levied and that power to be exercised either by the authority who otherwise would have levied or exercised the same, or by the transferee as the case may require. Saving for existing securities and discharge of debts.

(2) It shall be the duty of every authority whose powers, duties, and liabilities are transferred by this Act to liquidate so far as practicable before the appointed day, all current debts and liabilities incurred by such authority.

87. All such byelaws, orders, and regulations of any authority, whose powers and duties are transferred by this Act to any council, as are in force at the time of the transfer, shall, so far as they relate to or are in pursuance of the powers and duties transferred, continue in force as if made by that council, and may be revoked or altered accordingly. Saving for existing byelaws.

Section 88. Saving for pending contracts, etc.

88.—(1) If at the time when any powers, duties, liabilities, debts, or property are by this Act transferred to a council or parish meeting, any action or proceeding, or any cause of action or proceeding is pending or existing by or against any authority in relation thereto the same shall not be in anywise prejudicially affected by the passing of this Act, but may be continued, prosecuted, and enforced by or against the council or parish meeting as successors of the said authority in like manner as if this Act had not been passed.

(2) All contracts, deeds, bonds, agreements, and other instruments subsisting at the time of the transfer in this section mentioned, and affecting any of such powers, duties, liabilities, debts, or property, shall be of as full force and effect against or in favour of the council or parish meeting, and may be enforced as fully and effectually as if, instead of the authority, the council or parish meeting had been a party thereto.

Repeal.

89. The Acts specified in the Second Schedule to this Act are hereby repealed as from the appointed day to the extent in the third column of that Schedule mentioned, and so much of any Act, whether public general or local and personal, as is inconsistent with this Act is also hereby repealed. Provided that where any wards of an urban district have been created, or any number of members of an urban sanitary authority fixed, by or in pursuance of any local and personal Act, such wards and number of members shall continue and be alterable in like manner as if they had been fixed by an order of the county council under this or any other Act.

This Act does not give power to a county council to create wards or fix the number of councillors in an urban district, but see the L. G. A., 1888, s. 57, p 770, ante. The meaning of the proviso seems to be that where these matters are provided for by or in pursuance of a local and personal Act the county council shall have the same power of altering them from time to time as that body has in the case of rural districts. See s. 60 (1), ante, p. 975.

PART THREE.

* * * * * *

(2) A minute of proceedings at a meeting of a parish council, or of a committee of a parish or district council, or at a parish meeting, signed the same or the next ensuing meeting by a person describing himself as appearing to be chairman of the meeting at which the minute is signed shall be received in evidence without further proof.

In order to make a minute evidence it must be signed at the meeting to which it relates, or at the next meeting of the same body. The date on which it is signed should appear upon the minute. As to the appointment of committees, see ss. 56, 57, ante, pp. 970, 971. Schedule 1.

(3) Until the contrary is proved every meeting in respect of the proceedings whereof a minute has been so made shall be deemed to have been duly convened and held, and all the members of the meeting shall be deemed to have been duly qualified; and where the proceedings are proceedings of a committee, the committee shall be deemed to have been duly constituted, and to have had power to deal with the matters referred to in the minutes.

It will, of course, be competent for any party seeking to upset the proceedings of the meeting to tender evidence to show that the meeting was not duly convened, or that any of the members were not duly qualified, or that the committee was not duly constituted, or was acting ultra vires.

PART FOUR.

Proceedings of Committees of Parish or District Councils. Section 56.

(1) The quorum, proceedings, and place of meeting of a committee, whether within or without the parish or district, and the area (if any) within which the committee are to exercise their authority, shall be such as may be determined by regulations of the council or councils appointing the committee.

It appears from Part 3, rules (2) and (3) above, that every committee must keep minutes of their proceedings.

(2) Subject to such regulations, the quorum, proceedings, and place of meeting, whether within or without the parish or district, shall be such as the committee direct, and the chairman at any meeting of the committee shall have a second or casting vote.

A committee have, of course, no power to fix their area of authority or in any way to alter the powers which have been delegated to them.

THE HOUSING OF THE WORKING CLASSES ACT, 1894.

(57 & 58 VICT. c. 55.)

An Act to explain the provisions of Part II. of the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, with respect to powers of borrowing. [25th August 1894.]

[In view of the possibility of a Bill for the consolidation of the Housing Acts being introduced and passed into law in the present (1922) Session of Parliament it has been thought advisable to take out of Vol. I. this Act and also the Housing of the Working Classes Acts, 1890, 1900 and 1903; the Housing, Town Planning, etc., Act, 1909; the Housing Act, 1914; the Housing (No. 2) Act, 1914; the Housing, Town Planning, etc., Act, 1919; the Housing (Additional Powers) Act, 1919; and the Housing Act, 1921. These Acts or the Consolidation Act (if any) which replaces them will be inserted in Vol. II.]

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT (STOCK TRANSFER) ACT, 1895.

(58 & 59 VICT. c. 32.)

An Act to amend the Local Government Act, 1894, so far as regards the Transfer of any Stock, Share, or Security standing in the name of, or Dividends payable to, a Local Authority. [6th July 1895.]

Alteration of name on transfer of stock standing in the name of local authority.

1.—(1) Where any stock is standing in the books of any company in the name of any local authority the following provisions shall have effect:

(a) If by virtue of the Local Government Act, 1894, or anything done under that Act or the Local Government Act, 1888, the name of the local authority is changed (a), then upon the request of such authority and the production of a statutory declaration by the clerk of the authority specifying the stock, and verifying the change of name and identity of the authority, the company shall enter such stock in the new name of the local authority in like manner as if the stock had been transferred to the authority under that name, and pay to that authority all dividends accrued and to accrue due thereon:

(b) If by virtue of the Local Government Act, 1894, or anything done under that Act or the Local Government Act, 1888, any other local authority becomes entitled to the stock or any dividends thereon (b), a certificate of the clerk of the county council, or the order or award under which the local authority becomes so entitled shall be a sufficient authority to the company to transfer the stock into the name of the local authority specified in that behalf in the order, award, or certificate, and to pay the dividends to such authority :

(c) If in any other case any other local authority is entitled to the stock or any dividends thereon, the court may on application make an order vesting in such authority or person as the court may direct, the right to transfer the said stock, or pay such dividends, to the authority in or to whom the same ought to be vested or paid, and the Trustee Act, 1893, shall apply in like manner as if the vesting order were made under section thirty-five of that Act (c).

(2) In this Act—

" A local authority " includes any urban or rural sanitary authority, council of a borough, improvement commissioners, local board, urban district council, rural district council, board of guardians, highway board, burial board, parish council, overseers, churchwardens and overseers, and chairman of a parish meeting and overseers :

" County council " includes the council of a county borough :

" Order of a county council " means an order made either by a county council or by any joint committee of county councils, and, if such order requires confirmation by the Local Government Board, means the order as confirmed by that Board :

" Company " includes the Bank of England, and any company or person keeping books in which any stock is registered :

" Stock " includes any share, annuity, or other security.

(3) The jurisdiction of the court under this Act may be exercised by the High Court, or in cases within the jurisdiction of a palatine court or county court, by that court (d).

(a) It may be necessary to change the name of a local authority when its district is altered or divided under s. 54 or s. 57 of the L. G. A., 1888, ante, pp. 768, 770 ; or its name may be changed under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 55, ante, p. 970.

(b) This may happen when a district is divided or altered and an adjustment has been made.

(c) The effect of this is that the authority may transfer the stock according to the order, and the company must obey the order according to its tenor, and after receiving written notice thereof, it will not be lawful for the company to transfer the stock or pay dividends otherwise than in accordance with the order.

(d) See as to this section generally the remarks of VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., in Oldham Corporation v. Bank of England, [1904] 2 Ch. 716 ; 68 J. P. 584.

2. This Act may be cited as the Local Government (Stock Transfer) Act, 1895. Short title.

Section 1.

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT (ELECTIONS) ACT, 1896.

(59 VICT. c. 1.)

An Act to continue temporarily certain Powers for the Removal of Difficulties at Elections under the Local Government Act, 1894.

[6th March 1896.]

Power of county council to remove difficulties.

1.—(1) If any difficulty arises with respect to any election of parish or district councillors or of guardians, or to the first meeting after any ordinary election of such councillors or guardians, or if, from an election not being held, or being defective, or otherwise, the council or board has not been properly constituted, the county council may by order make any appointment or do anything which appears to them necessary or expedient for the proper holding of any such election or meeting, and properly constituting the council or board, and may, if it appears to them necessary, direct the holding of an election or meeting, and fix the dates for any such election or meeting.

(2) Any such order may modify the provisions of the Local Government Act, 1894, and the enactments applied by, or rules framed under, that Act, so far as may appear to the county council necessary or expedient for carrying the order into effect.

This Act supplements the powers given by the L. G. A., 1894, ss. 48 (5), 59 (5), whereby county councils may order new elections if difficulties arise as to the elections of individual councillors or guardians, and may otherwise make orders if difficulties arise. It is practically a re-enactment of ibid., s. 80 (1), which made provision only as to the first elections after the passing of that Act. For observations as to the powers of a county council thereunder and under s. 48 (5), see R. v. Miles, p. 964. ante.

(3) A county council may delegate their powers under this section to a committee.

Duration.

2. This Act shall continue in force until the thirty-first day of December one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven, and no longer, unless continued by Parliament.

The Act had been continued in force by the Expiring Laws Continuance Acts until made permanent by s. 35 of the Representation of the People Act, 1918, post, p. 1099.

Short title.

3. This Act may be cited as the Local Government (Elections) Act, 1896.

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT (DETERMINATION OF DIFFERENCES) ACT, 1896.

(59 & 60 VICT. c. 9.)

An Act to amend certain Provisions of the Local Government Act, 1888, with respect to the Determination of Differences by the Local Government Board.

[21st May 1896.]

Amendment of 51 & 52 Vict. c. 44,

1. The Local Government Act, 1888, shall have effect, as if in sub-sections three and four of section eleven (a) of that Act for the words

" be determined by arbitration of the Local Government Board," and in sub-section nine of the same section for the words " be referred to the arbitration of the Local Government Board," were substituted the words " be determined by the Local Government Board either as arbitrators or otherwise at the option of the Board," and as if in section sixty-three of that Act for the words " are required in pursuance of this Act to decide," were inserted the words " determine as arbitrators."

Section 1.

s. 11, as to determination of differences.

For "Local Government Board" now read "Minister of Health" (9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 21).

(a) Ante, pp. 741, 742. By that section, certain differences arising thereunder between a county council and a district council with reference to the maintenance, etc., of main roads and other matters connected with highway administration, might be referred to and determined by arbitration of the L. G. B. It was held in In re Kent C. C. and Sandgate L. B., [1895] 2 Q. B. 43; 59 J. P. 456, that the Board should, when a difference under the section was referred to their arbitration, proceed to appoint an arbitrator in accordance with the provisions of s. 63 of the Act, but that course is usually not a convenient one. The effect of the amendments hereby made in s. 11 is that the Board may decide any such difference, either as arbitrators or otherwise at their option. It will only be where the Board determine a difference or other matter as arbitrators that they will be required to appoint an arbitrator under s. 63. See further the notes to s. 11, p. 741, ante. The validation of previous orders of the Board on this subject was provided for by s. 2, infra.

By the L. G. A., 1899, s. 7 (1), where any duty is transferred from the London County Council to a borough council by or under the Act, the county council shall contribute to the borough council such amount (if any) as may be finally determined by the L. G. B. (now M. of H.). By s. 28 (3), when the L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health) are authorised by the Act to determine any matter, they may determine it as arbitrators or otherwise. An application was made by several metropolitan borough councils to the Board to determine the amount to be contributed by the county council in respect of the maintenance of main roads which was transferred to the borough councils by s. 6 (1) of the Act. The Board came to the conclusion that on equitable grounds no contribution should be made, and they therefore decided " otherwise than as arbitrators " that none should be made. On an application for a mandamus directing the Board to hear and determine the application according to law, the court declined to interfere (R. v. L. G. B. (1908), 72 J. P. 211).

2. [Validation of past orders.]

Repealed as spent by the S. L. R. A., 1908.

3. This Act may be cited as the Local Government (Determination of Differences) Act, 1896.

Short title.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACT, 1896.

(59 & 60 VICT. c. 19.)

An Act to make further Provision with respect to Epidemic, Endemic, and Infectious Diseases, and to repeal the Acts relating to Quarantine.

[7th August 1896.]

1.—(1) Regulations of the Local Government Board made in pursuance of section one hundred and thirty or section one hundred and thirty-four of the Public Health Act, 1875 (a), or in pursuance of either of those sections, as extended to London by the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, may provide for such regulations being enforced and executed

Amendment of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, ss. 130, 134, as to regulations with respect to disease.

Section 1. by the officers of Customs and the officers and men employed in the coastguard as well as by other authorities and officers, and without prejudice to the generality of the powers conferred by those sections may provide for—

(a) the signals to be hoisted by vessels having any case of epidemic, endemic, or infectious disease on board ; and

(b) the questions to be answered by masters, pilots, and other persons on board any vessel as to cases of such disease on board during the voyage or on the arrival of the vessel ; and

(c) the detention of vessels and of persons on board vessels ; and

(d) the duties to be performed in cases of such disease by masters, pilots, and other persons on board vessels.

(2) Provided that the regulations shall be subject to the consent—

(a) so far as they apply to the officers of Customs, of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Customs ; and

(b) so far as they apply to officers or men employed in the coastguard, of the Admiralty ; and

(c) so far as they apply to signals, of the Board of Trade.

(3) If any person wilfully neglects or refuses to obey or carry out, or obstructs the execution of, any regulation made under section one hundred and thirty or section one hundred and thirty-four of the Public Health Act, 1875 (a), or in pursuance of either of those sections as extended to London by the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, and as amended by this Act, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one hundred pounds, and in the case of a continuing offence to a further penalty not exceeding fifty pounds for every day during which the offence continues (b) ; and any such penalty, if not recovered under the provisions of the Acts relating to public health (c), shall be recoverable by action on behalf of the Crown in the High Court.

(a) Ante, pp. 237, 246. These sections empower the board (now the Ministry of Health) to make regulations for the treatment of persons affected with cholera or any epidemic, endemic, or infectious diseases, and preventing the spread of cholera and such other diseases ; and, in case any part of England is affected or threatened by any formidable epidemic, endemic, or infectious disease, for the speedy interment of the dead, for house to house visitation, and for the provision of medical aid, etc.

The power to make regulations under this Act and the enactments mentioned therein, was extended by the P. H. A., 1904, s. 1, p. 1013, post, to the making of regulations for carrying into effect conventions with respect to the prevention of danger arising to public health from vessels, and the prevention of the conveyance of infection by means of vessels ; it was further extended by the Public Health (Regulations as to Food) Act, 1907, p. 1017, post, to the making of regulations as to the importation, preparation, storage, and distribution of articles of food.

As to the regulations at present in force under the Act of 1875, as amended by the Acts of 1896 and 1904, see notes to s. 130, ante, p. 237. As to regulations under the Act of 1907, see notes thereto, p. 1018, post.

(b) See generally as to obstructing a local authority in the execution of the P. H. Acts, s. 306 of the P. H. A., 1875, and the notes thereto, ante. p. 640. This penalty clause replaces that originally contained in s. 130 of the Act of 1875, which is repealed by s. 6, infra ; it appears also to supersede s. 140, which is not so repealed. It is questionable whether the daily penalty is incurred before as well as after conviction. See the definition of " daily penalty " in s. 11 (3) of the P. H. A., 1890, ante, p. 826, and note thereon.

(c) See s. 251 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 551.

2. The powers exerciseable by her Majesty in Council or any two of the Lords of her Majesty's Privy Council under section two hundred and thirty-four of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (a), shall be exerciseable by the Local Government Board, and accordingly in that section the words "the Local Government Board," shall be substituted for the words "her Majesty in Council or any two Lords of her Majesty's Privy Council." Section 2. Transfer of powers under 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 234.

(a) By the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, s. 234, her Majesty in Council, or any two lords of the Council, were empowered from time to time by order to require that no person on board any ship coming to any port in the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, or the Isle of Man, or having touched at any place out of the United Kingdom abroad, where they have reason to apprehend that yellow fever or other highly infectious distemper prevails, shall quit the vessel before the state of health of the persons on board shall have been ascertained on examination by the proper officer of customs at the place or places appointed by the commissioners of customs for the purpose, and before permission to land has been given. The section provides for the imposition of penalties on any person so quitting the vessel, and on the master, pilot, or person in charge of the ship if he does not on arrival at the place appointed hoist and continue the signal directed by the order until the proper officer has given permission to haul it down.

The powers of the Local Government Board are now transferred to the Ministry of Health.

3. [Application to Scotland.] (a).

4. [Application to Ireland.]

5. In the making of the regulations referred to in this Act regard shall be had to the expediency of uniform regulations throughout the whole of the United Kingdom. Regulations to be uniform.

6. The enactments relating to quarantine mentioned in the Schedule to this Act, and the other enactments therein mentioned, shall be repealed, as to the whole of the British Islands, to the extent appearing in the third column of that Schedule (a).

7. This Act shall come into operation on the expiration of three months from the passing thereof (a).

8. This Act may be cited as the Public Health Act, 1896. Short title.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (PORTS) ACT, 1896.

(59 & 60 VICT. c. 20.)

An Act to amend the Public Health Act with respect to the Powers of Port Sanitary Authorities. [7th August 1896.]

Powers of port sanitary authority.

1. The Local Government Board may by order assign to any port sanitary authority (a) any powers, rights, duties, capacities, and obligations under the Infectious Disease Prevention Act, 1890 (b), with the necessary modifications.

The powers of the Local Government Board are now transferred to the Minister of Health.

(a) As to the constitution and general powers of port sanitary authorities see s. 287 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 622.

By an Order dated August 20th, 1912 (see App. II., post, Vol. II.), the Board assigned to port sanitary authorities (other than that of the Port of London) all powers, duties, etc., under s. 5 of the Act of 1890, in relation to any infectious disease to which the P. H. A., 1875, applies, and under ss. 16, 17, 18 and 20, so far as those sections relate to the exercise of powers under s. 5. The Order makes certain modifications in the sections referred to. The effect of the Order is, as regards the cleansing and disinfection of ships, to substitute the procedure under the Act of 1890 for that under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 120, p. 227, ante.

Note to Section 1.

(b) Ante, p. 807.

2. This Act may be cited as the Public Health (Ports) Act, 1896, and shall be construed as one with the Public Health Act, 1875.

Short title and construction.

THE CHAIRMEN OF DISTRICT COUNCILS ACT, 1896.

(59 & 60 VICT. c. 22.)

An Act to exempt certain Chairmen of District Councils who have already taken the Oath from again taking the Oath before acting as Justices of the Peace. [7th August 1896.]

1. A chairman of a district council who has been re-elected to that office on the expiration or other determination of a previous term of office may continue to act as a justice of the peace without again taking the oaths mentioned in section twenty-two of the Local Government Act, 1894 (a).

Chairman on re-election need not again take oath as justice of peace.

(a) See this section and notes thereto, ante, p. 927.

2. This Act may be cited as the Chairmen of District Councils Act, 1896.

Short title.

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT (JOINT COMMITTEES) ACT, 1897.

(60 & 61 VICT. c. 40.)

An Act to amend the Local Government Act, 1894, with regard to Joint Committees for the purposes of the Burial Acts. [6th August 1897.]

1.—(1) Where a joint committee is appointed under section fifty-three of the Local Government Act, 1894 (a), for the purposes of the Burial Acts, 1852 to 1885—

Joint committees for Burial Acts.

(a) Any expenses incurred in carrying out those purposes shall be defrayed, any money borrowed for those purposes shall be borrowed, and any receipts arising from those purposes shall be divided, by the councils appointing the committee in such proportion as they may agree upon, or, as in default of agreement, may be determined by the county council, or, if one of the councils so appointing is the council of a county borough, by the Local Government Board (b);

(b) The consent of the Local Government Board shall be required to the borrowing by any council of any money required to be borrowed for those purposes, but that consent shall be conclusive as to the power of the council to borrow, and no other consent shall be required either under the said Burial Acts, or the Local Government Act, 1894, or any other Act (c);

(c) Part IV. of the First Schedule to the Local Government Act, 1894 (d), shall apply to the proceedings of the committee.

(2) If any difference arises as to the constitution of any such committee it may be determined by order of the Local Government Board.

(3) For the purposes of this section references to a council shall, in the case of a parish not having a parish council, include the parish meeting, and the parish meeting shall have the same power of borrowing for the purposes of the Burial Acts as a parish council would have (e).

(a) See notes to this section, p. 966, ante. Doubts had arisen as to the applicability of s. 57 of the Act of 1894 to joint committees appointed under s. 53, and this Act removes difficulties as regards such joint committees when appointed for the purposes of the Burial Acts. But with regard to other joint committees (probably very few in number), those difficulties remain and can only be avoided by an alteration of areas.

(b) The determination of the county council or of the L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health), as the case may be, appears to be final. Expenses incurred in providing and laying out a burial ground for a parish and building the necessary chapels must not exceed the amount authorised by the parish meeting. See the Burial Act, 1852, s. 19, as amended by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 7 (3). As explained in the note under s. 53 (2), ante, p. 967, it would seem that this consent must still be obtained from the parish meeting of a parish appointing a joint committee under s. 53, and that in the case of an urban district the consent of the vestry is required.

(c) This dispenses with the necessity for the sanction of a parish meeting, whose consent to expenditure is, however, still required (see preceding note), and the approval of the Treasury under the Burial Act, 1852, s. 20, for the approval of the Treasury under the Burial Act, 1862, s. 1, and for the consent of the county council under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 12. See also the Local Authorities (Treasury Powers) Act, 1906, post, p. 1013.

An urban district council can only borrow for 30 years, while a parish council may do so for 60 years. This is an anomaly when each council is merely finding a contribution to a common purpose. See ante, p. 715.

(d) Ante, p. 997.

(e) See s. 12 of the L. G. A., 1894.

2. This Act shall be construed as one with the Local Government Act, 1894, and may be cited as the Local Government (Joint Committees) Act, 1897.

THE INFECTIOUS DISEASE (NOTIFICATION) EXTENSION ACT, 1899.

(62 & 63 VICT. c. 8.)

An Act to extend the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, to Districts in which it has not been adopted. [20th June 1899.]

Extension of 52 & 53 Vict. c. 72.

1.—(1) The Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889 (a), shall after the commencement of this Act extend to and take effect in every urban, rural, and port sanitary district, as defined for the purposes of that Act, in England or Wales, whether that Act has or has not been adopted therein before the commencement of this Act. Section 1.

(2) In any such district in which the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, has not been adopted before the commencement of this Act, that Act shall for the purposes of section fourteen thereof (which relates to the operation of local Acts) (b) be treated as having been put in force on the commencement of this Act.

(b) By s. 14 of the principal Act, ante, p. 804, where that Act is put in force in any district in which there is a local Act for the like purpose as that Act, the enactments of such local Act, so far as they relate to that purpose, shall cease to be in operation; but Huddersfield is an exception. See next section.

2. Nothing in this Act shall be construed to repeal, alter, or affect the provisions of any local Act which immediately before the passing of this Act was in force within the county borough of Huddersfield. Saving for Huddersfield.

3.—(1) This Act may be cited as the Infectious Disease (Notification) Extension Act, 1899, and the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, and this Act may be cited together as the Infectious Disease (Notification) Acts, 1889 and 1899. Short title.

(2) The enactments specified in the Schedule to this Act are hereby repealed, as regards England and Wales, to the extent mentioned in the third column of that Schedule.

(3) This Act shall come into operation upon the first day of January one thousand nine hundred.

An Act to make further provision for the Term of Office of District Councillors and Guardians. [10th July 1900.]

direction has been or hereafter may be made or given by the council of a county or county borough, or a joint committee of any such councils, as the case may be, with respect to the retirement of members of an urban or rural district council, or of a board of guardians, the council or joint committee may, on that like application or request, by order rescind such first-mentioned order or direction.

(a) See the L. G. A., 1894, s. 20 (6), ante, p. 925, and s. 23 (6), p. 930, ante.

(2) Every order made in pursuance of this section shall provide for all matters necessary or proper for carrying into effect the objects of the said order; and, in particular, shall require all the councillors or guardians in office at the date thereof to go out of office, and their places to be filled by the new-elected councillors or guardians, on the fifteenth day of April next following that date (a).

(a) See the L. G. A., 1894, ss. 20 (6), 23 (6), and 24 (4), ante, pp. 925, 930, 931.

(3) Where an order, made in pursuance of this section, rescinds an order made in pursuance of sub-section three of section sixty of the Local Government Act, 1894, the proviso (a) to that sub-section shall apply as if the first-mentioned order were made under the said sub-section.

(a) By the proviso referred to "if any order under this sub-section is, within six weeks after the making thereof, objected to by any of the county councils concerned, or by any committee of any of those councils authorised in that behalf, it shall be of no effect until confirmed by the Local Government Board."

2. This Act may be cited as the District Councillors and Guardians (Term of Office) Act, 1900.

THE MEMBERS OF LOCAL AUTHORITIES RELIEF ACT, 1900.

(63 & 64 VICT. c. 46.)

An Act to relieve Members of County Councils and other Local Authorities from Disqualification by reason of absence in certain cases.

[6th August 1900.]

Short title.

1. This Act may be cited as the Members of Local Authorities Relief Act, 1900.

Relief from disqualification by reason of absence in certain cases.

2. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, or in the Local Government Acts, 1888 and 1894, or in the Local Government (Ireland) Act, 1898, or in any Order in Council thereunder, an officer or soldier of the auxiliary forces or of the reserve forces on active service, or on service beyond the seas, shall not by reason only of his absence on that service be disqualified or vacate his office as a member of any county or borough or district or parish council, or board of guardians, or incur any fine or other liability.

See s. 46 (6), (8) of the L. G. A., 1894, ante, pp. 959, 960. The provisions of this Act were extended during the late war to all members of the naval and military forces and to all persons whose employment in connection with naval or military service the Local Government Board considered might properly be treated as on such service (5 Geo. 5, c. 10).

Note to Section 2.

3. In this Act the expressions "soldier," "reserve forces," "auxiliary forces," "active service," and "beyond the seas," have the meanings respectively assigned to them by the Army Act.

Interpretation.

By s. 190 of the Army Act, 1881—

(4) The expression "officer" means an officer commissioned or in pay as an officer in her Majesty's forces, or any arm, branch, or part thereof; it also includes a person who, by virtue of his commission, is appointed to any department or corps of her Majesty's forces, or of any arm, branch, or part thereof; it also includes a person, whether retired or not, who, by virtue of his commission or otherwise, is legally entitled to the style and rank of an officer of her Majesty's said forces, or of any arm, branch, or part thereof:

Warrant and other officers holding honorary commissions are officers within the meaning of this Act, subject to the exceptions in this Act mentioned.

. . . . . .

(6) The expression "soldier" does not include an officer as defined by this Act, but, with the modifications in this Act contained in relation to warrant officers and non-commissioned officers, does include a warrant officer not having an honorary commission and a non-commissioned officer, and every person subject to military law during the time that he is so subject.

. . . . . .

(9) The expression "reserve forces" means the Army Reserve Force and the Militia Reserve Force [now obsolete, see the Reserve Forces Act, 1882].

(12) The expression "auxiliary forces" means the territorial force, the militia, the yeomanry, and the volunteers [see now the Territorial and Reserve Forces Act, 1907, and the Territorial Army and Militia Act, 1921].

By s. 189 (1): In this Act, if not inconsistent with the context, the expression "on active service" as applied to a person subject to military law means whenever he is attached to or forms part of a force which is engaged in operations against the enemy or is engaged in military operations in a country or place wholly or partly occupied by an enemy, or is in military occupation of any foreign country. And by s. 190 (20): The expression "enemy" includes all armed mutineers, armed rebels, armed rioters, and pirates; (24) the expression "foreign country" means any place which is not situate in the United Kingdom, a colony, or India, as above defined, and is not on the high seas; (25) the expression "beyond the seas" means out of the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, and the Isle of Man.

THE HOUSING OF THE WORKING CLASSES ACT, 1900.

1.—(1) Section ten of the Local Government Act, 1888, in so far as it authorises the transfer to county councils of certain powers, duties and liabilities of Government Departments, shall be construed as authorising the transfer by Provisional Order of all or any of those powers, duties or liabilities to the council of a particular county or county borough, as well as to such councils generally.

(2) A Provisional Order shall not be made under this section except on the application of the council of a county or county borough.

(3) Where the Local Government Board propose to make a Provisional Order under this section transferring any power, duty or liability to the council of a county or county borough, the Board shall give notice to all local authorities who, in the opinion of the Board, are likely to be affected by the transfer, and if, within such time as the Board prescribe, a majority of those authorities notify to the Board that they object to any such proposed transfer, the Order shall not be proceeded with so far as relates to that transfer, but without prejudice to the power of the Board to propose a new Order.

(4) For the purposes of this Act, the expression "local authorities" means the following local authorities, namely, the council of a borough or other urban district, a rural district council, a board of guardians, a metropolitan borough council and the Common Council of the city of London.

(3) If any question arises as to whether this Act applies to any power conferred by, or referred to in, any enactment, the decision of the Treasury shall be conclusive for all purposes.

(4) Sub-sections (1) and (5) of section eighty-seven of the Local Government Act, 1888 (which relates to local inquiries), shall apply for the purpose of the carrying out by the Local Government Board of any of the powers transferred to them under this Act.

In any borough (including a metropolitan borough) or district in which the Baths and Washhouses Acts, 1846 to 1899, had been adopted, it had previously been necessary that the approval of the Treasury should be obtained to the appropriation or alienation of land under ss. 24, 31 and 32 of the Act of 1846.

The Treasury had also been the department whose approval was required to the borrowing of money by burial boards; and where the council of a borough or urban district had been constituted a burial board, or had had transferred to them the powers and duties of a burial board, the Treasury had in nearly every case been the department whose approval was required to the borrowing of money by the council for the purposes of the Burial Acts, 1852—1900.

Again, the L. G. A., 1888, s. 72, provided that the L. G. B. should exercise as regards any county borough, or other borough, the powers conferred by Part V. of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, relating to corporate property and liabilities, and as respects the approval of loans and of alienation of property and other matters therein mentioned. Powers had, however, been conferred from time to time upon the Treasury by various local or private Acts in relation to the property and loans of town councils, and in some cases it had been a matter of doubt whether the enactment above referred to had or had not transferred to the L. G. B. the powers with which the Treasury were thus invested.

The effect of sub-s. (1) of s. 1 of the present Act is to substitute the L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health) for the Treasury in relation to the matters above referred to.

THE PREVENTION OF CORRUPTION ACT, 1906.

(6 EDW. 7, c. 34.)

An Act for the better Prevention of Corruption (a). [4th August 1906.]

(a) The Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889, 52 & 53 Vict. c. 69, ante, p. 794, and the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1916 (6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 64), post, p. 1087, may be cited as the Prevention of Corruption Acts, 1889 to 1916.

Punishment of corrupt transactions with agents.

1.—(1) If any agent (b) corruptly accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain, from any person, for himself or for any other person, any gift or consideration as an inducement or reward for doing or forbearing to do, or for having after the passing of this Act done or forborne to do, any act in relation to his principal's affairs or business, or for showing or forbearing to show favour or disfavour to any person in relation to his principal's affairs or business; or

If any person corruptly gives or agrees to give or offers any gift or consideration to any agent as an inducement or reward for doing or forbearing to do, or for having after the passing of this Act done or forborne to do, any act in relation to his principal's affairs or business, or for showing or forbearing to show favour or disfavour to any person in relation to his principal's affairs or business; or

If any person knowingly gives to any agent (b), or if any agent knowingly uses with intent to deceive his principal, any receipt, account, or other document in respect of which the principal is interested, and which contains any statement which is false or erroneous or defective in any material particular, and which to his knowledge is intended to mislead the principal (bb);

he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and shall be liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, or to a fine not exceeding five hundred pounds, or to both such imprisonment and such fine, or on summary conviction to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding four months, or to a fine not exceeding fifty pounds, or to both such imprisonment and such fine (c).

(b) A person serving under any public body within the meaning of the Act of 1889 as amended by s. 4 of the Act of 1916, in addition to the bodies mentioned in that Act, is an agent within the meaning of this Act. See the Act of 1916, s. 4 (3), post, p. 1089.

A police constable on duty is an agent for purposes of this Act. See Graham v. Hart (1908), S. C. (J.) 26; see also Secret Commissions and Bribery Prevention League v. Martin (1913), 48 L. Jo. 183; R. v. Whitaker, [1914] 3 K. B. 1283; 79 J. P. 28.

(bb) This paragraph is not limited either by the title of the Act or by the context of the two preceding paragraphs to cases in which the defendant acts corruptly. Neither the corruption nor the attempted corruption of the agent nor his knowledge of the falsity of the statement is a necessary ingredient in the offence created by this paragraph. See Sage v. Eicholz, [1919] 2 K. B. 171; 83 J. P. 170.

(c) A person convicted on indictment of a misdemeanour under this section shall, where the matter or transaction in relation to which the offence was committed was a contract or a proposal for a contract with His Majesty or any government department or any public body or a sub-contract to execute any work comprised in such a contract, be liable to penal servitude for a term not exceeding seven nor less than three years; but this is not to prevent the infliction in addition to penal servitude of such punishment as under the Acts of 1889 or 1906 may be inflicted in addition to imprisonment, or to prevent the infliction in lieu of penal servitude of any punishment which may be inflicted under the said Acts. See the Act of 1916, s. 1, post, p. 1088.

Where in proceedings under the Act of 1889 or this Act it is proved that any money, gift, or other consideration has been paid or given to or received by a person in the employment of His Majesty or any government department or a public body by or from a person, or agent of a person holding or seeking to obtain a contract from His Majesty or any government department or public body, the money, gift, or consideration shall be deemed to have been paid or given or received corruptly or as such inducement or reward as is mentioned in such Acts unless the contrary is proved. See the Act of 1916, s. 2, post, p. 1088. With regard to the time within which summary proceedings may be commenced, see the Act of 1916, s. 3, post, p. 1088.

(2) For the purposes of this Act the expression "consideration" includes valuable consideration of any kind; the expression "agent" includes any person employed by or acting for another (d), and the expression "principal" includes an employer.

(3) A person serving under the Crown or under any corporation or any municipal, borough, county, or district council, or any board of guardians, is an agent within the meaning of this Act (d).

(d) See note (b), ante, p. 1015.

Prosecution of offences.

2.—(1) A prosecution for an offence under this Act shall not be instituted without the consent, in England of the Attorney-General or Solicitor-General, and in Ireland of the Attorney-General or Solicitor-General for Ireland.

22 & 23 Vict. c. 17.

(2) The Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859, as amended by any subsequent enactment, shall apply to offences under this Act as if they were included among the offences mentioned in section one of that Act (e).

(e) For the provisions of those Acts reference may be made to Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. IX., pp. 320, 331.

(3) Every information for any offence under this Act shall be upon oath.

(4) The expenses of any prosecution on indictment under this Act shall be defrayed as in cases of indictment for felony.

(5) A court of quarter sessions shall not have jurisdiction to inquire of, hear, and determine prosecutions on indictments for offences under this Act.

(6) Any person aggrieved by a summary conviction under this Act may appeal to a court of quarter sessions.

THE REMOVAL OF OFFENSIVE MATTER ACT, 1906.

Section 1.

(6 EDW. 7, c. 45.)

An Act to repeal the provisions of the Metropolitan Police Act, 1839, with respect to the removal of Offensive Matter in places within the Metropolitan Police District. [21st December 1906.]

1. Paragraph (4) of section sixty of the Metropolitan Police Act, 1839 (which paragraph relates to the emptying of privies and the removal of offensive matter), is hereby repealed. Repeal of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 60, as to offensive matter

Paragraph (4) of s. 60 of the Act of 1839 was as follows: "Every person who shall empty or begin to empty any privy between the hours of six in the morning and twelve at night, or remove along any thoroughfare any night soil, soap lees, ammoniacal liquor, or other such offensive matter, between the hours of six in the morning and eight in the evening, or who shall at any time use for any such purpose any cart or carriage not having a proper covering, or who shall wilfully or carelessly slop or spill any such offensive matter in the removal thereof, or who shall not carefully sweep and clean every place in which any such offensive matter shall have been placed, slopped or spilled; and in default of the apprehension of the actual offender, the owner of the cart or carriage employed for any such purpose shall be deemed to be the offender: Provided always, that this enactment shall not be construed to prevent the commissioners of sewers within the metropolitan police district, or any person acting in their service or by their direction, from emptying or removing along any thoroughfare at any time the contents of any sewer which they are authorised to cleanse or empty."

So far as regards the county of London this paragraph was repealed by the P. H. (London) A., 1891, but it continued in force in the area of the police district outside that county until the passing of the present Act. It was generally considered that it prevented byelaws as to the same subject-matter being made under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 44, or the P. H. A., 1890, s. 26 (1) (if in force), by urban and rural councils within the limits of the metropolitan police district; and consequently there were but few areas within that district where such byelaws had been made.

In the case of any district adjoining the county of London now proposing byelaws for regulating the removal of offensive matters, due regard will doubtless be had to the byelaw on the same subject made by the L. C. C. Under that byelaw removal during hours of darkness, which was permissible under the Police Act, is virtually prohibited, and difficulty had arisen in the past where removals had taken place from London into the surrounding districts from the conflict of the hours of removal fixed by the Act and the byelaw respectively. The L. G. B. are not prepared to confirm any byelaw which prescribes hours of darkness as times for removal, as they are advised that proper supervision by the officers of the council is then hardly feasible, and that the offences sought to be prevented by the byelaw are the more likely to arise.

2. This Act may be cited as the Removal of Offensive Matter Act, 1906. Short title.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (REGULATIONS AS TO FOOD) ACT, 1907.

(7 EDW. 7, c. 32.)

An Act to enable regulations to be made for the prevention of danger arising to public health from the importation, preparation, storage, and distribution of articles of food. [28th August 1907.]

1.—(1) The power of making regulations under the Public Health Act, 1896, and the enactments mentioned in that Act, shall include the Power to make regulations as to Section 1. —— the importation, preparation, storage and distribution of articles of food.

power of making regulations authorising measures to be taken for the prevention of danger arising to public health from the importation, preparation, storage, and distribution of articles of food or drink (other than drugs or water) intended for sale for human consumption, and, without prejudice to the generality of the powers so conferred, the regulations may—

(a) provide for the examination and taking of samples of any such articles;

(b) apply, as respects any matters to be dealt with by the regulations, any provision in any Act of Parliament dealing with the like matters, with the necessary modifications and adaptations;

(c) provide for the recovery of any charges authorised to be made by the regulations for the purposes of the regulations or any services performed thereunder.

(2) For the purposes of regulations made under this Act, articles commonly used for the food or drink of man shall be deemed to be intended for sale for human consumption unless the contrary is proved.

(3) In the application of this Act to Scotland, Part IV. of the Public Health (Scotland) Act, 1897, shall be substituted for the Public Health Act, 1896.

See the Public Health Act, 1896, p. 1003, ante, and notes thereto. The following Regulations have been issued under this Act:—

The Public Health (First series: Unsound Food) Regulations, 1908 (Sept. 12th, 1908);

The Public Health (Foreign Meat) Regulations, 1908 (Sept. 12th, 1908);

(now the Ministry of Health) shall make regulations under this Act for the prevention of danger arising to public health from the importation of milk and milk products intended for sale for human consumption or for use in the manufacture of products for human consumption. See the section and the notes thereto, post, Vol. II.

Publication of regulations.

2. All regulations made under this Act shall be laid as soon as may be before Parliament, and the Rules Publication Act, 1893 (a), shall apply to such regulations as if they were statutory rules within the meaning of section one of that Act, and that Act as so applied shall, notwithstanding anything in sub-section five of section one thereof, extend to Scotland, with the substitution of a reference to the Edinburgh Gazette for the reference to the London Gazette.

(a) This Act (56 & 57 Vict. c. 66) provides for the giving of notice and deposit of draft rules before they are finally made so as to permit representations to be made with a view to their amendment; for the making of provisional rules in cases of urgency; and for the printing, sale and citation of statutory rules.

3. This Act may be cited as the Public Health (Regulations as to Food) Act, 1907.

Section 1.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACTS AMENDMENT ACT, 1907 (a).

(7 EDW. 7, c. 53.)

An Act to amend the Public Health Acts. [28th August 1907.]

PART I (b).

GENERAL.

1. This Act is divided into Parts as follows : Division of Act into Parts.

Part I.—General.
II.—Streets and buildings.
III.—Sanitary provisions.
IV.—Infectious diseases.
V.—Common lodging-houses.
VI.—Recreation grounds.
VII.—Police.
VIII.—Fire brigade.
IX.—Sky signs.
X.—Miscellaneous.

(a) The object of this Act is to enable an authority to obtain certain additional powers without having to incur the expense of promoting a local Act. Its sections were founded upon provisions which had been allowed by Parliament in various local Acts. Object and scope of Act.

A town council or urban or rural district council desirous of exercising any of the powers conferred by the Act must apply to the Ministry of Health (or in the case of powers relating to police, fire brigades, or sky signs (Parts VII. to IX. of the Act), to the Home Secretary), for an Order declaring the part or section containing the desired powers to be in force in their borough or district.

Where a rural council obtain an Order, the Order will extend to such of the contributory places in the district as are specified in it (s. 3 (1)).

The Order may specify conditions subject to which any part or any section of the Act shall be in force in an urban district or contributory place, and where, in the opinion of the Ministry of Health (or Home Secretary), the circumstances so require, any such Order may, in relation to that district or contributory place, declare any part or section of the Act to be in force subject to such necessary adaptations as are specified in it (s. 3 (3), (4)). Any enactments in any "local Act" which appear to the Ministry of Health (or Home Secretary) to contain provisions similar to or inconsistent with the provisions extended to the district by the Order may be declared to be no longer in force in the district or contributory place to which the Order relates (s. 3 (1)). An enactment in a local Act may therefore be repealed by an Order of the Ministry of Health (or Home Secretary).

The Act does not contain a definition of the term "local Act" extending it to a Provisional Order (see, e.g., the definition in the London Government Act, 1899, s. 34) and it is a question whether a Provisional Order, or an Act confirming such an Order, could be repealed by an Order under the Act, more especially where the confirming Act is deemed to be a public general Act. For instance, the P. H. A., 1875, s. 297 (8), provides that every Act confirming a Provisional Order of the L. G. B. under that Act shall be deemed to be a public general Act, and sub-s. (5) of the section provides for the repeal of the Act confirming any such Order by a further Provisional Order.

The expenses incurred by an authority in the execution of the provisions of the Act are to be defrayed as part of their expenses under the Public Health Acts, and in the case of a rural district are to be charged as general expenses, subject, however, to any power of the Ministry of Health under any Act to order expenses to be charged as special expenses (s. 4, post, p. 1022).

All powers given to an authority under the Act are to be deemed to be in addition to, and not in derogation of, any other powers conferred upon such authority by any Act of Parliament, law, or custom, and such other powers may be exercised in the same manner as if the Act had not been passed (s. 11, post, p. 1024), and nothing in the Act is to exempt any person from any penalty to which he would have been liable if the Act had not been passed; but no person is to be liable, except in the case of a daily penalty, to more than one penalty in respect of the same offence (ibid.).

The following passage is quoted from a special report (1908) of the Police and Sanitary Committee of the House of Commons:—"In their reports on the private Bills of this session, the Local Government Board have called attention to proposals originally embodied in the Public Health Bill of 1907, and afterwards omitted. In dealing with these the policy of your Committee has been to disallow all proposals which were rejected on their merits in that Bill, and to consider in the same manner as hitherto those which were dropped merely to lighten the Bill in its progress through Parliament. Your Committee also decided not to allow local authorities to incorporate in their Bill sections of the Public Health Act of 1907 which could be obtained on application to the proper Department under the Act. Your Committee are of opinion that the time has come for Parliament to consider whether pressure cannot be brought to bear on local authorities to induce them, in the interests of ratepayers and inhabitants, to consolidate, and, where necessary, amend their local Acts, by which means the labours of your Committee in several instances would have been considerably shortened, and a great deal of expense saved to the parties concerned. They would also recommend that certain common terms, such as 'new street,' 'common lodging-house,' etc., be defined by statute. The local interpretation of such terms can only lead to confusion and divergence in practice. They observe with satisfaction that a Bill 'to amend the Public Health Acts with respect to the combined drainage of two or more houses belonging to the same owner' is now before the House."

(b) Except as regards Part I. the Act is only operative to the extent to which particular parts or sections may have been applied to a district by an Order of the Ministry of Health or Home Secretary as the case may be. See ss. 2 (2), 3, and 13, post, pp. 1020, 1021, 1025, and see note (a), supra.

Short title, construction and extent of Act.

2.—(1) This Act shall be construed as one with the Public Health Acts.

See as to the Acts included in the expression "The Public Health Acts," note (a) on p. 820, ante, and the Short Titles Act, 1896, Sched. II. See also the P. H. A., 1896; the P. H. (Ports) A., 1896; and the P. H. A., 1904.

As to the effect of the provision that the Act shall be "construed as one with" the Public Health Acts, see the note under s. 1 of the Private Street Works Act, 1892, ante, p. 875. See also the express provisions of s. 13, post, p. 1025.

(2) Part I. of this Act shall extend to England and Wales and Ireland exclusive of the administrative county of London, and all or any of the remaining Parts or all or any of the sections thereof shall extend to any district to which all or any of those Parts or sections are applied by an Order (a) of the Local Government Board or of the Secretary of State as the case may be.

(a) See hereon, s. 3, post, p. 1021. For the L. G. B. must now be read the Ministry of Health.

(3) This Act may be cited as the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907, and this Act and the Public Health Acts (a) may together be cited as the Public Health Acts, 1875 to 1907.

(a) See the note under sub-s. (1), supra.

(4) Any byelaws made under any enactment for which any provisions of this Act are substituted shall remain in force as if the byelaws had been made under the corresponding provisions of this Act.

But for this provision the bye-laws might have been held to be abrogated. See Watson v. Winch, [1916] 1 K. B. 688 ; 80 J. P. 149.

(5) This Act shall come into operation on the first day of January one thousand nine hundred and eight.

Application of Parts or section of Act.

3.—(1) The Local Government Board may, on the application of a local authority (a), by Order to be published in such manner as the Local Government Board direct, declare any Part or any section of this Act to be in force in the district of the local authority, or, where the local authority are a rural district council, in any contributory place within the district of the local authority, and may declare any enactments in any local Act, which appear to the Local Government Board to contain provisions similar to or inconsistent with any such Part or section, to be no longer in force in that district or contributory place (b).

For the L. G. B. must now be read the Ministry of Health.

(a) See the definition in s. 13, post, p. 1025.

(b) See hereon note (a) under s. 1, ante, p. 1019.

(2) The local authority shall, two weeks at least before applying for an Order, give notice of their intention to make such application by advertising the same once at least in one or more of the newspapers circulating in their district in each of two successive weeks, and no order shall be made under this section until proof of such advertisement has been given to the satisfaction of the Local Government Board, and until at least one month has elapsed after the date of such advertisement.

Practice of the L. G. B. in regards to application.

With reference to applications under this section, the L. G. B. in a letter dated December 23rd, 1907, said :

" In considering whether application should be made to have any Part or section of the Act put in force, the local authority should have regard to the circumstances and needs of the locality. They should cause any local Act in force in their district to be carefully examined in order to ascertain whether it contains any provision bearing on the subject-matter of any Part or section of the present Act which they desire to have put in force.

" The Board will be ready to give attention to applications under the Act, but they think that such applications should not be made unless the local authority are satisfied that the powers sought are really needed.

" It is necessary that the local authority should, two weeks at least before applying to the Board for an Order, give notice of their intention to make the application by advertising the same once at least in one or more of the newspapers circulating in their district in each of two successive weeks, and no Order is to be made until proof of the advertisement has been given to the satisfaction of the Board, and until at least one month has elapsed after the date of such advertisement (s. 3 (2)).

" The application, which should not be made until after the expiration of two weeks from the date of the second week's advertisement, should be by resolution of the local authority asking the Board to put in force any specified Part or section of the Act which the local authority desire to have applied to their district, and in the case of a rural district council should state whether the application relates to the whole district, or to specified contributory places in it. A copy of the resolution, certified by the clerk, should be forwarded to the Board, and at the same time they should be furnished with a statutory declaration to be made by the clerk, verifying the fact of the issue of the necessary advertisements, and having copies of the newspapers in which the advertisements were published annexed to it as exhibits.

"The Board think that it will be found convenient if before a local authority publish any advertisement or make any formal application for an Order under s. 3 they forward to the Board drafts of the proposed advertisement and resolution. These should be accompanied by a statement setting out as regards each Part or each section of the Act to which the proposal relates the grounds upon which it is made. A list of any local Acts in force in the district and of any Provisional Orders altering such Acts should also be supplied, and if any of them contain provisions bearing on the subject-matter of any Part or section included in the proposed application, a copy of the local Act or Order should be forwarded, and a reference should be given to the provisions in it which are in question. If there is no local Act in force, this should be stated. This procedure will enable the Board to consider the proposal before any advertisement is issued, and, if necessary, to make suggestions for its amendment."

(3) Any such Order may specify conditions subject to which any Part of any section of this Act shall be in force in the district or contributory place, and where, in the opinion of the Local Government Board, the circumstances so require, any such Order may, in relation to that district or contributory place, declare any Part or any section of this Act to be in force subject to such necessary adaptations as are specified in the Order.

A statement of the effect of each Order specifying conditions or adaptations as aforesaid shall be published in the London Gazette as well as in any other manner directed by the Local Government Board.

(4) In regard to Part VII. (Police), Part VIII. (Fire Brigade), and Part IX. (Sky Signs) of this Act, the Secretary of State shall be deemed to be substituted in this section for the Local Government Board.

Expenses of local authority.

4. All expenses incurred or payable by a local authority in the execution of this Act and not otherwise provided for may be charged and defrayed in the case of an urban sanitary authority or urban district council, as the case may be, as part of the expenses incurred by them in the execution of the Public Health Acts and in the case of a rural district council shall subject to any power of the Local Government Board under any Act to order the contrary, be charged and defrayed as a part of their general expenses under the Public Health Acts.

As to the expenses of an urban sanitary authority and urban district council, see the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 207—228, ante, pp. 469—510. As to the expenses of rural district councils, see ibid., ss. 229—232, ante, pp. 510—520. As to the power of the Ministry of Health to order expenses to be "special," see ibid., s. 229, the P. H. A., 1890, s. 49, and the L. G. A., 1894, s. 29 (b), referred to in note (e) at p. 512, ante.

Enquiries by Local Government Board.

5.—(1) The Local Government Board may direct any enquiries to be held by their inspectors which they may deem necessary in regard to the exercise of any powers conferred upon them under this Act, and the inspectors of the Local Government Board shall for the purposes of any such enquiry have all such powers as they have for the purposes of enquiries directed by that Board under the Public Health Act, 1875 (a).

(a) See the P. H. A., 1875, s. 296, ante, p. 629, and notes thereunder.

(2) The local authority shall pay to the Local Government Board any expenses incurred by that Board in relation to any enquiries referred to in this section, including the expenses of any witnesses summoned by the inspector holding the enquiry, and a sum to be fixed by that Board not exceeding three guineas a day for the services of such inspector.

(3) The Secretary of State may order that a local enquiry be held in regard to the exercise of any powers conferred on him under this Act. The person holding any such enquiry shall receive such remuneration as the Secretary of State may determine, and that remuneration and the expenses of the local enquiry shall be paid by the local authority.

The Ministry of Health do not nor does the Secretary of State as a rule direct local inquiries before deciding upon applications for the powers of this Act.

Legal proceedings.

6. Offences under this Act or under any byelaw (a) made under the powers of this Act or under the powers of the Public Health Act, 1875, or any enactment amending or extending that Act, may be prosecuted, and penalties, forfeitures, costs, and expenses recovered, in like manner and subject to the same provisions as offences which may be prosecuted, and penalties, forfeitures, costs, and expenses which may be recovered, in a summary manner under the Public Health Acts (b).

(a) Doubt has at times been expressed whether a penalty under a byelaw is a penalty "under" the Act, which gave power to make the byelaw. See note (b), p. 441, ante, where it is submitted that it is. Section 6 removes this doubt in cases within its terms.

(b) See the following sections of the P. H. A., 1875, relating to the matters here mentioned: s. 251, ante, p. 551 (see also the notes under the repealed s. 252, ante, p. 558); ss. 253—255, ante, pp. 559—563; ss. 257—260, ante, pp. 568—581; and s. 262, ante, p. 582.

Appeals to quarter sessions, etc.

7.—(1) Except where this Act otherwise expressly provides (a) any person aggrieved—

(a) By any order, judgment, determination, or requirement of a local authority under this Act;

(b) By the withholding of any order, certificate, licence, consent, or approval, which may be made, granted, or given by a local authority under this Act;

(c) By any conviction or order of a court of summary jurisdiction under any provision of this Act;

may appeal, in manner provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts (b), to a court of quarter sessions.

A similar enactment is to be found in s. 7 of the P. H. A., 1890, s. 7. See that section and the cases cited in the notes thereto, ante, p. 823.

The cases in which an appeal will lie under this provision are indicated in the notes to the several sections.

(a) Sections 42, 48, post, pp. 1046, 1049, appear to make express provision otherwise. See the notes under those sections.

(b) The provisions of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts relating to appeals will be found in the notes to s. 269 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 602.

(2) Where any person deems himself aggrieved by the decision of the local authority in any case in which the local authority, under this Act, are empowered to recover in a summary manner any expenses incurred by them, or to declare the expenses to be private improvement expenses, section two hundred and sixty-eight of the Public Health Act, 1875 (a), shall apply as it applies to cases under that Act, and sub-section (1) of this section shall not apply in any such case, whether arising under the Public Health Act, 1875, or under this Act; but nothing in this sub-section shall extend to any case in which an appeal to a court of summary jurisdiction in relation to any requirement of a local authority, or to any such expenses, is expressly authorised by this Act (b).

Section 7.

See the very similar provision in the P. H. A., 1890, s. 7 (2), p. 824, ante. The same difficulties appear to arise in construing this sub-section, and also the further difficulty of attaching an intelligible meaning to the words "whether arising under the P. H. A., 1875, or under this Act." In R. v. Recorder of Belfast, [1919] 2 I. R. 171, it was held that the word "decision" in this sub-section must bear the same interpretation as in s. 268 of the Public Health Act, 1875.

(a) See this section and the notes thereunder, ante, p. 595.

(b) Section 42, post, p. 1046, and s. 48, post, p. 1049, expressly authorise appeals to a court of summary jurisdiction.

More than one sum in one summons.

8. Any information, complaint, warrant or summons made or issued for the purpose of this Act or of the Public Health Acts may contain in the body thereof or in a Schedule thereto several sums.

This section is identical in terms with s. 8 of the P. H. A., 1890. See the note under that section at p. 824, ante.

Byelaws.

9. All the provisions with respect to byelaws contained in sections one hundred and eighty-two to one hundred and eighty-six of the Public Health Act, 1875 (a), and any enactment amended or extended by those sections shall apply to all byelaws from time to time made by a local authority under the provisions of this Act, provided that the Secretary of State shall be the confirming authority for byelaws made under Part VII. (Police) of this Act.

(a) See these sections and the notes thereunder, ante, pp. 433—445.

Compensation, how determined.

10. Where any compensation, costs, damages, or expenses is or are by this Act directed to be paid, and the method for determining the amount thereof is not otherwise provided for, such amount shall in case of dispute be ascertained in the manner provided by the Public Health Acts.

See the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 179—181, and notes thereunder, and see also ibid., s. 308, and notes thereunder.

Powers of Act cumulative.

11. All powers given to a local authority under this Act shall be deemed to be in addition to and not in derogation of any other powers conferred upon such local authority by any Act of Parliament, law, or custom, and such other powers may be exercised in the same manner as if this Act had not been passed (a).

Nothing in this Act shall exempt any person from any penalty to which he would have been liable if this Act had not been passed, but no person shall be liable, except in the case of a daily penalty (b), to more than one penalty in respect of the same offence. Section 11.

(a) See the P. H. A., 1875, s. 341, ante, p. 666, and notes thereunder. Section 11 must be read subject to the latter part of s. 3 (1), ante, p. 1021, under which powers under a local Act may be put an end to.

(b) See the definition of "daily penalty" in s. 13, infra.

12. Nothing in this Act affects prejudicially any estate, right, power, privilege, or exemption of the Crown, and in particular nothing herein contained authorises any local authority to take, use, or in any manner interfere with any portion of the shore or bed of the sea or of any river, channel, creek, bay, or estuary, or any land, hereditaments, subjects, or right of whatsoever description belonging to his Majesty in right of his Crown, and under the management of the Commissioners of Woods or of the Board of Trade respectively, without the consent in writing of the Commissioners of Woods or the Board of Trade, as the case may be, on behalf of his Majesty first had and obtained for that purpose (which consent the said Commissioners and Board are hereby respectively authorised to give). Crown rights.

13. In this Act, if not inconsistent with the context— Interpretation.

The expression "local authority" means an urban sanitary authority, an urban district council, or a rural district council:

The expression "district of the local authority" means an urban sanitary district, an urban district, or a rural district:

By the P. H. A., 1875, s. 6, urban sanitary districts were of three kinds: (1) municipal boroughs; (2) Improvement Act districts; and (3) local government districts, the urban sanitary authorities being respectively the borough council, the improvement commissioners, and the local board. By the L. G. A., 1894, s. 21 (1), urban sanitary authorities were to be called urban district councils, and their districts were to be called urban districts, but nothing in the section was to alter the style or title of the corporation or council of a borough. By s. 21 (3) the expression "district council" was to include the council of every urban district, whether a borough or not, and the expression "county district" was to include every urban district, whether a borough or not. The L. G. A., 1888, created county boroughs, and it is clear that in such a borough the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses acting through the council were, as in other boroughs, the urban sanitary authority, and their district an urban sanitary district, under the P. H. A., 1875; but it is not clear how far a county borough is an urban district, and the council thereof an urban district council under the L. G. A., 1894. Section 21 of that Act, is contained in Part II. of the Act, and s. 35 enacts that Part II., save as specially provided by the Act, shall not apply to a county borough. The terms district council and urban district are used in other parts of the Act, e.g., in s. 62, and in Kirkdale Burial Board v. Liverpool Corporation, ante, p. 977, it was held that the area of a county borough was an urban district within the meaning of that section. In order, therefore, that this Act should embrace county boroughs, it was possibly not sufficient to make use of the expressions urban district council and urban district, and the expressions urban sanitary authority and urban sanitary district were used, these expressions clearly including the council of a county borough and its district.

The expression "daily penalty" means a penalty for each day on which an offence is continued after conviction therefor:

Section 13.

The expressions "lands" (a), "premises" (b), "owner" (c), "street" (d), "house" (e), "drain" (f), and "sewer" (g) have respectively the same meaning as in the Public Health Acts:

The expressions "clerk," "medical officer," "surveyor," and "inspector of nuisances" mean the clerk, medical officer of health, surveyor, and inspector of nuisances respectively of the district of the local authority:

The expression "dairy" includes any farm, farmhouse, cowshed, milk store, milk shop, or other place from which milk is supplied or in which milk is kept for the purposes of sale within (unless otherwise expressed) the district of the local authority:

The expression "dairyman" includes any cowkeeper, purveyor of milk, or occupier of a dairy within (unless otherwise expressed) the district of the local authority (h):

The expression "infectious disease" means any infectious disease to which the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, for the time being applies within the district of the local authority;

The expressions "the commencement of this Part" and "the commencement of this section" used in relation to any part or section of this Act mean respectively the date at which, by an Order made by the Local Government Board, or by the Secretary of State as the case may be, in pursuance of this Act, and subject to any conditions or adaptations specified in that Order, the Part or section is declared to be in force:

Other expressions to which a special meaning is assigned by the Public Health Act, 1875, have respectively the same meaning in this Act as they have in that Act.

PART II.

STREETS AND BUILDINGS.

Deposit of plan to be of no effect after certain intervals.

15. (a) The deposit of any plans or sections of any street or building, in pursuance of any byelaw in force in the district, may, by notice in writing (b) to the person by whom the plans or sections have been deposited, be declared by the local authority to be of no effect if the work to which the plans or sections relate is not commenced (c)—

As to plans and sections deposited before the commencement of this section (d), within three years from that date;

As to plans and sections deposited on or after the commencement of this section (d), within three years of the deposit of the plans and sections.

When the deposit of any plans and sections has been declared to be of no effect, a fresh deposit shall be necessary before the work to which they relate is commenced.

The local authority shall give notice of the provisions of this section to every person intending to lay out a new street or erect a new building in relation to which plans and sections have been deposited before the commencement of this section (d), but the laying out of which street or erection of which building shall not have been commenced, and shall attach a similar notice to the approval of every such intended work in relation to which plans and sections have been deposited subsequent to the commencement of this section (d).

(a) Where this section has been applied in any district by an Order of the Ministry of Health (and it is understood that an Order is readily granted, even for rural districts, if building byelaws are in force) the authority may, if the prescribed notice be duly given, secure a fresh deposit of plans and sections after the prescribed period. It is not clear whether there will be a right of appeal under s. 7, ante, p. 1023, against a "declaration."

(b) As to notices and service thereof, see the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 266, 267, ante, p. 593.

(c) On the question whether work to which plans relate has been commenced, see White v. Sunderland Corporation and Harrogate Corporation v. Dickinson, ante, p. 351.

(d) As to the term "commencement of this section," see s. 13, ante, p. 1026.

As to plans deposited with local authority.

16. The local authority may retain any drawings, plans, elevations, sections, specifications, and written particulars, descriptions or details, deposited with and approved by them in pursuance of any enactment for the time being in force in the district or of any byelaw thereunder.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied by an Order of the Ministry of Health. It extends only to drawings, plans, etc., approved by the authority. It is understood that an order is readily granted.

Power to vary position or direction and to fix beginning and end of new streets.

17.—(1) The local authority may, on the deposit of a plan and sections of a new street in pursuance of a byelaw in force in the district, by order vary the intended position, direction or termination, or level of the new street so far as is necessary for the purpose of securing more direct, easier, or more convenient means of communication with any other street or intended street, or for the purpose of securing an adequate opening at either end of the new street, or of securing compliance with any enactment or byelaw in force in the district for the regulation of streets and buildings.

The local authority may also by their order fix the points at which the new street shall be deemed to begin or end, and the limits of the new street as determined by the points so fixed shall have effect for the purposes of the Public Health Acts, 1875 to 1907, and of any byelaws made under those Acts and in force within the district.

This section only becomes operative when applied to a district by an Order of the Ministry of Health. When so applied the powers of an authority will be greatly increased, for the powers which may be obtained by means of byelaws made under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 157, ante, p. 327, extend only to the level, width, and construction of new streets. An order under this section might perhaps have obviated the difficulty experienced by the authority in Kirby v. Paignton U. D. C., p. 291, ante.

It is understood that the powers of the section are readily granted, at any rate to urban authorities.

Sub-section (2) imposes an important limitation upon the exercise of the powers conferred by sub-s. (1). See also sub-s. (4), which requires an authority to pay compensation to any person injuriously affected by the exercise of their powers under the section.

Any owner aggrieved by an order of an authority made under this section may appeal to quarter sessions: see s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

(2) The powers of the local authority under this section shall not be exercisable in any case in which it is shown, to their satisfaction, that compliance with their order will entail the purchase of additional lands by the owner of the lands on which the new street is intended to be laid out, or the execution of works elsewhere than on those lands.

(3) Where the local authority make an order under this section a person shall not lay out or construct the new street otherwise than in compliance with the order. If any person acts in contravention of this provision, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds (a), and to a daily penalty (b) not exceeding forty shillings.

(a) As to recovery, see s. 6, ante, p. 1023, and the note thereto. As to appeal, see s. 7, p. 1023, ante.

(b) See for the definition of this term, s. 13, ante, p. 1025.

(4) The local authority shall pay compensation to any person injuriously affected by the exercise by the local authority of their powers under this section.

The amount of such compensation will be ascertained in the manner provided by the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 179—181, 308. See s. 10, ante, p. 1024.

Crossing for cattle, etc. over footways.

18. The provision and use of new means of access for any cattle, any beast of draught or burden, any waggon, cart, or other wheeled carriage exceeding four feet in width or two hundredweight in weight, to or from any premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on any street which has become a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, may, where that provision involves passage across or interference with any such part of the street as comprises a kerbed or paved footway, be allowed by the local authority subject to the following conditions (that is to say):

(a) Every person who intends to provide the new means of access shall give notice in writing of his intention to the local authority, and shall at the same time submit, for the approval of the local authority, a plan showing the position, gradient, and mode of construction of the intended means of access;

(b) When the plan, with or without amendment, has been approved by the local authority, the person may, upon receiving notice of their approval, proceed to execute the necessary works, but those works shall be executed under the supervision and to the reasonable satisfaction of the local authority, and in accordance with the plan as approved by the local authority ; Section 18.

(c) After the completion of the works the new means of access may be used, subject to the conditions which, in pursuance of any provisions of the law relating to highways, attach to the use for the like purpose of any carriage way forming part of a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large.

This section only becomes operative when applied to a district by an Order of the Ministry of Health. It is understood that the powers are readily granted to urban authorities. The meaning of the section is not clear. At common law the owner of premises abutting upon a highway is entitled to access to such highway at any point where his premises are in contact with it (see St. Mary, Newington (Vestry of) v. Jacobs, ante, p. 300, and cases cited therewith). If a frontager owns half the width of the highway, he is entitled to exercise this right to the extent of opening a new cartway across a pavement on to the roadway beyond it so long as there is no unreasonable interference with the public enjoyment of the highway (St. Mary, Newington (Vestry of) v. Jacobs, supra), and apparently he may do so even if he does not own any part of the highway (Rowley v. Tottenham U. D. C., [1914] A. C. 95 ; 78 J. P. 97). On the section being applied in any district, the question may, therefore, arise, " Will it limit this common law right of access ? " In Rowley v. Tottenham U. D. C., supra, where the local Act contained a similar section, the M.R. said that such section seemed to recognise, and at the same time to regulate, the right to cross a kerbed footpath. If it be the true view that s. 18, supra, limits the common law right of access, it would seem that, until a new means of access had been provided in accordance with the section, anybody who in an urban district drove a vehicle across a pavement and injured it would be liable to a penalty under the latter part of s. 149 of the P. H. A., 1875. The section in the Tottenham Act imposed liability to a penalty for driving a vehicle across a footway (whether or not injury was caused thereby) until a communication in accordance with the section had been provided. To this extent the section was dissimilar to s. 18 in the text.

If a local authority seek to impose conditions which a frontager deems to be unreasonable, he may appeal to quarter sessions. See s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

19. (a).—(1) Where repairs are required (b) in the case of any street, not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, to obviate or remove danger to any passenger or vehicle in the street, the local authority may give notice in writing to the owners of the lands and premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on the street, and may require (c) the owners to execute, within a time to be specified in the notice, such repairs as are described in the notice. As to urgent repairs to private streets.

(a) This section only becomes operative in a district when applied thereto by an Order of the M. of H. Its object is apparently to enable an authority to effect temporary repairs to a street when in their opinion the time has not arrived for its being properly made up under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150, or the alternative provisions in the Private Street Works Act, 1892. It will be observed, however, that under sub-s. (4), infra, the owners of the lands and premises in the street can perhaps in some cases by means of a counter-notice force the hands of the authority and compel the making up of the street.

Difficulty must, however, arise in applying the section. In a rural district, for instance, its application involves a contradiction. The intention of its framers was apparently to limit its operation to a street which is not ripe for making up. As to such a street, however, a rural authority will not possess, and would probably find a difficulty in obtaining, urban powers in view of the practice of the Ministry of Health (see notes to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150, at p. 287, ante, and to the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 4, ante, p. 872) ; and, if they have not obtained such powers, the provision in sub-s. (4) as to a counter-notice cannot be operative. Again, in a case where it is disputed that a particular street is a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, when and how is the dispute to be determined? There is no provision for the settlement of such a dispute as in the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 7; presumably, the matter will be one for the justices when, after the money has been spent, proceedings are taken for its recovery.

The difficulty is apparently recognised by the Ministry of Health, for, although they have declared the section to be in force in a number of urban districts, they have adopted the practice of referring rural district councils who apply for an Order to their existing powers under the Highway Acts and under s. 25 (2) of the L. G. A., 1894, and of stating that a special case must be made out with regard to a particular street or road before an application can be further entertained.

(b) The question whether work required to be done amounts to "repairs" will be one of fact. See Ballard v. Wandsworth Borough Council (1906), 70 J. P. 331; 95 L. T. 118, decided on the somewhat similarly worded s. 3 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1890. In R. v. Recorder of Belfast, [1919] 2 I. R. 171, it was held that an appeal lies to quarter sessions against a requirement under this sub-section.

(c) When an owner is called upon under the next sub-section to repay to the authority the expenses (or his share thereof) incurred by them, he can appeal to the Ministry of Health.

(2) If, within the time specified in the notice, the repairs described in the notice are not executed, the local authority may execute the repairs, and may recover summarily, as a civil debt (a), the cost of the repairs so executed from the owners in default, and the amount recoverable from each owner shall be in the proportion which the extent of his lands and premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on the street, bears to the total extent of all lands and premises so fronting, adjoining, or abutting.

(a) See the P. H. A., 1875, s. 251, ante, p. 551, and note (b) thereunder as to the recovery of civil debts. As to appeal, see note (c), supra.

(3) Where the name or place of abode of an owner cannot be found by the local authority, a copy of the notice shall be sent by post to or left with the occupier of the lands and premises to which the notice relates, or, if there be no such occupier, shall be affixed upon some conspicuous part of the lands and premises.

(4) In every case in which, within the time specified in the notice, the majority in number or rateable value of owners of lands and premises in the street, by a notice in writing, require the local authority to proceed, in relation to the street, under section one hundred and fifty of the Public Health Act, 1875, or, if the Private Street Works Act, 1892, is in force in the district, under that Act, the local authority shall so proceed; and where the local authority so proceed they shall, on the completion of the necessary works, forthwith declare the street to be a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, and on and after the date of the declaration the street shall become a highway so repairable.

See the notes under sub-s. (1), supra. The authority of a district in which the Private Street Works Act, 1892, had been adopted, and to which this section had been applied, served notice to repair a road under s. 19 (1) on the persons whom they understood to be the owners of the adjoining premises. The notice recited that the road was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, but in fact there was along the middle of the road a footpath which was so repairable. The majority of the owners served a counter-notice requiring the authority to proceed under the Act of 1892. The authority approved a provisional apportionment under that Act, and some of the owners served notice of objection on the ground that the works were unreasonable and too costly. The authority then withdrew their original notice, being satisfied that it would be unwise to make up the road in a permanent manner as damage would be done to it by building operations. It also appeared that some of the owners of adjoining premises had not been served with the original notice, and no notice had been affixed to the land. On an application for a mandamus requiring the authority to proceed under the Act of 1892, it was held that in view of all the legal questions raised the rule ought not to be made absolute; and the court doubted whether service of a counter-notice under s. 19 (4) does more than require the authority to proceed under one or other of the sections mentioned if they see fit to proceed at all (R. v. Epsom U. D. C. (1912), 76 J. P. 389).

Where in consequence of a counter-notice a street is made up, the authority cannot exercise a discretion as to taking it over such as is permitted by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 152, ante, p. 319; the P. H. A., 1890, s. 41, ante, p. 855; and the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 19, ante, p. 886. The sub-section corresponds with s. 20 of the last-mentioned Act, ante, p. 886, but under s. 20 all the various works must have been done, whereas under the text it would appear to be sufficient if such works only be done as are for the time being necessary.

Quære, whether s. 7, ante, p. 1023, would enable owners to appeal against a "declaration."

Recovery of damages caused to footways by excavations.

20. If the footway of any street repairable by the inhabitants at large be injured by or in consequence of any excavations or other works on lands adjoining thereto, the local authority may repair or replace the footway so injured, and all damages and expenses of or arising from such injury and repair or replacement shall be paid to the local authority by the owner of the lands on which such excavations or other works have been made, or by the person causing or responsible for the injury.

In an urban district streets repairable by the inhabitants at large are vested in the council, who have, in respect of the surface of a street, and of so much of the actual soil as may be necessary for its preservation as a road, the same rights of action in respect of trespass, and of a nuisance damaging their property, as a private owner would have. See Wednesbury Corporation v. Lodge Holes Colliery Co., Limited, Cavan C. C. v. Kane, ante, p. 278. If s. 20 be applied to the district by an Order of the M. of H. (and it is understood that an Order is readily obtained), they will be able to take summary proceedings to recover damages caused to footways by excavations or other works on lands adjoining the street. This is an addition to their power to take summary proceedings in respect of injuries to pavements, etc. under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, ante, p. 273.

In rural districts such councils as have not had conferred upon them the powers of the P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, have no proprietary right over the surface of a street, and they do not possess the power conferred on an urban council of taking summary proceedings in connection with injuries thereto. The text, therefore, when it is applied in such a rural district, will confer upon the council an entirely new remedy.

As to recovery of the expenses and appeal, see ss. 6, 7, ante, p. 1023.

Power to alter names of streets.

21. The local authority may, with the consent of two-thirds in number and value of the ratepayers in any street, alter the name of such street or any part of such street. The local authority may cause the name of any street or of any part of any street to be painted or otherwise marked on a conspicuous part of any building or other erection.

Where this section is applied by an Order of the Ministry of Health to an urban district, it will supplement the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, s. 64 (in App. I., post, Vol. II.), incorporated by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 160, ante, p. 363, which confers the power of naming a street upon urban authorities. It might also be applied to rural districts; but the practice of the Ministry in such cases is understood to be to confine it to parishes in which s. 64 of the Act of 1847 is in force.

Semble, an aggrieved person might appeal under s. 7 (1), ante, p. 1023.

There is no statutory authority for numbering houses at the public expense.

Any person who shall wilfully and without the consent of the local authority, obliterate, deface, obscure, remove, or alter any such name, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

As to the recovery of this penalty and appeals, see ss. 6, 7, ante, p. 1023.

Buildings at corner of streets.

22. The local authority may require the corner of any building intended to be erected at the corner of two streets to be rounded off or splayed off to the height of the first storey or to the full height of the building, and to such extent otherwise as they may determine, and for any loss which may be sustained through the exercise of the powers by this section conferred upon the local authority they shall pay compensation.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied thereto by an Order of the Ministry of Health; and it is understood that powers under it are not granted unless special grounds are shown. The amount of compensation will be ascertained in the manner provided by the Public Health Acts. See s. 10, ante, p. 1024, and the note thereunder.

See s. 33, post, p. 1041, as to the buildings of railway and other companies.

An owner aggrieved by any requirement under the section might appeal to quarter sessions. See s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

What to be deemed new buildings.

23. For the purposes of this Act and the Public Health Acts, and any byelaws made thereunder, each of the following operations, namely:

(a) The re-erection, wholly or partially, of any building of which an outer wall is pulled down or burnt down to or within ten feet of the surface of the ground adjoining the lowest storey of the building, and of any frame building so far pulled down or burnt down as to leave only the framework of the lowest storey;

(b) The conversion into a dwelling-house of any building not originally constructed for human habitation, or the conversion into more than one dwelling-house of a building originally constructed as one dwelling-house only;

(c) The re-conversion into a dwelling-house of any building which has been discontinued as or appropriated for any purpose other than that of a dwelling-house;

(d) The making of any addition to an existing building by raising any part of the roof, by altering a wall, or making any projection from the building, but so far as regards the addition only; and

(e) The roofing or covering over of an open space between walls or buildings; shall be deemed to be the erection of a new building.

This section on being applied to a district by an Order of the Ministry of Health amends the P. H. A., 1875, s. 159, which is set out ante, p. 361. The effect of the section is that such of the building byelaws in force in the district as may be applicable will apply where any of the works enumerated in the section are contemplated, and plans must be submitted and the work executed in accordance with the byelaws accordingly. New byelaws may also be made to cover the operations described in the section. Note to Section 23.

It is understood that many urban councils have obtained the power, and that it has also been applied to rural districts in which building byelaws are in force.

For decisions bearing upon the construction and effect of the section, see notes to the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 157, 159, pp. 328, 361, ante. It was provided by a local Act that the making of an addition or projection should be deemed the erection of a new building. T. had a glass conservatory built over a brick scullery, and took away the glass and raised the scullery to the height of the conservatory, making it a room added to the house. It was held that the Justices were wrong in holding that because the new room occupied the same space as the glass conservatory, it was not therefore a new building (Meadows v. Taylor (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 717 ; 54 J. P. 757). A local Act provided that the conversion of one dwelling-house into two or more, and the reconversion into a dwelling-house of a building discontinued as a dwelling-house should be deemed to be the erection of a new dwelling-house. A block of three shops with dwelling rooms over each was converted into one shop in 1892. The upper part of the whole block was occupied as one dwelling-house from 1900 to 1903. In 1903 the shop was again divided into three shops, and the upper part correspondingly divided into three dwelling-houses. It was held that the alteration of the upper part into three dwellings, and its occupation as such, amounted to the erection of a new building and the occupation of a new dwelling-house within the meaning of the Act and the byelaw (Hall v. Eastbourne Corporation (1905), 69 J. P. 369). A man did work on an old railway carriage placed in a field, converting it into a dwelling-house, but leaving untouched the main portion of the shell. It was held that he had erected a new building (Hanrahan v. Leigh-on-Sea U. D. C., [1909] 2 K. B. 257 ; 73 J. P. 308). The conversion without any structural alteration of a harness room into a living room was held to amount to the conversion into a dwelling-house of a building not originally constructed for human habitation (Harding v. Larne U. D. C. (1911), 45 Ir. L. T. 182). See also Morgan v. Kenyon (1913), 110 L. T. 197 ; 78 J. P. 66, a case decided with reference to a local Act which provided that the conversion of a dwelling-house into any other building not intended for human habitation shall be deemed to be the erection of a new building (see the facts of this case fully set out at p. 363, ante).

By s. 21 of the Liverpool Improvement Act, 1882, "the division or conversion into more than one dwelling-house of any building originally constructed as one dwelling-house only shall be deemed . . . to be the erection of a new dwelling-house or dwelling-houses, and . . . the corporation shall determine which (if any) one of the houses formed out of the previously existing house shall be the old or original dwelling-house." By s. 37, if default in complying with the building regulations is made by the builder, the surveyor may give him notice of such default, and if the default is not begun to be remedied within forty-eight hours the builder may be summoned before a court of summary jurisdiction and ordered to remedy the default. By the Liverpool byelaws with respect to new buildings, every new dwelling-house must have a certain open space at the rear. The respondents deposited with the surveyor for Liverpool a plan showing a proposal to convert a dwelling-house, which had not the required open space at the rear, into three flats capable of being used as separate residences, and commenced the work before the health committee had expressed approval or disapproval of the plan. Subsequently the committee disapproved of the plan, but the respondents proceeded with the work and completed it. A notice was served on the respondents under s. 37, but it was not complied with, and summonses were issued against them under that section. The corporation had not determined which (if any) of the houses formed out of the previously existing house was to be regarded as the old or original dwelling-house :—Held, that as the plan had been disapproved, it was not a condition precedent to proceedings under s. 37 that the Corporation should have determined which of the houses formed out of the previously existing house was to be regarded as the old or original dwelling-house (Alexander v. Tracy (1915), 79 J. P. 458).

The appellants pulled down part of a very old inn, including certain outer walls, but left the rest standing. They gave notice and deposited plans showing their intention to erect a new part on the old part pulled down, but the notice and plans did not extend to the whole building. It was held (overruling Leonard v. Hoare, [1914] 2 K. B. 798 ; 78 J. P. 287) that on the true construction of the above section only such part of a building as had been pulled down to be re-erected was to be deemed a new building, and that the appellants had therefore complied with the bye-laws (R. v. Foots Cray U. D. C. (1915), 85 L. J. K. B. 191 ; 79 J. P. 521). The plaintiffs, governors of a school, made an addition to their school building which consisted in part of an addition to the front of the building of a projection three stories high. The defendants threatened to pull down the addition on the ground that it was a new building by virtue of the provisions in the text, and had not an open space in the rear as required by the byelaws relating to new buildings. It was held that the byelaw was unreasonable and bad, as it was impossible to provide an open space at the rear of a new building consisting of an addition to an existing building (Repton School Governors v. Repton R. D. C., [1918] 2 K. B. 133 ; 82 J. P. 257).

Byelaws as to height of chimneys.

24. Section one hundred and fifty-seven of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall be extended so as to empower the local authority to make byelaws—with respect to the height of chimneys of buildings and with respect to the height of buildings ; and with respect to the structure of chimney shafts for the furnaces of steam engines, breweries, distilleries, or manufactories.

Section one hundred and fifty-eight of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall also be in force in every district in which this section is in force.

See the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 157, 158, ante, pp. 327, 353 ; the former had already been extended by the P. H. A., 1890, s. 23, p. 839, ante.

Any byelaws made under s. 24 (when applied to a district by Order of the Ministry of Health) must be confirmed by the Ministry : see s. 9, ante, p. 1024, and note thereto.

For an exemption of buildings of railway companies and others, see s. 33, post, p. 1041.

It is understood that the Ministry of Health readily grant this power, even to rural district councils, when s. 157 of the Act of 1875 is in force in their area.

Yards to be paved, etc.

25. If any yard in connection with, and exclusively belonging to, a dwelling-house shall not be so formed, flagged, asphalted, or paved, or shall not be provided with such works on, above, or below the surface of the yard, as to allow of the effectual drainage of the subsoil or surface of the yard by safe and suitable means to a proper outfall, the local authority may, by notice in writing, require the owner of the dwelling-house, within twenty-one days after the service of the notice, to execute all such works as are necessary for the effectual drainage of the subsoil or surface of the yard to a proper outfall.

If, within the said period of twenty-one days, the owner has failed to complete the execution of the works specified in the notice, the local authority may execute the works, and may recover from the owner in a summary manner as a civil debt the expenses incurred by the local authority in the execution of the works.

Byelaws with respect to the paving of yards and open spaces in connection with dwelling-houses may be made under the P. H. A., 1890, s. 23, ante, p. 839. This section when applied to a district by an Order of the Ministry of Health, will give to the authority power to secure that yards shall be properly paved and drained. Any byelaws on the subject will be virtually superseded. In fact, the Order putting this section in force generally provides that the power of making and enforcing such byelaws shall cease to be exercised. A question may arise under the section as to how far repeated requirements may be made. See cases in notes to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 150, at pp. 294—296, ante, and cf. Harrison v. Owner of New Street Mews, [1906] 1 K. B. 703; 70 J. P. 355. Note to Section 25.

When applying for the powers of this section the facts as to existing byelaws in the district should be stated, and if there are byelaws a copy should be forwarded.

It would seem that an owner aggrieved by the authority's requirements might appeal against them to quarter sessions. See s. 7, ante, and note (b) to s. 19 (1).

Entrances to courts, etc., not to be closed.

26. After the commencement of this section the entrances to any court shall not, except with the consent of the local authority, be closed or narrowed or otherwise altered or affected by any permanent structure so as to impede the free circulation of air, and the height of any such entrance shall not, except with that consent, be lowered. The consent of the local authority under this section may be given, subject to compliance with such conditions as the local authority by their consent prescribe, with respect to the formation or provision of any other sufficient opening or means of access, or with respect to the provision of other sufficient means of securing free circulation of air throughout the court.

Nothing in this section shall have effect in relation to any court which by reason of its situation, use, architectural features, or other characteristics is, either wholly or in part, necessary for or ancillary to the ornament or amenity of any lands or premises.

Any person offending against this section shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds and to a daily penalty not exceeding twenty shillings.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied by an Order of the Ministry of Health. The Ministry will require to know whether there are any cases in which it appears likely that action under the section will be needed. In most cases some "adaptation" is required.

Any person aggrieved by a withholding of consent under the section may appeal to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 1023. As to the recovery of the penalty imposed by the section, see s. 6, ante, p. 1023.

As to temporary buildings.

27.—(1) Before any person erects or sets up a temporary building (a) he shall apply to the local authority for permission so to do.

The application shall be accompanied by a plan and sections of the proposed building drawn to a scale of not less than one inch to every eight feet, and a block plan, drawn to a convenient scale, showing the intended situation and surroundings of the proposed building, together with a specification describing the materials proposed to be used in the construction of the building, and the purpose for which the building is intended.

(2) The local authority shall, within one month (b) after the delivery of the plans and sections and specification, signify in writing (c) their approval or disapproval of the building to the person proposing to erect or set up the building (d).

(3) The local authority may attach to their approval any condition which they deem proper with regard to the sanitary arrangements of the building, the ingress thereto and the egress therefrom, protection against fire, and the period during which the building shall be allowed to stand (e).

Section 27.

(4) If any such building is begun, erected, or set up without such application accompanied by such plan, sections, and specification as this section requires, or after the disapproval of the local authority or before the expiration of one month without their approval, or is in any respect not in conformity with any condition attached by the local authority to their approval, the person who began, erected, or set up the building, or, if any such building is not removed within the period allowed by the local authority, the owner of the building (f) shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings (g), and to a daily penalty (h) not exceeding the like amount; and the local authority may cause the building to be pulled down or removed (i), and any expense incurred by them in and about the pulling down or removal of the building may, at their discretion, be recovered summarily as a civil debt (k) from the owner of the building or from the person erecting or setting up the building (kk).

(5) Where any such building is pulled down or removed by the local authority under the powers of this section the local authority may sell the materials or any part of the materials, and shall apply the proceeds of the sale in or towards payment of the costs and expenses incurred by them in relation to the pulling down or removal of the building, and shall pay the balance to the owner of the building.

(6) The following buildings shall be exempt from the operation of this section:

(a) Any building expressly exempt from the operation of the Public Health Acts or the byelaws made under those Acts and in force for the time being within the district (l);

(b) Any building erected or set up for the purpose of protecting or of preventing the acquisition of rights to light;

(c) Any temporary building set up as part of the plant to be used in or about or in connection with the construction, alteration, or repair of any building or other work; but so far as regards only so much of this section as relates to plans, sections, and specifications (m).

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied thereto by an Order of the Ministry of Health. Its provisions correspond to those contained in Part VII. of the London Building Act, 1894.

A great number of urban authorities, and also some rural authorities who have building byelaws, have been successful in obtaining the powers. The Order generally provides that the section shall not apply to temporary buildings erected or set up by the Territorial Army.

As to the law respecting temporary structures apart from this section, see ante, pp. 342, 343, and see Whitehorn v. Smelt, there cited, for a decision as to what can be a "building" at all within the meaning of the words "temporary building" as here used.

(a) See sub-s. (6) as to the buildings exempt from this section.

(b) This means a calendar month (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 3).

(c) See, as to authentication of the notice, the P. H. A., 1875, s. 266, ante, p. 593.

(d) Although by sub-s. (1) the permission of the authority is required for the erection of a temporary building, failure to disapprove of the plans would probably debar the authority from afterwards complaining. See sub-s. (4), infra, and Clarke v. Bloomfield (1885), 1 T. L. R. 323. An appeal to quarter sessions against a determination of the authority will lie under s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

Note to Section 27.

(e) This provision obviates a difficulty which has at times arisen when an authority have in the absence of express provision allowing them to do so, assented to some proposal subject to conditions: see, e.g., Parsons v. Timewell (1879), 44 J. P. 296. Non-compliance with any condition is provided for by the next sub-section.

(f) This need not necessarily be the person who erected the building.

(g) As to the recovery of this penalty, see s. 6, ante, p. 1023.

(h) See the definition of "daily penalty" in s. 13, ante, p. 1025.

(i) Notice must be given to the person in default, and an opportunity given to him to be heard before the authority demolish the building. See Cooper v. Wandsworth District Board of Works, and cases cited therewith, ante, p. 356, and Andrews v. Wirrall R. D. C., infra.

(k) See note (b) under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 251, ante, p. 551, as to the summary recovery of civil debts.

(kk) The local authority may justify the pulling down of a temporary building under this section though it may be a new building within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875, and the byelaws made under s. 157 of that Act (Andrews v. Wirrall R. D. C., [1916] 1 K. B. 863; 80 J. P. 257).

(l) The buildings of railway companies used for the purposes of the railways under any Act of Parliament were by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 157, ante, p. 327, exempted from the provisions of that section as to the making of byelaws. There is in s. 33 of this Act, post, p. 1041, a more limited exemption of buildings of railway companies, i.e., dwelling-houses are not exempted. That section, however, exempts also the buildings (other than dwelling-houses) of certain public bodies.

(m) I.e., application must, under sub-s. (1), be made for permission to erect it.

Removal of materials in streets.

28. The local authority may remove, appropriate, use, and dispose of all old materials existing in any street at the time of the execution by the local authority of any works in such street, unless the owners of buildings and lands in such street, within forty-eight hours after notice so to do served on them by the surveyor, remove such materials or their respective proportions thereof, and the local authority shall allow such sum as may be the reasonable value thereof to such owners for any materials which have been used or removed by the local authority, and in case of dispute the amount to be allowed shall be settled in the manner provided by the Public Health Act, 1875, with respect to compensation for damage sustained by reason of the exercise of any powers of that Act.

When this section has been applied to a district the powers of the authority in connection with the making up of private streets will be increased. Unless the owners wish to retain them, the authority may use old materials in making up the street or elsewhere, or may dispose thereof. The reasonable value is to be allowed, and in case of dispute such value will be ascertained in manner provided by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 308, ante, p. 642.

Deposit of building materials or excavations not to be made without consent.

29. It shall not be lawful for any person without the consent of the local authority in writing first obtained to lay any building materials, rubbish, or other thing, or make any excavation on or in any street repairable by the inhabitants at large, and when with such consent any person lays any building materials, rubbish, or other thing, or makes any excavation on or in any street, he shall, at his own expense, cause the same to be sufficiently fenced and a sufficient light to be fixed in a proper place on or near the same and to be continued every night from sunset to sunrise, and shall remove such materials, rubbish, or thing or fill up such excavation (as the case may be) when required by the local authority: and, if any person fails to comply in any respect with the requirements of this enactment, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds and to a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings, and the local authority may remove any such materials, rubbish, or thing, or fill up such excavation (as the case may be), and recover the expenses from the offender summarily as a civil debt.

This section (on being applied to a district) will supplement the provisions of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, s. 81 (in App. I., post, Vol. II.), which as regards urban districts is incorporated by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 160, ante, p. 363. It enables an authority to remove materials, etc. or fill up excavations and recover the expenses. It is understood that the Ministry of Health readily grant these powers.

As to the recovery of penalties, see s. 6, ante, p. 1023. As to the recovery of civil debts, see note (b) under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 251, ante, p. 551.

See also as to the displacement or taking up of streets in urban districts the P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, ante, p. 273.

As to the right of appeal, see s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

Dangerous places to be repaired or enclosed.

30. With respect to the repairing or enclosing of dangerous places the following provisions shall have effect (namely):

(1) If in any situation fronting, adjoining, or abutting on any street or public footpath, any building, wall, fence, steps, structure, or other thing, or any well, excavation, reservoir, pond, stream, dam or bank is, for want of sufficient repair, protection, or enclosure dangerous to the persons lawfully using the street or footpath, the local authority may, by notice in writing served upon the owner, require him, within the period specified in the notice and hereinafter in this section referred to as the "prescribed period," to repair, remove, protect, or enclose the same so as to prevent any danger therefrom:

(2) If, after service of the notice on the owner, he shall neglect to comply with the requirements thereof within the prescribed period, the local authority may cause such works as they think proper to be done for effecting such repair, removal, protection, or enclosure, and the expenses thereof shall be payable by the owner, and may be recovered summarily as a civil debt.

See s. 33, post, p. 1041, as to the buildings (other than a dwelling-house) of railway and other companies.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied thereto by an Order of the Ministry of Health. In connection with an application for the powers of this section, the Ministry will doubtless require to know whether there are in fact dangerous places in the district. Many councils, both urban and rural, have obtained the requisite order. The Ministry have stated that as a general rule they do not consider it desirable that the section should apply to the reconstruction and repair of retaining walls. It is therefore the practice to insert a condition in the Order excepting from the operation of the section any wall or structure in so far as the same is used either for the support of any street or public footpath repairable by the inhabitants at large, or for the protection of any street or public footpath from damage or obstruction by reason of the surface of the street or footpath being above or below the level of the surface of the adjoining land, unless the wall or other structure was built after the street or footpath became a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large by or at the expense of a person other than the highway authority responsible for the repair of the street or footpath.

Note to Section 30.

In urban districts local authorities already possess certain powers of dealing with buildings, walls, or attachments thereto, which are ruinous and dangerous to the public or adjoining occupiers: see the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, ss. 75—78, as incorporated with the P. H. A., 1875, by ibid., s. 160, ante, p. 363. By the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, s. 83 (also incorporated by s. 160), an urban council are directed to cause to be repaired, protected or enclosed, any building or hole or any other place near any street which is dangerous to passengers along any street, and the expenses of such repair, etc. are made recoverable as damages. See also the power to place fences alongside streets for the safety of foot passengers given by the P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, ante, p. 273. These provisions do not apply in a rural district unless urban powers in respect thereof have been conferred upon the rural council by an Order of the L. G. B. or the Ministry of Health. See also the provisions of the Quarry (Fencing) Act, 1887, the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872, and the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1911 (in App. I., post, Vol. II.), which are of general application.

It will be seen that where s. 30 is applied to a district previously existing powers as to dangerous buildings or places will be largely supplemented. See also s. 31, infra.

A person aggrieved by any action taken by an authority under s. 30 may appeal, but whether to quarter sessions or to the L. G. B. is not clear. See s. 7 and notes thereto, ante, p. 1023.

B. owned a narrow strip of land from fourteen to fifty feet in width between a street and a disused chalk pit. There was no fence between the street and the strip or between the strip and the pit. B. did not own the pit. Originally the edge of the pit was outside B.'s land, but in course of years some feet of his land had, from natural causes, slipped down into the pit, and the court found that the existence of the pit unfenced was a source of danger to persons lawfully using the street. It was held that the pit was "in a situation fronting, adjoining or abutting on" the street, and that the plaintiffs were justified in requiring B. to fence the edge of the pit on his land (Carshalton U. D. C. v. Burrage, [1911] 2 Ch. 133; 75 J. P. 250).

The appellants owned certain parts of the bank of the Mersey over which an ancient footpath ran, but were under no obligation to repair the footpath ratione tenuræ. Portions of the bank were washed away, and portions of the footpath fell into the river, and further portions were threatening to fall, and the way was thereby rendered dangerous to persons lawfully using the same. The local authority called upon the appellants under this section to repair and protect the bank so as to prevent danger therefrom. It was held that the section did not apply to such a case (Cheshire Lines Committee v. Heaton Norris Urban District Council, [1913] 1 K. B. 325; 76 J. P. 462). This case was distinguished from one which arose under a local Act which referred (inter alia) to any "ground" deemed by the surveyor to be dangerous (Gaby v. Palmer (1916), 85 L. J. K. B. 1240; 80 J. P. 212).

As to the possible liability of a council who leave unguarded a ravine by the side of a street which they make up, see McClelland v. Manchester Corporation, on p. 257, ante.

As to accidents to persons and children in public parks or on land belonging to an authority, see cases on pp. 373, 589, ante.

Fencing lands adjoining streets.

31. If any land (other than land forming part of any common) adjoining any street is allowed to remain unfenced or if the fences of any such land are allowed to be or remain out of repair, and such land is, owing to the absence or inadequate repair of any such fence, a source of danger to passengers, or is used for any immoral or indecent purposes, or for any purpose causing inconvenience or annoyance to the public, the Local Government Board on the application of the local authority may by Order empower the local authority to proceed under this section, and, in that case, at any time after the expiration of fourteen days from the service upon the owner or occupier of notice in writing by the local authority requiring the land to be fenced or any fence of the land to be repaired, the local authority may cause the land to be fenced or may cause the fences to be repaired in such manner as they think fit, and the reasonable expenses thereby incurred shall be recoverable from such owner or occupier summarily as a civil debt.

In so far as it makes provision for removing a source of danger to passengers, this section (on being applied to a district) will supplement the provisions of the last section. The other powers conferred by it were novel so far as general legislation is concerned. Two Orders of the Ministry of Health are necessary. In addition to the Order declaring the section to be in force in the district, a second Order must be obtained (by subsequent application) empowering the authority to proceed under the section as regards a particular piece of land.

Here again it would seem that there would be a right of appeal to sessions against the "requirement." See s. 7, ante, and note (b) to s. 19 (1).

The section has been declared to be in force in many districts, but it does not follow that the second order will be granted as a matter of course. In fact the Ministry require, when action is proposed, to be furnished with full particulars as to the pieces of land which have become dangerous or a nuisance, with the names of the owners, and a copy of any correspondence which has taken place, and with a plan and photographs of the spot. A local inquiry is then directed before any decision is given.

A local Act provided that "If any land . . . adjoining any street is allowed to remain unfenced . . . and such land is in the opinion of the council owing to the absence . . . of any such fence a source of danger to passengers or is used for any immoral or indecent purposes or for any purpose causing inconvenience or annoyance to the public," the council might fence the land and recover the cost. It was held that, if a piece of land is not provided with a fence reasonably effective for the purpose of preventing persons from going on to it, it is "unfenced," and also that upon the true construction of the section the question whether the land is "used for any immoral or indecent purposes or for any purpose causing inconvenience or annoyance to the public," is a question for the justices (Upjohn v. Willesden U. D. C., [1914] 2 K. B. 85; 78 J. P. 54). The present section does not contain the words "in the opinion of the council." A local Act provided that if the corporation were of opinion that danger to the public was likely to ensue by reason of land abutting on streets not being fenced, the owner of any such land should when required by the corporation and to their satisfaction fence off the land from the street and should afterwards keep such fence in repair. It was held that the Act did not apply to the retaining walls of an old turnpike road, but only to new streets where there were no fences and which, in the opinion of the corporation, were dangerous to the public (Rotherham (Mayor, etc. of) v. Fullerton (1884), 50 L. T. 364).

It may be mentioned that an owner or occupier of land is not under any obligation towards the public using a road to fence the road from his land so as to prevent harmless animals, like sheep, from straying upon it (Heath's Garage, Ltd. v. Hodges, [1916] 2 K. B. 370; 80 J. P. 321).

Hoards to be securely erected.

32.—(1) A person shall not use any hoarding or similar structure which is in, or abuts on, or adjoins any street, for any purpose, unless it is securely fixed to the satisfaction of the local authority.

(2) If any person acts in contravention of this section he shall be liable, in respect of each offence, to a penalty not exceeding five pounds and to a daily penalty not exceeding twenty shillings.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied thereto by an Order of the Ministry of Health, who, however, readily comply with applications. Its provisions are not limited to hoardings erected during building operations, but apply to hoardings erected for any purpose, and are therefore of wider application than the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, s. 80, or the P. H. A., 1890, s. 34.

Apparently an appeal will lie to quarter sessions (s. 7, ante).

In Barnett v. Covell (1904), 68 J. P. 93; 90 L. T. 29, under a similar clause in a local Act, the court refused to interfere with a finding that a hoarding in a field on a hedge bank parallel to the street, and only three feet from it, did not "abut" on the street. This case was distinguished in Rockleys, Ltd. v. Pritchard (1910), 74 J. P. 11; 101 L. T. 575, where a hoarding stood back 10 feet from the street, but there was no intervening fence; there the court approved a finding that it was either "in or abutting on or adjoining" the street, as it had become for the time being the de facto boundary of the street. It was again distinguished in Stockport Corporation v. Rollinson (1910), 74 J. P. 236; 102 L. T. 567; there R. erected two connected hoardings on private land at an angle made by two streets; one was seven inches from the edge of the street and six inches from an iron fence, which, however, did not obscure the view of posters on the hoarding; the other was twenty-five inches from the edge of the street and eleven inches from the parapet wall of a bridge bounding the street. On an information for erecting the hoardings "in" the street without consent, the justices held that as no part of the hoardings extended up to or upon the highway they were bound by the decision in Barnett v. Covell to hold that they were not "in" the street. The court sent the case back with an intimation that on the facts the hoardings were clearly "in" the street. See further as to "abutting" or "adjoining," cases cited on pp. 298 et seq., ante.

Note to Section 32.

33. Nothing in this Part or in any byelaws to be made under any enactment extended by this Part shall apply to a building (other than a dwelling-house) belonging to a railway company, or to any company or other public body authorised to construct, maintain, or improve a harbour, pier or dock, or to the owners of any canal or inland navigation, and used by the company, public body, or owners as a part of or in connection with their railway, harbour, pier, dock, canal or inland navigation.

Exemption of buildings of railway companies and others.

See the somewhat similar proviso at the end of s. 157 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 327, and note thereon at p. 352, ante, and note (l) under s. 27, ante, p. 1037.

PART III.

SANITARY PROVISIONS.

34. Section forty-one of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall have effect as if for the words "(but not otherwise)" there were substituted the words "or where on the report in writing of their surveyor or inspector of nuisances the local authority have reason to suspect that any such drain, water-closet, earth-closet, privy, ashpit, or cesspool is a nuisance or injurious to health."

Extension of s. 41 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55.

The powers of this section are readily granted by the Ministry of Health to both urban and rural councils.

See s. 41 of the P. H. A., 1875, and the notes thereto, ante, p. 105. It was held in Wood Green U. D. C. v. Joseph, ante, p. 105, that the written application required by s. 41 might proceed from the surveyor or inspector of nuisances. Where s. 34, supra, is applied to a district it will no longer be necessary for the officers of the authority to state that the drain, etc. is a nuisance or injurious to health; it will be sufficient to state facts which give rise to suspicion.

35. For the purposes of the Public Health Act, 1875—

(1) Any cistern used for the supply of water for domestic purposes so placed, constructed, or kept as to render the water therein

As to nuisances.

Section 35.

liable to contamination, causing or likely to cause risk to health ;

(2) Any gutter, drain, shoot, stack-pipe, or down-spout of a building which by reason of its insufficiency or its defective condition shall cause damp in such building or in an adjoining building ; and

(3) Any deposit of material in or on any building or land which shall cause damp in such building or in an adjoining building so as to be dangerous or injurious to health ; shall be deemed to be a nuisance within the meaning of the said Act.

This section will (in districts to which it is applied) extend the classes of nuisances specified in the P. H. A., 1875, s. 91, as nuisances liable to be dealt with summarily in manner provided by that Act. For the provisions of the Act of 1875 as to nuisances, see ss. 91—111, ante, pp. 165—211.

The section will usually require "adaptation," and in the case of rural districts it would seem sufficient if sub-ss. (2) and (3) were confined to buildings occupied by human beings. In a case in which the Ministry of Health granted powers under the section the adaptation took the following form :—" This section, so far as it relates to the deposit of material, shall have effect subject to the first proviso to s. 91 of the P. H. A., 1875. Byelaws made in pursuance of s. 16 of the L. G. A., 1888, for the prevention and suppression of nuisances shall not, in relation to any subject-matter of this section, be of any force or effect within the district."

Rain-water pipes not to be used as soil pipes.

36. No pipe used for the carrying off of rain water from any roof shall be used for the purpose of carrying off the soil or drainage from any privy or water-closet. Any person who shall offend against this section shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds and to a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

This section only becomes operative when applied to a district by an Order of the Ministry of Health under s. 3, ante, p. 1021. It will usually need "adaptation." As to appeal, see s. 7, ante.

Water or stack pipes not to be used as ventilating shafts.

37. No water-pipe, stack-pipe, or down-spout in existence at the commencement of this section, used for conveying surface water from any premises, shall be used or be permitted to serve or to act as a ventilating shaft to any drain. Any person who shall offend against this section after fourteen days from the service upon him by the local authority of notice of such offence shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings and to a daily penalty not exceeding twenty shillings.

The note to s. 36 applies to this section also.

Local authority may require old drains to be laid open for examination by surveyor before communicating with sewers.

38. Before any drain existing at the commencement of this section and then not communicating with any sewer of the local authority shall be made to communicate with any sewer of the local authority, the local authority may require the same to be laid open for examination by the surveyor, and no such communication shall be made until the surveyor shall certify that such drain may be properly made to communicate with such sewer.

Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 21, ante, p. 78, the owner or occupier of any premises within the district of a local authority is, subject to the conditions therein contained, entitled to cause his drains to empty into the sewers of that authority, and by s. 22, ante, p. 81, the owner or occupier of any premises without the district of a local authority may on the terms and conditions therein mentioned cause any . . . drain from such premises to communicate with any sewer of the local authority. The text imposes a new condition or term as to connecting to a sewer a drain existing at the "commencement of the section" (i.e., the date at which, by the Order, the section is declared to be in force, see s. 13, ante, p. 1025).

It is understood that the Ministry of Health readily grant the powers even to rural councils when cause is shown. The adaptation of this section usually takes the following form:—"Nothing in this section shall prejudicially affect any power or right exercisable by or attaching to an owner or occupier of premises by virtue of s. 22 of the P. H. A., 1875, or of s. 18 of the P. H. A., 1890."

An owner might appeal under s. 7, ante, p. 1023, against the requirement to lay open the drain. If the requirement is not appealed against (or is upheld on appeal) and the surveyor after examination refuses to certify for the communication, an owner must apparently acquiesce, for no right of appeal is given against such refusal to certify.

Provision and conversion of closet accommodation.

39 (a).—(1) In this section unless the context otherwise requires—

The expression "closet accommodation" includes a receptacle for human excreta, together with the structure comprising such receptacle and the fittings and apparatus connected therewith:

The expression "pail closet" means closet accommodation including a moveable receptacle for human excreta;

The expression "water-closet" means closet accommodation used or adapted or intended to be used in connection with the water carriage system, and comprising provision for the flushing of the receptacle by means of a fresh water supply, and having proper communication with a sewer;

The expression "slop-closet" means closet accommodation used or adapted or intended to be used in connection with the water carriage system, and comprising provision for the flushing of the receptacle by means of slops or waste liquids of the household or rain water, and having proper communication with a sewer;

The expression "a sufficient water supply and sewer" means a water supply and a sewer which are sufficient and reasonably available for use in, or in connection with, the efficient flushing and cleansing of, and the efficient removal of excreta from such number of proper and sufficient water-closets and slop-closets, or from such one or more of either class of closet as, in pursuance of this section, may be required to be provided in any particular case.

(2) Within one month after the deposit of any plan by a person intending to erect a new building, the local authority, where there are a sufficient water supply and sewer, may by written notice to that person require the new building to be provided with such number of proper and sufficient water-closets and slop-closets, or with such one or more of either class of closet, as the circumstances of the case may render necessary.

Any person who fails to comply with any requirement of the local authority under this sub-section shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds and to a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

(3) If, on the report of the medical officer or the surveyor or the inspector of nuisances, the local authority are satisfied that sufficient closet accommodation has not been provided at or in connection with a building, and the case is not one in which sufficient closet accommodation can be provided by the alteration of any existing closet accommodation in pursuance of this section, the local authority, where there are a sufficient water supply and sewer, may by written notice to the owner or owners of the building require the building to be provided with such number of proper and sufficient water-closets and slop-closets, or with such one or more of either class of closet, as the circumstances of the case may render necessary.

If the owner or owners of the building fail to comply with any requirement of the local authority under this sub-section, the local authority may, at the expiration of a time which shall be specified in the notice and shall be not less than fourteen days after the service of the notice, do the work required by the notice, and may recover summarily as a civil debt from the owner or owners the expenses incurred by the local authority in so doing.

(4) The local authority, where there are a sufficient water supply and sewer, may by written notice to the owner or owners of a building require any existing closet accommodation (other than a water-closet or a slop-closet) provided at or in connection with the building to be altered, so as to be converted into a water-closet or slop-closet (b).

If the owner or owners of the building fail to comply with any requirement of the local authority under this sub-section, the local authority may, at the expiration of a time which shall be specified in the notice and shall not be less than fourteen days after the service of the notice, do the work required by the notice.

Where in pursuance of this sub-section any work of alteration is done by the local authority in default of the owner or owners in respect of a pail-closet, the expenses of the work shall be borne by the local authority, and where in pursuance of this sub-section any work of alteration is done by the local authority in default of the owner or owners in respect of any existing closet accommodation other than a pail-closet, one half of the expenses of the work shall be borne by the local authority, and the remainder of the said expenses shall be borne by the owner or owners and shall be recoverable summarily as a civil debt.

Every notice in pursuance of this sub-section shall state the effect of the sub-section.

(5) Nothing in this section shall have effect with respect to a slop-closet, unless or until the Local Government Board have been satisfied by the local authority, and have by order declared that the circumstances of the district of the local authority are such as to render it necessary or expedient that this section shall have effect with respect to a slop-closet.

Any order in pursuance of this sub-section shall be published in such manner as the Local Government Board direct.

Sections 39—42 must be treated as a whole. Probably few rural councils will apply to the L. G. B. for powers under them.

(a) Where this section is applied to a district the difficulty experienced in taking action under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 36, illustrated by the case of Wood v. Widnes Corporation, ante, p. 97, may be to some extent removed. See also the notes and cases on pp. 97, 98, ante. It will be observed that it gives extensive powers as to the provision of closet accommodation in new and in existing buildings, and as to the conversion of existing earth-closets or privies into water-closets or slop-closets. Sections 40—42, infra, contain provisions supplemental to this section, as to the recovery of the expenses of work for the common benefit of two or more buildings belonging to different owners, for the declaration as private improvement expenses of expenses recoverable from owners, for entry on premises by authorised persons for the purposes of the section and for an appeal to a court of summary jurisdiction by a person who is aggrieved by a requirement of the authority, or who objects to the reasonableness of expenses recoverable from him under the section.

Note to Section 39.

In connection with any application by an authority for the powers of this and the three following sections, the Ministry of Health require to know the special grounds upon which the application rests, and what are the arrangements with regard to the sewerage and the water supply of the district.

When considerable expenditure is involved by action under this section, the district council may contract a loan with the sanction of the Ministry of Health.

It should be noted, however, that s. 39 is defective. When the local authority carry out the work of conversion in default of the owner it is made obligatory on them to contribute half of the expense in the case of a closet other than a pail-closet, and the whole expense in the case of a pail-closet. If an owner complies with the notice, or converts voluntarily, the local authority cannot contribute to the cost, so that the section actually encourages an owner to make default! Then with regard to the special provision in sub-s. (5) as to slop-closets, it is doubtful whether, in view of sub-s. (4), any general action could be taken for the conversion of this type of closet even if the M. of H. issued an order as provided by sub-s. (5). As a fact, no instance of such an order is known to the editors.

(b) In Carlton Main Colliery Co., Ltd. v. Hemsworth R. D. C., [1922] 1 Ch. 522, the point was raised that if a local authority have a scheme for conversion of privies into water-closets they must act under this section and not under s. 36 of the 1875 Act, but the court held that each case must be dealt with on its merits.

Payment for works of common benefit.

40.—(1) Where under section thirty-nine of this Act the local authority do any work for the common benefit of two or more buildings belonging to different owners, the expenses, which under that section are recoverable by the local authority from the owners, shall be paid by the owners of those buildings in such proportions as shall be determined by the surveyor, or in case of dispute by a petty sessional court.

Expenses.

(2) Any moneys expended by the local authority for the purposes of section thirty-nine of this Act shall, so far as they are not recoverable from the owner or owners, be part of the expenses of the local authority in the execution of the Public Health Act, 1875.

Private improvement expenses.

(3) The local authority may by order declare any expenses incurred by them under section thirty-nine of this Act, which are recoverable summarily as a civil debt from the owner or owners, to be expenses to which the provisions of section two hundred and fifty-seven (a) of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall apply, and thereupon those provisions shall apply, with the necessary modifications, as if they were herein re-enacted and in terms made applicable to the said expenses.

(a) See this section, ante, p. 568, and the notes thereunder.

Entry on premises.

41. Any person duly authorised in writing by the local authority shall, on production of his authorisation, be admitted into any premises for the purposes of section thirty-nine of this Act, and the provisions of sections one hundred and two and one hundred and three of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall, with the necessary modifications, apply to his admission.

See the sections referred to, ante, pp. 188, 189.

Section 42. Appeals.

42.—(1) Where any person deems himself aggrieved by any requirement of the local authority under section thirty-nine of this Act, or objects to the reasonableness of any expenses wholly or partially recoverable from him under that section, that person may, within fourteen days after the service of notice of the requirement or of a demand for payment of the expenses, appeal to a court of summary jurisdiction, and the court may make such order in the matter as to them may seem equitable, and the order so made shall be binding and conclusive on all parties (a) :

Provided nevertheless that the right of appeal, subsequent to the service of a demand for payment, shall be restricted to the ground of the reasonableness of the amount of the expenses, and the appellant shall be precluded from raising at that stage any other question.

(a) These words appear to bar the right of appeal to sessions which would otherwise be given by s. 7, ante, p. 1023. Nor can the court state a special case. See Westminster Corporation v. Gordon Hotels, Ltd., [1908] A. C. 142 ; 72 J. P. 201 ; cf. Wills & Sons v. McSherry (No. 2), [1914] 1 K. B. 616 ; 78 J. P. 120.

The procedure on appeal to justices is by way of complaint for an order, and the Summary Jurisdiction Acts are to apply to all such proceedings. See the Summary Jurisdiction Rules, 1915, No. 58. See the Local Government Annual Volume, 1914—15, p. 556. And see as to the construction and application of this rule, Edelsten v. London C. C., [1918] 1 K. B. 81 ; 81 J. P. 294.

(2) Pending the decision of the court upon the appeal the local authority shall not be empowered to execute any works to which the notice relates, and any proceeding which may have been commenced for the recovery of the expenses shall be stayed.

Local authority may require removal or alteration of urinals.

43.—(1) If any urinal or other sanitary convenience opening on any street (whether erected before or after the commencement of this section) is so placed or constructed as to be a nuisance or offensive to public decency, the local authority, by notice in writing, may require the owner to remove it within a reasonable time fixed by the local authority.

(2) If the owner fails to comply with the notice, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty shillings and to a daily penalty not exceeding ten shillings.

The marginal note refers to "removal or alteration" whereas the section refers only to a removal. A marginal note, however, does not form part of a statute. See Claydon v. Green (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 511, per WILLES, J., at p. 521

The Ministry of Health before entertaining an application for the powers of this section require to know whether there are any cases to which they would apply.

"Sanitary convenience" includes "urinals, water-closets, earth-closets, privies, ashpits, and any similar convenience." See the P. H. A., 1890, s. 11 (3), ante, p. 826.

Where Part III. of the P. H. A., 1890, has been adopted by an urban authority, s. 20 of that Act (see p. 836, ante) enables them to prohibit or impose conditions upon the erection of public sanitary conveniences in or accessible from any street, with a saving in favour of railway companies. By the application to their district of this section, the powers of an authority over objectionable urinals or sanitary conveniences will be greatly increased.

If an owner be aggrieved by any requirement of the authority he may appeal to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

44.—(1) Where any inn, publichouse, beerhouse, eating-house, refreshment-house, or place of public entertainment, whether built before or after the commencement of this section, has no urinal belonging or attached thereto, the local authority may, by notice in writing, require the owner of the premises to provide and maintain thereon one or more proper and sufficient urinals in a suitable position. Urinals to be attached to refreshment houses, etc.

(2) If the owner fails within a reasonable time to comply with a notice under this section, he shall be liable in respect of each offence to a penalty not exceeding twenty shillings and to a daily penalty not exceeding ten shillings.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied thereto by an Order of the Ministry of Health.

As to the authentication and service of notices, see the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 266, 267, ante, p. 593.

An owner aggrieved by the requirement of the authority may appeal to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

45.—(1) If the medical officer, surveyor, or inspector of nuisances reports to the local authority that he has reasonable grounds for believing that any drains of any building are so defective as to be injurious or dangerous to health, the local authority may authorise their medical officer, surveyor, or inspector of nuisances to apply the smoke or coloured water test, or other similar test (not including a test by water under pressure), to the drains, subject to the condition that either the consent of the owner or occupier of the building must be given to the application of the test, or an order of a court of summary jurisdiction having jurisdiction in the place where the building is situated must be obtained, authorising the application of the test. Testing of drains on report of defects.

Where this section has been applied to a district by an Order of the Ministry of Health, the powers of an authority with respect to the examination of drains under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 41, ante, p. 105, will be considerably increased. It is understood that the powers are readily granted to urban councils.

Any person aggrieved by the granting of an order by a court of summary jurisdiction might appeal to quarter sessions under s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

(2) If on the application of the test the drains are found to be defective, the local authority may, by notice specifying generally the defect, require the owner of the premises to do all works necessary for remedying it within a reasonable time named in the notice, and if the owner fails so to do the work the local authority may themselves do the work, and the expense of so doing the work may either be recovered from the owner of the building summarily as a civil debt or may be declared by the local authority to be private improvement expenses, and may be recoverable accordingly.

See the notes to the similar provisions in the P. H. A., 1875, s. 41, ante, p. 105. It would seem that an appeal will lie to sessions against the authority's requirement under this sub-section. See s. 7, ante, and note (b) to s. 19 (1).

(3) The owner and occupier of any building shall give all reasonable facilities for the application of any test which has been consented to or authorised in pursuance of this section, and, if the owner or occupier fails to do so, he shall be liable in respect of each offence to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings and to a daily penalty not exceeding twenty shillings.

See as to the recovery of penalties, s. 6, ante, p. 1023, and as to the meaning of "daily penalty," s. 13, ante, p. 1025. As to appeal, see s. 7 (1), ante, p. 1023.

Provision for filling up cesspools, etc.

46. If it shall appear to the local authority by the report of the medical officer, surveyor, or inspector of nuisances that any cesspool or other receptacle used or formerly used as a receptacle for excreta or other obnoxious matter, or for the whole or any part of the drainage of a house, or that any ashpit or any well or disused well belonging to any such house or part of a house is prejudicial to health, or otherwise objectionable for sanitary reasons, and that it is desirable that the same should be filled up or removed, or so altered as to remove any such objection as aforesaid, the local authority may, if they think fit, by notice in writing, require the owner or occupier of such house or part of a house within a reasonable time, to be specified in the notice, to cause such cesspool, receptacle, ashpit, or well to be filled up or removed, and any drain communicating therewith to be effectually disconnected, destroyed, or taken away, or to cause such cesspool, receptacle, ashpit, or well to be so altered as to remove any such objection as aforesaid.

Where it appears that any such cesspool, receptacle, ashpit, or well is used in common by the occupiers of two or more houses, or parts of houses, the notice for filling up or removal of any such cesspool, receptacle, ashpit, or well may be served on any one or more of the owners or occupiers of such houses, and it shall not be necessary to serve such notice on all such owners or occupiers.

If default is made in complying with the requisitions of a notice under this section the local authority may themselves carry out the requisitions, and may recover the expenses incurred by them in so doing from the owners or occupiers in default in a summary manner as a civil debt, or, where the owners are the persons liable, as private improvement expenses are recoverable under the Public Health Acts.

By the P. H. A., 1875, s. 41, ante, p. 105, all local authorities are empowered to deal with ashpits and cesspools which are a nuisance or are injurious to health.

Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 70, ante, p. 148, action may be taken by any local authority in regard to any well the water in which is used or likely to be used by man for drinking or domestic purposes, or for manufacturing drinks for the use of man, and is so polluted as to be injurious to health.

See also as to the powers of all local authorities in regard to nuisances generally, the P. H. A., 1875, s. 91, ante, p. 165, and the notes thereunder.

Where s. 46 is applied by an Order of the M. of H. to a district, the powers of the authority would appear to be increased. The cesspools, etc., need only be "objectionable for sanitary reasons," which is a very elastic expression. All wells are also referred to.

Here again it would seem that an appeal would lie to sessions, and to the M. of H., at different stages (see s. 7, ante, and note (b) to s. 19 (1)).

Where an authority have themselves carried out the requisitions of their notice they may recover the expenses from either the owner or occupier in default in a summary manner as a civil debt (see hereon note (b) to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 251, ante, p. 551), or where the owner is the person liable, as private improvement expenses are recoverable under the Public Health Acts: see hereon the P. H. A., 1875, s. 213, ante, p. 493. There is nothing in the section to indicate when a notice is to be served on the owner and when on the occupier; apparently this is left to the discretion of the authority. Note to Section 46.

It is understood that the Ministry of Health readily grant powers under this section.

47. The local authority may provide and maintain in proper and convenient situations sanitary conveniences in or under any street repairable by the inhabitants at large, and may provide and maintain in proper and convenient situations lavatories in or under any such street for the use of the public, and may employ and pay attendants and make reasonable charges for the use of any sanitary conveniences (other than a urinal) or of any lavatory so provided. The local authority may make byelaws for the management of the sanitary conveniences and lavatories, and as to the conduct of persons frequenting the same. Public conveniences and lavatories.

The local authority may let any such sanitary conveniences and any such lavatories for such periods, at such rents, and subject to such conditions as to the charges to be made for the use thereof and otherwise, as they think proper.

Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 39, ante, p. 102, an urban authority (and also a rural authority who have obtained urban powers under the section) may, if they think fit, provide and maintain, in proper and convenient situations, urinals, water-closets, earth-closets, privies and ashpits, and other similar conveniences for public accommodation. See also ibid., s. 45, ante, p. 115, as to the provision of receptacles for deposit of rubbish. It was held that s. 39 did not empower an authority to excavate the soil and erect lavatories below the surface of streets vested in them: see Tunbridge Wells Corporation v. Baird, ante, p. 104. The powers of s. 39 are, however, usually sufficient for the purposes of rural districts.

On the adoption of Part III. of the P. H. A., 1890, s. 20 of that Act empowers urban authorities, as to sanitary conveniences provided and maintained by them for public accommodation, to—(i) Make regulations with respect to the management thereof and make byelaws as to the decent conduct of persons using the same; (ii) Let the same from time to time for any term not exceeding three years at such rent and subject to such conditions as they may think fit; (iii) Charge such fees for the use of any water-closets provided by them as they may think proper.

"Sanitary conveniences" are defined by s. 11 (3) of the last-mentioned Act to include urinals, water-closets, privies, ashpits, and any similar conveniences.

In the case of urban councils their existing powers will be augmented on the application of this section to their districts. They will be enabled to place sanitary conveniences and lavatories under streets. The section empowers them to make byelaws for the management of the sanitary conveniences and lavatories, and as to the conduct of persons frequenting the same, and also empowers them to let any such sanitary conveniences and any such lavatories for such periods, at such rents, and subject to such conditions as to the charges to be made for the use thereof and otherwise, as they think proper. It will be observed that the section extends to lavatories, which are not expressly mentioned in the definition clause (s. 11 (3)) of the Act of 1890, and also that the section gives power to make byelaws, not regulations. An express power is given to make charges in respect of any sanitary convenience (other than a urinal) or any lavatory. An Order of the Ministry of Health applying the above section to a district may specify any conditions or adaptations

The section does not vest the subsoil of the street in the authority for the purpose of the provision of sanitary conveniences and lavatories, as does the P. H. (London) A., 1891. Consequently, the case of Tunbridge Wells Corporation v. Baird, ante, p. 104, seems to show that the authority must, if required, pay for the use of the subsoil

48. If the local authority are required by the owner or occupier of any premises to remove any trade refuse (a) (other than sludge), the Removal of trade refuse.

Section 48. local authority shall do so, and the owner or occupier shall pay to them for doing so a reasonable sum, to be settled in case of dispute by order of a court of summary jurisdiction; and if any question arises in any case as to what is to be considered as trade refuse, that question may be decided on the complaint of either party by a court of summary jurisdiction, whose decision shall be final (b).

It is understood that the powers of this section are readily granted to urban authorities; they will not usually be required in rural districts.

(a) See as to the meaning of this expression cases on pp. 108—110, ante.

(b) These words preclude the right of appeal which would otherwise be given by s. 7, ante, p. 1023; nor can a special case be stated by the court (see Westminster Corporation v. Gordon Hotels, Ltd., ante, p. 109); but, semble, an appeal will lie as to the reasonableness of the sum fixed.

Summary power to provide sinks and drains for buildings.

49. In addition to all other powers vested in a local authority, the local authority, if it shall appear to them on the report of the surveyor, medical officer, or inspector of nuisances, that any building built before or after the commencement of this section of this Act is not provided with a proper sink or drain or other necessary appliances for carrying off refuse water from such building, may give notice in writing to the owner or occupier of such building requiring him in the manner and within the time to be specified in such notice, not being less than twenty-eight days, to provide such sink, drain, or other appliances. If the owner or occupier makes default in complying with such requirement to the satisfaction of the local authority within the time specified in such notice, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds and to a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings, and in case of default the local authority may, if they think fit, themselves provide such sink, drain, or other appliances, and the expenses incurred by them in so doing shall be repaid to them by such owner or occupier, and may be recovered summarily as a civil debt.

Where this section has been applied to a district by an Order of the Ministry of Health (and it is understood that an Order is readily granted to an urban authority), the powers which all local authorities possess under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 23, p. 83, ante, will be supplemented. An owner or occupier aggrieved by a requirement made under the section may probably appeal to sessions. See s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

As to the difference in the proceedings for recovery of penalties and expenses, see note (e) on p. 81, ante, and note (b) on p. 551, ante.

Local authority may provide an ambulance.

50. The local authority may provide and maintain an ambulance for use in any case of accident, or other sudden or urgent disability, together with suitable attendants, and means of traction, and other requisites; and may allow the ambulance to be used by any other local authority or person subject to such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon.

An ambulance for use in cases of infectious disease may be provided under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 123, ante, p. 231; see the notes thereto. In districts where it is applied the text allows the provision of one for accident cases.

Power to declare a business to be an offensive business.

51.—(1) The words "any other trade, business, or manufacture, which the local authority declare by order confirmed by the Local Government Board, and published in such manner as the Board direct, to be an offensive trade," shall be substituted for the words " any other noxious or offensive trade, business, or manufacture," in section one hundred and twelve of the Public Health Act, 1875. Section 51.

See s. 112, ante, p. 211, and the notes thereto. It will be observed that according to the decision in Wanstead L. B. v. Hill and other cases in such notes that s. 112 only extended to trades ejusdem generis with the trades specified therein.

Where the present section is applied to a district, the consent of the authority will be required to the establishment of any trade, business, or manufacture which the authority declare by Order confirmed by the Ministry of Health, and published as the Ministry direct, to be offensive. But such an Order will not render illegal a business (though of a kind specified in it) which has been lawfully established before the Order comes into operation (Butchers Hide, etc. Co. v. Seacome, p. 215, ante). In such a case, however, byelaws might be made under sub-s. (2), infra. The appellant established the trade of a rag and bone dealer in 1908 on premises within an urban district. In 1911 the authority declared the trade of a rag and bone dealer to be an offensive trade. The appellant continued the trade without the consent of the authority till 1918, when he let the premises to a tenant who obtained the consent of the authority and carried on the trade till 1920. The tenant then vacated the premises and the appellant, having resumed possession, proceeded to carry on the trade without consent. It was held that he had not established the business of a rag and bone dealer in 1920, but had only continued an old business (Mayo v. Stazicker, [1921] 2 K. B. 196; 85 J. P. 141).

The following is an extract from the Memorandum of the L. G. B. prefixed to their latest model byelaws as to offensive trades :—

Memo. of L. G. B. as to offensive trades.

" It will be seen that apart from the last cited enactment [i.e., s. 51 of this Act], a trade, in order to be within the operation of the byelaws which the urban authority are empowered to make, must belong to the class designated ' offensive,' and must have been established with the consent of the authority either before or after the passing of the P. H. A., 1875.

" In ordinary cases there will, of course, be little difficulty in determining whether the circumstances and date of the original establishment of any particular trade are such as to render it subject to the control which the urban authority may exercise by means of their byelaws.

" But in relation to a trade other than those expressly mentioned in section 112 of the Act of 1875, that is to say, the trades of a blood-boiler, bone-boiler, fell-monger, soap-boiler, tallow-melter, and tripe-boiler, the question whether the materials and processes are such as to constitute a ' noxious or offensive trade, business, or manufacture,' is one which will often be found to require careful consideration, and an accurate knowledge of the facts of the case.

" When any such question comes before the urban authority they may be advised to give special heed to the principles which may be deduced from the decisions in Wanstead L. B. v. Hill, Cardell v. New Quay L. B., Passey v. Oxford L. B., and Braintree L. B. v. Boyton (see these cases on p. 213, ante).

" From the decisions and judgments given in the above cited cases it seems to follow that, in seeking to establish an analogy between a particular trade and those specified in s. 112 of the P. H. A., 1875, the urban authority should attach much importance to the identity or similarity of the materials used in its processes. If a trade can be shown to involve the collection of large quantities of animal matter, or of substances which, without anything being done to them, must be or by progress of time must necessarily become a nuisance to the neighbourhood, it is probable that the terms of s. 112 will be found sufficiently comprehensive to include such a trade.

" But in order that a trade may be brought within the operation of that enactment, the urban authority should, in every case, be in a position to adduce adequate testimony in support of their allegation that the trade is noxious or offensive. That the court of summary jurisdiction may be satisfied that the particular trade is noxious or offensive, and that their finding may be supported by the evidence, it is clearly essential that the urban authority should in every case be able to lay before the court well-ascertained facts as to the processes of the trade, and to show how their results may be noxious or offensive.

"It will be observed that there are two advantages in having section 51 of the Act of 1907 declared to be in force. In the first case the obligation to prove to a court of summary jurisdiction that a particular trade comes within the description of 'any other noxious or offensive trade, business, or manufacture' is removed. In the second place the power to make byelaws is extended to offensive trades which were not established with the consent of the local authority.

"Where a local authority, acting under the powers conferred by the Act of 1907, desire to declare any trades to be 'offensive trades' they should make a declaratory order to that effect and submit it to the Board for confirmation. The Board suggest that the order might conveniently take the form printed below.

"The Board would desire to see any such order in draft before it is formally made, and except in the case of recognised offensive trades they will require to be satisfied that the trades referred to are of such a nature that they may properly be brought within the provisions of the section relating to offensive trades. It is the practice of the Board before confirming any such order to require that it shall have been advertised in one or more local newspapers at least fourteen days before the application for confirmation is made.

"In the present series of model byelaws it will be seen that the Board have included, in addition to the clauses relating to the trades specified in s. 112 of the P. H. A., 1875, byelaws for the regulation of the trades of a blood-drier, a leather-dresser, a tanner, a fat-melter or fat-extractor, a glue-maker, a size-maker, a gut-scraper, a dealer in rags and bones, and a fish frier.

"The Board do not suggest that it will in every case be desirable to adopt the model series in its entirety. Thus where s. 51 of the Act of 1907 is not in force the restricted operation of the earlier statute referred to above must be borne in mind; and where that section is in force the clauses relating to any trade which is not mentioned in any order made under that section or in s. 112 of the P. H. A., 1875, must be omitted."

In a Circular Letter dated October 11th, 1910, the Board pointed out to local authorities who had been invested with the powers of s. 51 of the Act of 1907, that an offensive trade which is not referred to by name in s. 112 of the P. H. A., 1875, and which would, under that Act, have required the consent of the council for its establishment, might now be established without such consent, unless it were specifically declared to be an offensive trade by an order confirmed by the Board under sub-s. (1) of the section.

The Board suggested that the council should consider whether in respect of their district there were any trades, other than those specifically named in s. 112 of the Act of 1875, which it was desirable to deal with by a declaratory order issued under s. 51 of the Act of 1907. The Board would be prepared to entertain an application for the confirmation of such an order, but they would, of course, have to consider any representations which might be made to them on behalf of the trades affected. They suggested that the order should take the form of a declaration under the seal of the council and the Board would be glad to see the order in draft before it was formally made. At the same time they would wish to be furnished as regards any trade included in the order but not dealt with in the model byelaws with respect to offensive trades, with a copy of any representation by the medical officer of health as to the carrying on of the trade in the district, or with a report from that officer giving particulars of the trade and showing the need for greater control over it.

The Board were also of opinion that where byelaws are in force with respect to offensive trades there might be some advantage if, after the declaratory order had been made, the council were to re-enact the byelaws under the somewhat wider powers of s. 51 (2) of the Act of 1907.

A town council proposed to include knackers' yards in an order under s. 112 of the P. H. A., 1875, as amended by s. 51 of this Act. The Board drew their attention to the provisions of the Knackers Acts of 1786 and 1844, and the Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, as to the licensing of persons keeping houses or places for the slaughtering of horses, to s. 27 of the Local Government Act, 1894, transferring the licensing powers from the quarter sessions to the local authority; and to ss. 125—127 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, as incorporated with the P. H. A., 1875, providing for the licensing and registration of knackers' yards by the local authority. The Board stated that in their opinion the object in view might be met under these enactments rather than by the proposed procedure. Note to Section 51.

In connection with a proposal of an urban district council to treat a manufactory of artificial manure as an " offensive trade " for the purpose of s. 51 of this Act, the Board pointed out that " chemical manure works " were among the works specified in the Alkali, etc., Works Regulation Act, 1906. The " owner " is required by that Act to comply with certain regulations, and in view of this express legislation the Board were not disposed to confirm any order which would render applicable to such a person the provisions of s. 112 of the P. H. A. of 1875.

An application for the powers of s. 51 of this Act cannot, of course, be made by a rural district council unless that council possesses already urban powers as to offensive trades under the Act of 1875, or unless application for those powers is made at the same time.

(2) The local authority may make byelaws with respect to any trade which is an offensive trade under section one hundred and twelve of the Public Health Act, 1875, as amended by this Act, whether established before or after the commencement of this Act, in order to prevent or diminish any noxious or injurious effects of the trade.

See preceding note. Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 113, ante, p. 215, an authority can only make byelaws with respect to offensive trades established with their consent, i.e., trades established since the P. H. A., 1848, or the P. H. A., 1875, came into force in their district. Where this section is applied that limitation is removed. The byelaws must, however, be limited to trades which are offensive under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 112, as amended by this section.

PART IV. (a).

INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

(a) It is understood that the powers of ss. 52—57 (inclusive) are readily granted unconditionally by the Ministry of Health to urban and rural councils.

52.—(1) If any person knows that he is suffering from an infectious disease, he shall not engage in any occupation or carry on any trade or business unless he can do so without risk of spreading the infectious disease. Infected person not to carry on occupation.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health : see note (a), supra. The expression " infectious disease " means any infectious disease to which the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, for the time being applies within the district, i.e., diseases specified in ibid., s. 6, or to which the Act has been applied by the authority of the district : see s. 13, ante, p. 1026.

(2) If any person acts in contravention of this section, he shall be liable in respect of each offence to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

As to appeal, see s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

53.—(1) If the medical officer certifies to the local authority that any person in the district is suffering from infectious disease which the medical officer has reason to suspect is attributable to milk supplied within the district, the local authority may require the dairyman Power to require dairymen to furnish list of sources of supply.

Section 53.

supplying the milk to furnish to the medical officer within a reasonable time fixed by them a complete list of all the farms, dairies, or places from which his supply of milk is derived or has been derived during the last six weeks, and, if the supply, or any part of it, is obtained through any other dairyman, may make a similar requisition upon that dairyman.

(2) The local authority shall pay to the dairyman for every list furnished by him under this section the sum of sixpence, and, if the list contains not less than twenty-five names, a further sum of sixpence for every twenty-five names contained in the list.

(3) Every dairyman shall comply with the requisition of the local authority under this section, and, if he fails to do so, shall be liable in respect of each offence to a penalty not exceeding five pounds and a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

This section and the next are among the "enactments saved" by the Milk and Dairies (Consolidation) Act, 1915. See that Act, s. 21 and Sched. V., post, Vol. II.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health. See note (a), p. 1053, ante. For the meaning of the term "infectious disease" see note under s. 52 (1), ante, p. 1053. As to appeal, see s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

See as to the existing power of authorities with respect to dairies, the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, s. 4, ante, p. 808, and notes thereto. See also s. 54, infra, as to notification by dairymen of infectious disease among their servants. For the definitions of "dairy" and "dairyman," see s. 13, p. 1026, ante, and cases there referred to.

Dairymen to notify infectious diseases existing among their servants.

54.—(1) Every dairyman supplying milk within the district of the local authority from premises whether within or beyond the district aforesaid shall notify to the medical officer all cases of infectious disease among persons engaged in or in connection with his dairy, as soon as he becomes aware or has reason to suspect that such infectious disease exists.

(2) Any dairyman who shall fail to comply with this section shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

See the note to the preceding section.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health. See note (a) on p. 1053, ante. When so applied it will impose a new obligation on dairymen (see definitions of "dairyman" and "dairy" and "infectious disease" in s. 13, ante, p. 1026). The existing obligation as to the notification of infectious diseases is contained in the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, s. 3, ante, p. 798. See also s. 53, supra, and the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, s. 4, ante, p. 808. As to appeal, see s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

Infected clothes not to be sent to laundry.

55.—(1) A person shall not take or send to any public washhouse or to any laundry, for the purpose of being washed, any bedding, clothes, or other things which he knows to have been exposed to infection from any infectious disease, unless they have been disinfected by or to the satisfaction of the local authority or their medical officer, or of a legally qualified medical practitioner, or are sent to a laundry with proper precautions for the purpose of disinfection, with notice that they have been exposed to infection.

Section 55.

(2) If any person acts in contravention of the foregoing provision of this section he shall be liable in respect of each offence to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

(3) The local authority may, on the application of any person, pay the expenses of the disinfection of any such bedding, clothes, or other things, if carried out by them or under their direction.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health. See note (a) on p. 1053, ante, and see s. 13, ante, p. 1026, as to the meaning of "infectious disease." As to appeal, see s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

See as to the existing powers of authorities with reference to infected clothing, the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 120, 121, 122, ante, pp. 227—231, and the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, ss. 5, 6, ante, pp. 801—813. See also s. 66 of this Act, post, p. 1059.

Filthy and dangerous articles to be purified.

56. Where the local authority on the certificate of the medical officer are satisfied that the cleansing, purification, or destruction of any article in a dwelling-house is, by reason of the filthy condition of the article, necessary to prevent injury or to remove or obviate risk of injury to the health of any person in the dwelling-house, the local authority may cause the article to be cleansed, purified, or destroyed at their expense.

Where a person sustains damage in consequence of the exercise by the local authority of their powers under this section, and the condition of the article with respect to which those powers have been exercised is not attributable to his act or default, the local authority shall make reasonable compensation to that person.

This section only becomes operative when applied by an Order of the Ministry of Health. See note (a) on p. 1053, ante.

See with reference to the cleansing, purifying, and destruction of articles in dwelling-houses which have been exposed to infection, the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 120, 121, 122, ante, pp. 227—231; the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, ss. 5, 6, ante, pp. 810—813; and s. 66 of this Act, post, p. 1059. The provisions of the text are not limited to articles which have been exposed to infection.

Child suffering from infectious disease not to attend school.

57.—(1) No person being the parent or having the care or charge of a child within the district of the local authority who is or has been suffering from infectious disease or has been exposed to infection shall, after a notice from the medical officer that the child is not to be sent to school, permit such child to attend school without having procured from the medical officer a certificate (which shall be granted free of charge upon application) that in his opinion such child may attend without undue risk of communicating such disease to others.

(2) Any person who shall offend against this section shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health. See note (a), on p. 1053, ante, and see s. 13, ante, p. 1026, as to the meaning of "infectious disease." As to appeal, see s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

No offence will be committed unless the notice referred to in the section has been given. The certificate cannot be given by the patient's doctor unless he happens to be the medical officer. No provision is made for remuneration to the medical officer for the service of notices and the granting of certificates.

Note to Section 57. It will be noticed that the provisions of the section are not confined to public elementary schools, but extend to schools of every description. As to the exclusion of children from school, etc., see a memorandum referred to on p. 811, ante.

List of scholars to be furnished where scholar in a school is suffering from an infectious disease.

58.—(1) The principal of a school in which any scholar is suffering from an infectious disease shall, if required by the local authority, furnish to them within a reasonable time fixed by them a complete list of the names and addresses of the scholars in or attending at the school or any specified department thereof other than boarders.

(2) The local authority of the district shall pay to the principal of the school for every list furnished by him under this section the sum of sixpence, and, if the list contains not less than twenty-five names, a further sum of sixpence for every twenty-five names contained in the list.

(3) If the principal of a school fails to comply with any of the provisions of this section he shall be liable in respect of each offence to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

(4) In this section the expression "the principal" used in relation to a school means the person in charge of the school, and includes, where the school is divided into departments and there is no single person at the head of the whole school, as respects each department the head of that department.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health; when it is so applied an entirely new obligation is imposed on schoolmasters. Any application to the Ministry should state to what schools in the district, other than public elementary schools, the section would apply.

See s. 13, ante, p. 1026, as to the meaning of "infectious disease." As to appeal, see s. 7, ante, p. 1023.

Provisions as to library books.

59.—(1) If any person knows that he is suffering from an infectious disease he shall not take any book or use or cause any book to be taken for his use from any public or circulating library.

(2) A person shall not permit any book which has been taken from a public or circulating library, and is under his control, to be used by any person whom he knows to be suffering from an infectious disease.

(3) A person shall not return to any public or circulating library any book which he knows to have been exposed to infection from any infectious disease, or permit any such book which is under his control to be so returned, but shall give notice to the local authority that the book has been so exposed to infection, and the local authority shall cause the book to be disinfected and returned to the library, or to be destroyed.

(4) The local authority shall pay to the proprietor of the library from which the book is procured the value of any book destroyed under the power given by this section.

(5) If any person acts in contravention of or fails to comply with this section, he shall be liable in respect of each offence to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health. When it is so applied (and it is understood that Orders are readily granted) a new obligation is imposed on borrowers and users of books from public or circulating libraries. The adaptation of the section usually takes the following form: "Nothing in this section shall apply to a public or circulating library which is not within the district."

Note to Section 59.

See s. 13, ante, p. 1026, as to the meaning of "infectious disease," and see s. 7, ante, p. 1023, as to appeal.

Local authority may pay expenses of person in hospital.

60. Nothing in section one hundred and thirty-two of the Public Health Act, 1875, with respect to the recovery of the cost of maintenance in a hospital, shall require the local authority to recover the cost of maintenance from a patient who is not a pauper where the local authority have satisfied themselves that the circumstances of the case are such as to justify the remission of the debt.

It may be doubted whether this section (when applied to a district) will make any practical alteration in the law, for under s. 132 (see note thereto, at p. 245, ante), the recovery of expenses is apparently not compulsory. The Ministry of Health appear to readily grant applications for the powers of this section.

Removal of person from infected premises.

61.—(1) The local authority may exercise the powers of section fifteen of the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, whether that section has or has not been adopted in the district, and, where the local authority so determine, those powers may be exercised for providing temporary shelter or house accommodation with any necessary attendants for any person who, in any case to which this section applies, leaves a house after any infectious disease has appeared therein, and the local authority may borrow, subject to the provisions of the Public Health Acts, for the purpose of providing shelter or house accommodation under section fifteen of the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, or under this section.

Where the local authority in pursuance of the aforesaid powers have provided a temporary shelter or house accommodation, they may, on the appearance of any infectious disease in a house, and on the certificate of the medical officer, cause any person who is not himself sick and who consents to leave the house, or whose parent or guardian (where the person is a child) consents to his leaving the house, to be removed therefrom to any such temporary shelter or house accommodation, and in the like case on the like certificate may cause any such person who does not consent to leave the house to be removed therefrom to any such temporary shelter or house accommodation, where two justices, on the application of the local authority and on being satisfied of the necessity of the removal, make an order for the removal, subject to such conditions (if any) as are imposed by the order.

The local authority shall in every case cause the removal to be effected and the conditions of any order to be satisfied without charge to the person removed or to the parent or guardian of that person.

(2) Any person who wilfully disobeys or obstructs the execution of an order under this section shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds.

(3) For the purpose of this section the word "house" includes any tent, van, shed, or similar structure used for human habitation or any boat lying in any canal or other water within the district of the local authority and used for the like purpose.

Note to Section 61.

Where this section is put in force the authority may exercise the powers of the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, s. 15, without having adopted it. That section enables temporary shelter or house accommodation, with necessary attendants, to be provided free of charge for the members of any family who have been compelled to leave their dwelling for the purpose of enabling the dwelling to be disinfected by the authority. This section extends s. 15 so as to allow the above powers to be exercised in relation to any person who leaves a house after any infectious disease has appeared therein, and widens the meaning of "house" so as to cover any tent, van, shed, or similar structure used for human habitation, or any boat lying in any canal or other water within the district and so used. Powers for the removal of persons to a temporary shelter or house accommodation are also conferred, and an order of justices may be obtained by the authority for the removal of a person without his consent. No charge can be made by the authority for removal. See also the P. H. A., 1875, s. 120, ante, p. 227, and notes thereto.

A local inquiry is usually considered necessary by the Ministry of Health before the powers of this section are granted.

Amendment of s. 126 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55.

62. Paragraph two of section one hundred and twenty-six of the Public Health Act, 1875 (which imposes a penalty on the exposure of infected persons and things), shall be read as if the words "or causes or permits such sufferer to be so exposed" were added after the word "sufferer."

On this section being applied to a district the effect of the amendment (see s. 126 (2), p. 233, ante) will be that a penalty may be imposed upon any one who, being in charge of a person suffering from a "dangerous infectious disorder," causes or permits such sufferer to be exposed, without proper precautions against spreading the disorder, in any street, public place, shop, inn, or public conveyance. The Act does not define "dangerous infectious disorder"; but probably the diseases specifically mentioned in the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, s. 6, would be considered to be "dangerous."

It is understood that the powers of this and the three following sections are readily granted by the Ministry of Health to both urban and rural district councils.

Prohibiting conveyance of infected persons in public vehicles.

63. The owner or driver of a public vehicle within the district of the local authority used for the carrying of passengers at separate fares shall not knowingly convey, or any other person shall not knowingly place, in any such public vehicle a person suffering from any infectious disease, or a person suffering from any such disease shall not enter any such vehicle, and every person who shall offend against this section shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health. See second note to s. 62, supra, and see also the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, s. 11, ante, p. 816, and s. 64 of this Act, infra. See s. 7, ante, p. 1023, as to appeal.

Driver, etc. of infected person to give notice.

64.—(1) If any person suffering from any infectious disease is conveyed in any public vehicle within the district of the local authority, the owner or driver thereof as soon as it comes to his knowledge shall give notice to the medical officer, and shall cause such vehicle to be disinfected, and, if he fails so to do, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds, and the owner or driver of such vehicle shall be entitled to recover in a summary manner from the person so conveyed, or from the person causing that person to be so conveyed, a sufficient sum to cover any loss and expense incurred by him in connection with such disinfection. Section 64.

(2) It shall be the duty of the local authority when so requested by the owner or driver of such public vehicle to provide for the disinfection of the same free of charge, except in cases where the owner or driver conveyed a person knowing that he was suffering from infectious disease.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health: see second note to s. 62, ante. When so applied it will impose an obligation as to notification additional to those imposed by the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, s. 3, ante, p. 798, and the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, s. 11. See also the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 126, 127, ante, pp. 233, 235, and notes thereto. See s. 7, ante, p. 1023, as to appeal.

65. Section one hundred and twenty-four of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall extend and apply to all cases of persons suffering from any dangerous infectious disease, and being in or upon any house or premises where such persons cannot be effectually isolated so as to prevent the spread of the disease. Section 124 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, to apply to persons who cannot be isolated.

Where this section is applied to a district (see second note to s. 62, ante). Section 124 (see p. 231, ante), which provides for the removal to a hospital of any person suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder and without proper lodging or accommodation, or lodged in a room occupied by more than one family, will be extended to all cases of persons so suffering, and being in or upon any house or premises where they cannot be effectually isolated so as to prevent the spread of the disease. The removal must be authorised by an order of a justice unless the person is lodged in a common lodging-house.

66.—(1) If the medical officer, or any other legally qualified medical practitioner certifies that the cleansing and disinfecting of any house, or part of a house, and of any articles therein likely to retain infection, or the destruction of those articles would tend to prevent or check any dangerous infectious disease the local authority shall serve notice on the master, or, where the house or part is unoccupied, on the owner of the house, or part, that the house or part, and any such articles therein, will be cleansed and disinfected, or (as regards the articles) destroyed, by the local authority unless he informs the local authority within twenty-four hours from the receipt of the notice that he will cleanse and disinfect the house or part and any such articles, or destroy the articles to the satisfaction of the medical officer or of any other legally qualified medical practitioner within a time fixed in the notice. Cleansing and disinfecting of premises, etc.

(2) If either—

(a) Within twenty-four hours from the receipt of the notice the person on whom the notice is served does not inform the local authority as aforesaid; or,

(b) Having so informed the local authority, he fails to have the house or part thereof and any such articles disinfected, or the articles destroyed as aforesaid, within the time fixed in the notice; or the house or part and articles shall be cleansed and disinfected, or the articles destroyed by the officers and at the cost of the local authority under the superintendence of the medical officer.

(c) The master or owner without any such notice gives his consent;

Section 66.

(3) For the purpose of carrying into effect this section the local authority may enter by day on any premises.

(4) When the local authority have disinfected any house, part of a house, or article, under the provisions of this section, they shall compensate the master or owner of the house, or part of a house, or the owner of the article, for any unnecessary damage thereby caused to the house, part of a house, or article; and when the local authority destroy any article under this section they shall compensate the owner thereof, and the amount of any such compensation shall be recoverable in a summary manner.

(5) The expression "master" means the person in occupation of or having the charge, management, or control of the house or part of a house, and where the house is wholly let out in separate tenements, or is a lodging-house wholly let to lodgers, includes the person receiving the rent payable by the tenants or lodgers, either on his own account or as the agent of another person; and the expression "by day" means during the period between six o'clock in the morning and the succeeding nine o'clock in the evening.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health. It is an improved version of the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, s. 5, ante, p. 810, but will not entirely supersede that section. Thus, s. 5 extends to the cleansing and disinfection of houses, etc. upon the default of the owner and occupier, when this course would tend to prevent or check any infectious disease to which the Act is applied by the authority, and the expenses of the cleansing and disinfection are ordinarily to be recovered from the owner or occupier of the house. This section extends only to the cleansing and disinfection of houses, etc. upon the default of the occupier, when this course would tend to prevent or check any dangerous infectious disease. The expenses are to be defrayed by the authority.

The Ministry may direct a local inquiry before granting powers under this section.

Provision of nursing attendance by local authority.

67.—(1) The local authority may provide nurses for attendance on patients suffering from any infectious disease in their district who, owing to want of accommodation at the hospital or danger of infection, cannot be removed to the hospital, or in cases where removal to the hospital is likely to endanger the patients' health.

(2) The local authority may charge such reasonable sums for the services of nurses provided by them as they think fit.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to take away or diminish the necessity of providing proper hospital accommodation for persons suffering from infectious disease.

On this section being applied to a district, a new power is conferred on the authority thereof. An application should probably be accompanied by information as to the hospital accommodation provided by the authority, the number of beds, and the number of different diseases for which accommodation is available at one time.

Wake not to be held over body of person dying of infectious disease.

68. It shall not be lawful to hold any wake over the body of any person who has died of infectious disease, and the occupier of any house or premises or part of a house or premises who permits or suffers any such wake to take place in such house or premises, or part of a house or premises, and every person who attends to take part in such wake shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

This section on being applied to a district creates entirely new offences. A special statement of grounds will probably be required in support of an application for an order.

Note to Section 68.

PART V. (a).

COMMON LODGING-HOUSES.

(a) No section of this Part of the Act will be operative in a district until applied thereto by an Order of the Ministry of Health. By s. 75 (1), post, p. 1063, "at a time not less than one month before the commencement of this Part of this Act the local authority shall give notice of the fact to the keeper of every common lodging-house in their district." It would appear from this provision that the intention of the legislature was that the whole of the sections shall be applied at the same time. It is understood that the powers of ss. 69—75 are readily granted by the Ministry with necessary adaptations.

Discretion as to registration of lodging-house keeper.

69.—(1) The local authority may, at their discretion, refuse to register any person as a common lodging-house keeper, unless they are satisfied of his character and of his fitness for the position.

(2) The registration of a person as a common lodging-house keeper shall, if that person is newly registered after the commencement of this section, remain in force only for such time not exceeding one year as may be fixed by the local authority, but may be renewed from time to time by the local authority (b).

Under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 78, ante, p. 154, an authority may refuse to register as the keeper of a common lodging-house a person who does not produce the certificate of character therein described, but on such being produced they have no discretion in the matter. On this section becoming operative (by Order of the Ministry of Health), the portion of s. 78 just referred to will be repealed (see s. 75 (2), post, p. 1063). It is doubtful if s. 7, ante, p. 1023, confers any right of appeal. Note also sub-s. (2) as to the duration of new registrations.

(b) This is a new provision.

Obligation on common lodging-house keeper to provide for proper control of his house.

70.—(1) Either the keeper of a common lodging-house or a deputy registered under this Act shall manage and control the lodging-house and exercise supervision over those using it, and either the keeper or the deputy so registered shall be and remain at the lodging-house between the hours of nine in the evening and six in the morning of the following day.

(2) If any provision of this section is not complied with in the case of any common lodging-house, the keeper of the house shall, unless he shows to the court that there was a reasonable excuse for the non-compliance, be liable in respect of each offence to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings, and to a daily penalty not exceeding twenty shillings.

See note (a), supra. The P. H. A., 1875, s. 80, ante, p. 156, enables an authority to make byelaws for the well ordering of common lodging-houses; where this section is applied there will be, in addition to any obligation imposed by a byelaw, the express obligation imposed by the text. See s. 7, ante, p. 1023, as to appeal.

Deputy lodging-house keepers.

71.—(1) The local authority shall keep a register for the purposes of this section, and shall enter therein the name of any person whose name

Section 71. is submitted to them by a common lodging-house keeper as his deputy, and who is approved by them for the purpose.

(2) The local authority may register more than one deputy for any common lodging-house keeper.

(3) The local authority, if at any time they are of opinion that any person registered as a deputy of a common lodging-house keeper is not a fit person for the purpose, may cancel the registration.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health. See note (a) on p. 1061, ante. No provision was made in the common lodging-house code in the P. H. A., 1875 (ss. 76—89, ante, pp. 151 et seq.), for deputy keepers. Section 7, ante, p. 1023, may give an appeal against a refusal to approve.

Power of court convicting common lodging-house keeper to cancel registration.

72. Where the keeper of a common lodging-house is convicted of any offence against any provision of the Public Health Acts or this Act relating to common lodging-houses, or of any byelaw made thereunder, the court before whom he is convicted may cancel his registration as a common lodging-house keeper, and he shall cease to be registered accordingly.

Where this section becomes operative (see note (a) on p. 1061, ante), it will supersede the less stringent section (s. 88, ante, p. 160) of the P. H. A., 1875: see s. 75 (2), post, p. 1063. See s. 7, ante, p. 1023, as to appeal.

Unregistered lodging-house keepers liable to penalties under s. 86 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55.

73. If a person keeps a common lodging-house he shall, although he is not registered as a common lodging-house keeper under section seventy-seven of the Public Health Act, 1875, be liable to the penalties imposed under section eighty-six of that Act for the offences named therein.

Quære, whether this section, if applied to a district (see note (a), on p. 1061, ante) effects any alteration in the law, for it is certainly arguable that unregistered keepers are liable to be convicted under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 86, ante, p. 159, for the offences named therein.

Provision of proper sanitary conveniences in a common lodging-house.

74.—(1) Every common lodging-house, whether registered before or after the commencement of this section, shall be provided—

(a) With sufficient and suitable sanitary conveniences, having regard to the number of persons who may be received in that house, and also, where persons of both sexes are received in the common lodging-house, with proper separate accommodation for persons of each sex; and

(b) With a water supply laid on sufficient for flushing any water-closets or urinals which are used in the house.

(2) If it appears to the local authority that, in the case of any common lodging-house, default is made in any respect in complying with the provisions of this section, the local authority may, by notice in writing specifying the default, require the keeper of the common lodging-house to remedy the default.

(3) If within twenty-eight days of the notice being served the default is not remedied to the satisfaction of the local authority, they may themselves do the work required to be done, and may recover in a summary manner from the keeper of the common lodging-house the expenses incurred by them in so doing, or may by order declare these expenses to be private improvement expenses. Section 74.

This section on being applied to a district (see note (a) on p. 1061, ante), will form a useful supplement to the lodging-house code of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, pp. 151, et seq.

As to appeal, see s. 7, ante, p. 1023, and notes thereto.

75.—(1) At a time not less than one month before the commencement of this Part of this Act the local authority shall give notice of the fact to the keeper of every common lodging-house in their district. Notice of commencement of Part V. and repeal.

See note (a) on p. 1061, ante, and note to s. 85 on p. 1071, post.

(2) On and after the commencement of this Part of this Act section seventy-eight (a) from the words "and the local authority may" to the end of the section, and section eighty-eight (b) of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall be repealed as far as relates to the district.

(a) See note to s. 69, p. 1061, ante.

(b) See note to s. 72, p. 1062, ante.

PART VI.

RECREATION GROUNDS.

It is obviously the intention of the Legislature that this Part of the Act (two sections only) shall be applied as a whole, for s. 77 is supplemental merely to s. 76. Its provisions will not be operative in a district until applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health. The Ministry will probably require applications to be supported by information as to the parks and pleasure grounds provided by the council or under their management or control, and as to the particular powers which are considered to be necessary. Many Orders have been issued.

76.—(1) The Local Government Board, for the purposes of this section, may make rules prescribing restrictions or conditions subject to which any powers conferred by the section shall with respect to any area in a public park or pleasure ground be exerciseable in relation to the enclosure or setting apart of the area, or in relation to the use of the area as the site of a building or convenience. Powers as to parks and pleasure grounds.

Subject to the restrictions or conditions prescribed by rules made under this section, the local authority shall, in addition to any powers under any general Act, have the following powers with respect to any public park or pleasure ground provided by them or under their management and control, namely, powers—

(a) To enclose during time of frost any part of the park or ground for the purpose of protecting ice for skating, and charge admission to the part enclosed, but only on condition that at least three-quarters of the ice available for the purpose of skating is open to the use of the public free of charge;

(b) To set apart any such part of the park or ground as may be fixed by the local authority, and may be described in a notice board affixed or set up in some conspicuous position in the park or ground for the purpose of cricket, football, or any other game

or recreation, and to exclude the public from the part set apart while it is in actual use for that purpose ;

(c) To provide any apparatus for games and recreations, and charge for the use thereof, or let the right of providing any such apparatus for any term not exceeding three years to any person ;

(d) To provide or contribute towards the expenses of any band of music to perform in the park or ground :

(e) To enclose any part of the park or ground, not exceeding one acre, for the convenience of persons listening to any band of music, and charge admission thereto (a) ;

(f) To place, or authorise any person to place, chairs or seats (b) in any such park or ground, and charge for, or authorise any person to charge for, the use of the chairs so provided ;

(g) To provide and maintain any reading rooms, pavilions, or other buildings and conveniences, and to charge for admission thereto, subject in the case of reading rooms to the limitation that such a charge shall not be made on more than twelve days in any one year, nor on more than four consecutive days ;

(h) To let any pavilion or other building so provided by them to any person for the purpose of entertainments, and authorise that person to charge for admission thereto ;

(i) To provide and maintain refreshment rooms in any such park, and either manage them themselves, or, if they think fit, let them to any person for any term not exceeding three years.

(2) Any expenses of the local authority incurred in the exercise of the powers given to them by this section shall be defrayed out of the fund or rate out of which the expenses of the park or ground, as to which the powers are exercised, are payable, and any receipts arising from the exercise of any such powers shall be carried to the credit of the same fund or rate.

(3) The expenses incurred by the council in the exercise of their power under this section to provide or contribute to a band shall not in any one year exceed an amount equal to that which would be produced by a rate of an amount which shall be approved by the Local Government Board, and shall not exceed a penny on the property liable to be assessed for the purpose of the rate out of which the expenses of the park or ground are payable, as assessed for the time being for the purposes of that rate.

(4) No power given by this section shall be exercised in such a manner as to contravene any covenant or condition subject to which a gift or lease (c) of a public park or pleasure ground has been accepted or made, without the consent of the donor, grantor, lessor, or other person or persons entitled in law to the benefit of such covenant or condition.

The effect of this section will be gathered on reference to the notes under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 164, ante, p. 369.

(a) The payment for a seat within the enclosure in order to listen to the performance is a payment for admission to an entertainment within the meaning of the Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916, and is subject to entertainments duty (Cordiner v. Stockham, [1920] 1 K. B. 104 ; 83 J. P. 246).

(b) For an action against an authority in respect of insecure seats supplied by them to a bandmaster for beach entertainments, see Dare v. Bognor U. D. C., on p. 371, ante. Note to Section 76.

(c) Note that the sub-section mentions gifts and leases, but not purchases.

77. The local authority may appoint officers for securing the observance of this Part of this Act, and of the regulations and byelaws made thereunder, and may procure such officers to be sworn in as constables for that purpose, but any such officer shall not act as a constable unless in uniform or provided with a warrant. Power to appoint officers.

See the notes under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 164, ante, p. 369.

PART VII.

POLICE.

The provisions of this Part of the Act will only be operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Home Secretary. See s. 3 (1), (4), ante, pp. 1021, 1022.

78. The local authority may from time to time make regulations with respect to such streets, to be specified in the regulations, as are specially liable to be obstructed by reason of the amount and nature of the traffic : Regulations as to street traffic.

(a) Prescribing the line to be kept at any street crossing by all persons riding or driving ;

(b) Requiring the drivers of heavy and slow-moving vehicles to keep their vehicles to a particular portion of the street.

All regulations under this section shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of State.

Any person who shall contravene any such regulation, after warning given by word or signal by a police constable stationed in the street to direct the traffic, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

Under the existing law urban authorities have such powers with regard to the control of street traffic as are contained in ss. 21 and 22 of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, incorporated in the P. H. A., 1875, by ibid., s. 171. See those two sections in App. I., post, Vol. II. The present section, if applied, confers wider powers. See also s. 80, post, p. 1066, which contains another useful provision.

Rural as well as urban councils may apply to have these sections put in force in their district. See s. 3 (1), (4), ante, pp. 1021, 1022, and s. 13, ante, p. 1025.

Under a local Act containing similar provisions (except that regulations required no approval) a corporation made regulations requiring (inter alia) that drivers of heavy and slow moving vehicles should keep by the nearside kerb ; the regulations contained a note that offenders would be liable to a penalty, saying nothing about "after warning," etc. It was held that a driver could not be convicted unless he had received and disregarded a warning (Chorlton v. Liggett (1910), 74 J. P. 458 ; 103 L. T. 543).

A byelaw provided that "if any person shall drive any carriage and shall not keep the same on the left or near side of the road in any street in passing along the same except in cases in which he shall have occasion to pass any other carriage or of actual necessity or some sufficient reason for deviation therefrom," he should be liable to a penalty. A driver drove a lorry in a street varying from 29½ to 31 feet in width, in which was a double set of tram lines over which electric cars passed every two or three minutes. He drove so that the near wheels were about 10 feet from the kerb, the off wheels being a few inches from the centre of the road, but never over the centre line. There were no other vehicles in that part of the road at the time, and he did not cause any obstruction. It was held that he had not contravened the byelaw (Bolton v. Everett (1911), 75 J. P. 534; 105 L. T. 830).

As to it being no offence under the Highway Act, 1835, s. 78, for one driver to overtake and pass on the near side another driver who assents to his so doing, there being no other traffic on the road, see Nuttall v. Pickering, [1913] 1 K. B. 14; 77 J. P. 30; and see Sleith v. Godfrey (1920), 85 J. P. 46.

Dangerous riding and driving.

79. Every person who shall ride or drive so as to endanger the life or limb of any person or to the common danger of the passengers in any thoroughfare shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings and may be arrested without warrant by any constable who witnesses the offence.

The Highway Act, 1835, s. 78, which is in force throughout the country, and creates many offences which may be committed by drivers of vehicles on highways, provides (inter alia) that if any person riding any horse or beast, or driving any sort of carriage, shall ride or drive the same furiously so as to endanger the life or limb of any passenger, he shall, if he is not the owner of a carriage, etc., so driven, be liable to forfeit a sum not exceeding £5, and shall, if he is such owner, be liable to forfeit a sum not exceeding £10. It renders an offender liable to arrest by any person who sees the offence committed.

In urban districts further provision in this behalf is made by the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, s. 28, incorporated with the P. H. A., 1875, by ibid., s. 171; it provides that any person who in any street to the obstruction, annoyance, or danger of the residents or passengers rides or drives furiously any horse or carriage, or drives furiously any cattle, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings, or may be imprisoned for a period not exceeding fourteen days; and any constable may take into custody, without warrant, any person who within his view commits the offence.

Where the present section is applied (by an Order of the Home Secretary) it will no longer be necessary to prove that the riding or driving was furious if it was such as to endanger the life or limb of any person or was dangerous to the passengers in the thoroughfare.

Quære, whether the word "thoroughfare" should be construed strictly as excluding a cul-de-sac.

As to leading or driving animals.

80. The local authority may, by order, prescribe the streets in which, and the manner according to which, the leading or driving of animals shall be permitted within their district, provided that the route or routes which it shall be lawful for the local authority so to prescribe shall not be such as would prevent the passage of cattle between any market on the one hand, and any railway station or landing wharf in the district or any place beyond the district on the other hand, when such animals are merely passing between such market and railway station, landing wharf, or other place aforesaid, and the local authority shall be bound to allow at all times a reasonably short and efficient route or routes for the passage of such animals. Provided also that any such order shall only operate between the hours of nine in the morning and nine in the evening, and shall not prevent the owner of any animals driving the same to or from his own premises, and nothing in this enactment contained shall authorise the local authority to interfere with the leading or driving of any animals to any duly licensed slaughter-house.

Note to Section 80.

See also ss. 78, 79, ante, pp. 1065, 1066, and notes thereto. This section only becomes operative when applied to a district by Order of the Home Secretary: see s. 3 (1), (4), ante, pp. 1021, 1022. No penalty is provided for the breach of an Order.

The plaintiff was riding a bicycle along a highway after dark. She had a lamp on her bicycle and it was burning properly. The defendant, a farmer, wished to transfer a colt, an unbroken animal about 18 months old, from one farm to another, and was bringing the colt along the road. In front he had a boy leading a mare, then came the colt, and behind the colt the defendant was driving a trap to keep the colt from bolting back. When the plaintiff approached the colt was startled by the light on her bicycle and darted from one side of the road to the other, and knocked the plaintiff over, causing injuries for which she sued the defendant. It was held that as the colt had done just what in the circumstances might have been expected, the defendant was liable (Turner v. Coates (1916), 33 T. L. R. 79).

Extending definition of "public place" and "street" for certain purposes.

81. Any place of public resort or recreation ground belonging to, or under the control of, the local authority, and any unfenced ground adjoining or abutting upon any street in an urban district shall for the purpose of the Vagrancy Act, 1824, and of any Act for the time being in force altering or amending the same, be deemed to be an open and public place, and shall be deemed to be a street for the purposes of section twenty-nine of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, and also for the purposes of so much of section twenty-eight of that Act as relates to the following offences:

Every person who suffers to be at large any unmuzzled ferocious dog, or urges any dog or other animal to attack, worry, or put in fear any person or animal:

Every person who rides or drives furiously any horse or carriage, or drives furiously any cattle:

Every common prostitute or night walker loitering and importuning passengers for the purpose of prostitution:

Every person who wilfully and indecently exposes his person:

Every person who publicly offers for sale or distribution, or exhibits to public view, any profane, indecent, or obscene book, paper, print, drawing, painting, or representation, or sings any profane or obscene song or ballad, or uses any profane or obscene language:

Every person who wantonly discharges any firearm or discharges any missile or makes any bonfire:

Every person who throws or lays any dirt, litter, ashes, or night soil, or any carrion, fish, offal, or rubbish, on any street.

This section only becomes operative when applied to a district by Order of the Home Secretary. See s. 3 (1), (4), ante, pp. 1021, 1022.

Vagrancy Acts.

The Vagrancy Act, 1824, s. 3 (inter alia), provides that every common prostitute wandering in the public streets or public highways, or in any place of public resort, and behaving in a riotous or indecent manner; and every person wandering abroad, or placing himself or herself in any public place, street, highway, court or passage to beg or gather alms, or causing or procuring or encouraging any child or children so to do; shall be deemed an idle and disorderly person within the true intent and meaning of this Act; and it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace to commit such offender (being thereof convicted before him by his own view, or by the confession of such offender, or by the evidence on oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses) to the house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding one calendar month. Ibid., s. 4, deals (inter alia) with persons wilfully exposing to view, in any street, road, highway, or public place, any obscene print, etc. and with any person wilfully exposing his person in any street, road, or public highway, or in the view thereof, or in any place of public resort, with intent to insult any female. So far, therefore, as these sections are concerned, the text if applied to a district will not alter the law, for in neither is the expression " open and public place " used.

Note to Section 81.

By the Vagrant Act Amendment Act, 1873, s. 3, every person playing or betting by way of wagering or gaming in any street, road, highway, or other open and public place, or in any open place to which the public have or are permitted to have access, at or with any table or instrument of gaming, or any coin, card, token, or other article used as an instrument or means of such wagering or gaming, at any game or pretended game of chance, shall be deemed a rogue and vagabond within the meaning of the Vagrancy Act, 1824, and as such may be convicted and punished under the provisions of that Act, or, in the discretion of the justice or justices trying the case, in lieu of such punishment, by a penalty for the first offence not exceeding forty shillings, and for the second or any subsequent offence not exceeding five pounds. So far as this section is concerned the text if applied to a district will not alter the law much, even if at all. Firstly, a place of public resort or recreation ground belonging to, or controlled by, an authority is, semble, apart from it " an open place to which the public have or are permitted to have access " : see Langrish v. Archer and Airton v. Scott, p. 1069, post. Secondly, a piece of unfenced ground adjoining or abutting upon a street, upon which members of the public are in fact found, would also appear to be " an open place to which the public have access " ; even if it were necessary to find that the public are permitted to have access to it, the mere absence of any fencing would probably justify such a finding unless it was proved that the owner had tried to turn persons off, and had been defied by them.

In the Vagrancy Act, 1898, the expression used in s. 1 is public place, and the text would, therefore, in this instance appear to make no alteration in the law.

Town Police Clauses Act.

The text further provides that for the purposes of s. 29 of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, and of s. 28 of that Act so far as certain specified offences are concerned, any place of public resort or recreation ground belonging to, or under the control of, a local authority, and any unfenced ground adjoining or abutting upon any street in an urban district shall be deemed to be a street.

Section 29 of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, imposes a penalty upon any person " drunk in any street and guilty of any riotous or indecent behaviour." It was, however, afterwards by the Licensing Act, 1872, s. 12, as amended by the Licensing Act, 1902, s. 8, enacted (inter alia) that every person who in any highway or other public place (including in that expression any place to which the public have access, whether on payment or otherwise) is guilty while drunk of riotous or disorderly behaviour, etc. shall be punishable as therein mentioned. Unless, therefore, indecent behaviour is not necessarily disorderly behaviour, it is difficult to see how the text will amend the law.

Section 28 of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, deals with a large number of offences committed " in any street " and " to the obstruction, annoyance, or danger of the residents or passengers." Seven of these offences are selected, and on the text being applied to a district by Order of the Home Secretary, an advantage will certainly be gained. The first two of these offences deal with ferocious dogs and furious riding or driving, and call for no comment. The third, which deals with solicitation, calls for notice. The existing provision in the Vagrancy Act is restricted to public streets and highways and places of public resort, and to riotous and indecent behaviour ; probably under that section a piece of vacant land in a town, if frequented by the public, would be held to be a place of public resort, but where the new provision is put in force it will free the hands of the police and relieve them from the necessity of proving that the solicitation was of such a nature as to be " riotous and indecent," a point as to which opinions are apt to differ : see R. v. De Ruiter (1880), 44 J. P. 90 ; Bonner v. Lushington (1893), 57 J. P. 168 ; 68 L. T. 91. The fourth offence is that of indecent behaviour. Under the present law an indictment will lie although the locus is not, strictly speaking, a public place (see R. v. Wellard (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 63 ; 49 J. P. 296) ; and there is a summary penalty under the Vagrancy Act where the offence is committed with intent to insult any female in (inter alia) any place of public resort. The fifth offence deals with the exhibition of indecent matter, which is already punishable in a " public place " under the Vagrancy Act, and with the use of profane or obscene language, for which (except under byelaws) there is no summary penalty where the locus is not a street within the meaning of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847. Lastly, there are two offences dealing with the discharge of firearms, catapults, etc., the lighting of bonfires, and the deposit of rubbish. It will still be necessary in these cases to prove obstruction, annoyance, or danger to residents or inhabitants; but, semble, it is not necessary to call persons who have been actually annoyed, etc.; see notes to s. 28 of the Act of 1847, in App. I., post, Vol. II. Note to Section 81.

It may be useful here to give a reference to cases in which the courts have construed such expressions as "public place," "place of public resort," "place to which the public have access," etc., under different statutes: Langrish v. Archer (1882), 10 Q. 82. The local authority for the prevention of danger, obstruction, or annoyance to persons using the seashore may make and enforce byelaws to— Byelaws as to seashore.

(1) Regulate the erection or placing on the seashore, or on such part or parts thereof as may be prescribed by such byelaws, of any booths, tents, sheds, stands, and stalls (whether fixed or movable), or vehicles for the sale or exposure of any article or thing, or any shows, exhibitions, performances, swings, roundabouts, or other erections, vans, photographic carts, or other vehicles, whether drawn or propelled by animals, persons or any mechanical power, and the playing of any games on the seashore, and generally regulates the user of the seashore for such purposes as shall be prescribed by such byelaws:

(2) Regulate the user of the seashore for riding and driving;

(3) Regulate the selling and hawking of any article, commodity, or thing on the seashore;

(4) Provide for the preservation of order and good conduct among persons using the seashore. Provided that no byelaws affecting the foreshore below high-water mark shall come into operation until the consent of the Board of Trade has been obtained.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Home Secretary. See s. 3 (1), (4), ante, pp. 1021, 1022. Byelaws made under it must be submitted to him for confirmation: see s. 9, ante, p. 1024.

See notes to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 164, p. 374, ante, for cases in which byelaws as to the seashore have been considered by the courts.

83. The local authority may, for the prevention of danger, obstruction, or annoyance to persons using the esplanades or promenades within Byelaws as to promenades.

Section 83. the district, make byelaws prescribing the nature of the traffic for which they may be used, regulating the selling and hawking of any article, commodity, or thing thereon, and for the preservation of order and good conduct among the persons using the same.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Home Secretary. See s. 3 (1), (4), ante, pp. 1021, 1022. Byelaws under it must be submitted to him for confirmation: see s. 9, ante, p. 1024.

See as to byelaws upon such matters cases cited in notes to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 164, at p. 374, ante.

As regards an authority's power over a parade provided by them under a local Act, reference may be made to Att.-Gen. v. Blackpool Corporation (1907), 71 J. P. 478, in which the authority were held to be in the position of trustees of the parade for limited public purposes. By their local Act of 1865, the corporation were authorised to make and maintain a carriage-drive and a promenade (called "the parade") by the sea. It was provided by s. 13 that the carriage-drive should be a public highway, by s. 17 that the parade should not be a public highway, and by s. 18 that it should be "kept and used exclusively for the purposes of recreation by persons on foot, and with or without carriages, in respect of which toll is authorised to be taken." Section 19 authorised a toll of twopence for every bath-chair, etc. or like carriage driven by human power. By a later Act of 1899, additional works were authorised, including a new carriageway, absorbing the original parade, a new road with a tramway thereon alongside the new carriageway, and a new parade alongside the tramway. By s. 7 the corporation might appropriate the whole or such part of the new parade as they might think fit for the exclusive use of foot passengers, and by s. 8 the new road was to be for the exclusive purpose of the tramway. The parade was, in fact, used exclusively for foot passengers and bath-chairs, etc. The corporation, in 1906, gave their approval to motor car races being held on the parade, and gave permission for part of the tramway road to be used for the purpose of cars returning to the starting point. They also undertook to keep the portion of the parade over which the races were to be run clear of traffic, and to erect a barrier and provide the necessary police control. An action was brought by the Attorney-General, at the relation of a ratepayer, to restrain the corporation from organising or promoting motor races on the sea front. It was held by the Vice-Chancellor of the Palatine Court that the corporation were in the position of trustees of the parade for limited public purposes, namely, for the purpose of use by foot passengers, perambulators, invalid carriages, and similar vehicles, and that it was an abuse of the parade to allow it to be used for either horses or motor cars, and a fortiori motor races.

Licences to porters.

84.—(1) The local authority may from time to time grant to any person whom they think fit a licence to carry on the calling of a luggage porter, light porter, public messenger, or commissionaire, and may charge a fee of one shilling for any such licence.

(2) The local authority may from time to time make byelaws for regulating the conduct of any persons so licensed and for fixing the charges to be made by them.

(3) Every such licence may be granted for a year or for any less period according as the local authority may think fit, and may be suspended or revoked or endorsed by the local authority for a breach of such byelaws or whenever they shall deem such suspension or revocation or endorsement to be necessary or desirable in the interests of the public: Provided that the existence of this power to suspend or revoke or endorse a licence shall be plainly set forth in the licence itself.

(4) Every such licence whensoever issued shall expire on the thirty-first day of March next following the date of its issue, and may contain conditions as to the badge which the holder of any licence shall wear.

(5) If any person while unlicensed represents himself to be licensed, or wears any badge for the purpose of representing himself as licensed to carry on any of the callings specified in this section, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty shillings. Section 84.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Home Secretary (see s. 3 (1), (4), ante, pp. 1021, 1022). Byelaws under it require confirmation by him (see s. 9, p. 1024, ante).

There is nothing in the section to compel the persons referred to therein to take out a licence, and so long as they refrain from doing so, they will be under no obligation to observe any byelaws made by the authority.

85.—(1) Every person who shall carry on, for the purpose of private gain, the trade or business of keeper of a female domestic servants' registry shall register his name and place of abode, and also the premises in which such trade or business is carried on, in a book to be kept at the offices of the local authority for the purpose. Registries for servants.

(2) The local authority may make byelaws prescribing the books to be kept and the entries to be made therein, and any other matter which the local authority may deem necessary for the prevention of fraud or immorality in the conduct of such trade or business, and for regulating any premises used for the purposes of or in connection with such trade or business.

(3) The person registered shall keep a copy of the byelaws made by the local authority under this section hung up in a conspicuous place in the registered premises.

(4) Any officer of the local authority or other person duly authorised in writing in that behalf by the local authority, and if so required exhibiting his authority, shall at all reasonable times be afforded by the person registered full and free power of entry into the registered premises for the purpose of inspecting the registered premises and the books required to be kept by such person.

(5) Any person carrying on such trade or business as aforesaid whose name, place of abode, and premises in which such trade or business is carried on have not been registered in accordance with sub-section one of this section, or whose registration has been cancelled or suspended as hereinafter provided, or acting in contravention of any of the provisions of this section or of any byelaw made thereunder, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds and to a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings, and the court may (in lieu of or in addition to imposing a penalty) order the suspension or cancellation of the registration.

(6) The local authority shall give public notice of the provisions of this section by advertisement in two newspapers circulating in the district, and by handbills and otherwise in such manner as they think sufficient.

This section only becomes operative in a district to which it is applied by an Order of the Home Secretary: see s. 3 (1), (4), ante, pp. 1021, 1022.

Sub-section (6) imposes on an authority to whose district the section is applied the duty of giving public notice of its provisions; but it is submitted that neglect on the part of the authority to perform this duty will not excuse a keeper of a registry for breach of the provisions (see Duncan v. Knill (1907), 71 J. P. 287; 96 L. T. 911).

Section 86.

As to dealers in old metal and marine stores.

86.—(1) Every person who shall carry on business as a dealer in old metal or as a marine store dealer shall register his name and place of abode and every place of business, warehouse, store, and place of deposit occupied or used by him for the purpose of such business, in a book to be kept for the purpose at the offices of the local authority.

(2) Every person carrying on business as aforesaid shall correctly enter in a book to be kept by him for that purpose the description and price of all articles purchased or otherwise acquired by him, and the name, address, and occupation of the person from whom the same were purchased or otherwise acquired.

(3) Every person who shall carry on such business without having so registered or without keeping such book and making such entries as required by this section shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds and to a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

(4) Any officer of the local authority or other person duly authorised in writing in that behalf by the local authority, and if so required exhibiting his authority, shall have free access at all reasonable times to every such place of business, warehouse, store, and place of deposit, to inspect the same and the books by this section required to be kept, and every person who shall prevent, hinder, or obstruct any officer or person so authorised in the execution of his duty under this sub-section shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds.

(5) The local authority shall give public notice of the provisions of this section by advertisement in two newspapers circulating in the district and by handbills and otherwise in such manner as they think sufficient.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Home Secretary: see s. 3 (1), (4), ante, pp. 1021, 1022.

By the Old Metal Dealers Act, 1861, s. 3, "In the construction and for the purposes of this Act the term 'dealer in old metals' shall mean any person dealing in, buying, and selling old metal, scrap metal, broken metal, or partly manufactured metal goods, or defaced or old metal goods, and whether such person deals in such articles only, or together with second-hand goods or marine stores; and the term 'old metals' shall mean the said articles." See the provisions of that Act generally as to dealers in old metals, and also the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871, s. 13.

As to "marine store dealers," i.e., persons dealing in, buying or selling, anchors, cables, sails, old junk, old iron or other marine stores of any kind, see ss. 538—541 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894.

As to the prohibition of purchases from children under sixteen, see Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, s. 540, and Children Act, 1908, s. 116.

In Ireland under a somewhat similar section, requiring licensing instead of registration, it has been held that the dealer must enter the vendor's real name, etc. and cannot protect himself by proving that he entered in good faith the name, etc. given to him (Toppin v. Marcus, [1908] 2 I. R. 423); and also that a licensed dealer may purchase old metal through an unlicensed agent even off his licensed premises, but must be responsible for proper and accurate entries being made in his books (Dunne v. Lee, [1913] 2 I. R. 205). See also as to who is a "general dealer" under the Irish Act, Kelly v. Rice, [1906] 2 I. R. 1; Gamble v. Rainey (1912), 46 Ir. L. T. 200, and as to what amounts to "using" a place for business, Hall v. O'Brien (1905), 40 Ir. L. T. 33.

Sub-section (5) of the text imposes on an authority to whose district the section is applied the duty of giving public notice of its provisions; but it is submitted that neglect on the part of the authority to perform this duty will not excuse a dealer for breach of its provisions (see Duncan v. Knill, ante, p. 1071).

PART VIII.

FIRE BRIGADE.

Power to police constable to enter and break open premises in case of fire.

87. Any police constable acting under the orders of his superior officer, and any member of the fire brigade of the local authority being on duty, and any officer of the local authority, may enter and if necessary break into any building in the district being or reasonably supposed to be on fire, or any building or land adjoining or near thereto, without the consent of the owner or occupier thereof respectively, and may do all such acts and things as they may deem necessary for extinguishing fire in any such building or for protecting the same or rescuing any person or property therein from fire.

This section can only be put in force by an Order of the Home Secretary. See s. 3 (1), (4), ante, pp. 1021, 1022.

It has been said that the common law justifies an entry for the purpose of preventing the spread of a fire (9 Edw. 4, 35 pl. 10), and in general a licence is given by law to go on to adjoining land to abate a nuisance (Clerk and Lindsell on Torts, 6th ed., p. 369).

Power to police officer to control street traffic at fires.

88. The officer in charge of the police at any fire in the district shall have power to stop or regulate the traffic in any street whenever in his opinion it is necessary or desirable to stop or regulate such traffic for the purpose of extinguishing the fire or for the safety or protection of life or property, and any person who wilfully disobeys any order given by such officer in pursuance of this section shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds.

See note under s. 87, supra.

Captain of fire brigade or other officer to have control of operations.

89. The captain or superintendent of the fire brigade of the local authority, or other officer of such fire brigade for the time being in charge of the engine or other apparatus for extinguishing fires, attending at any fire within the district shall from the time of his arrival and during his presence thereat have the sole charge and control of all operations for the putting out of such fire, whether by the fire brigade of the local authority or any other fire brigade, including the fixing of the positions of fire engines and apparatus, the attaching of hose to any water pipes or water supply, and the selection of the parts of the building on fire or of adjoining buildings against which the water is to be directed.

See note under s. 87, supra.

Agreements with local authorities for common use of fire appliances.

90. The local authority of the district and the local authority of any borough or urban or rural district, or the parish council of any parish, may enter into and carry into effect agreements for the common use of any fire engines with their appurtenances and firemen or for mutual assistance in case of fire.

See note under s. 87, supra.

Urban councils derive their powers for the provision of fire appliances from the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, s. 32 (in App. I., post, Vol. II.), incorporated in the

Note to Section 90.

P. H. A., 1875, by ibid., s. 171; parish councils from the Lighting and Watching Act, 1833, s. 44, or the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1867, s. 29. See the L. G. A., 1894, ss. 6 (1) (c) (ii), 7, 53 (1). Certain powers for promoting joint action are already in force under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 285; the L. G. A., 1894, s. 57; and the Parish Fire Engines Act, 1898.

It is not clear from the present section whether a rural council must obtain urban powers by Order of the Ministry of Health before taking action thereunder, but it is understood that the department advises this course. Further, the Secretary of State is only disposed in ordinary cases to give the powers of s. 90 where the local authority possesses a fire brigade and applies for the whole or the greater portion of Part VIII. of the Act. See also the note as to "Fire engines and brigades," at p. 145, ante, and the notes on p. 394, ante.

PART IX.

SKY SIGNS.

Sky signs.

91.—(1) (a) It shall not be lawful to erect or fix to, upon, or in connection with any building or erection any sky sign, and it shall not be lawful to retain any existing sky sign so erected or fixed for a longer period than three years after the commencement of this section, nor during that period except with the licence of the local authority, and in the event of such licence being granted then only for such period not exceeding three years from the commencement of this section and under and subject to such terms and conditions as shall be therein prescribed.

Outside London there has hitherto been no power to control or prevent the erection of sky signs except under local Acts. Such power can now be obtained by means of an Order of the Home Secretary applying s. 91 to the district. See s. 3 (1), (4), ante, pp. 1021, 1022.

(b) Provided that in any of the following cases a licence of the local authority under this sub-section shall become void (namely);

(i) If any addition to any sky sign be made except for the purpose of making it secure under the direction of the surveyor;

(ii) If any change be made in the sky sign or any part thereof;

(iii) If the sky sign or any part thereof fall either through accident, decay, or any other cause;

(iv) If any addition or alteration be made to or in the house, building, or structure on, over, or to which any sky sign is placed or attached if such addition or alteration involves the disturbance of the sky sign or any part thereof; or

(v) If the house, building, or structure over, on, or to which the sky sign is placed or attached become unoccupied or be demolished or destroyed.

(c) Provided also that if any sky sign be erected or retained contrary to the provisions of this Act, or after the licence for the erection, maintenance, or retention thereof for any period shall have expired or become void, it shall be lawful for the local authority to take proceedings for the taking down and removal of the sky sign in the same manner and with the same consequence as to recovery of expenses and otherwise in all respects as if it were an obstruction within the meaning of section sixty-nine (Future projections of houses, etc., to be removed on notice) of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847. Section 91.

See this section in App. I., post, Vol. II.

(2) Any person acting in contravention of any of the provisions of this section, or of the terms and conditions (if any) of any approval, licence, or consent under this section, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds and to a daily penalty not exceeding twenty shillings.

(3) For the purposes of this section—

" Sky sign " means—

Any word, letter, model, sign, device, or representation in the nature of an advertisement, announcement, or direction supported on or attached to any post, pole, standard, frame-work, or other support wholly or in part upon, over, or above any house, building or structure which, or any part of which, sky sign shall be visible against the sky from some point in any street or public way, and includes all and every part of any such post, pole, standard, frame-work, or other support ;

The expression " sky sign " shall also include—

Any balloon, parachute, or other similar device employed wholly or in part for the purposes of any advertisement or announcement on, over, or above any house, building, structure, or erection of any kind, or on or over any street or public way ;

But shall not include—

(a) Any flagstaff, pole, vane, or weathercock unless adapted or used wholly or in part for the purpose of any advertisement or announcement ;

(b) Any sign or any board, frame, or other contrivance securely fixed to or on the top of the wall or parapet of any building, or on the cornice or blocking course of any wall, or to the ridge of a roof : Provided that such board, frame, or other contrivance be of one continuous face and not open work, and do not extend in height more than three feet above any part of the wall or parapet or ridge to, against or on which it is fixed or supported ;

(c) Any word, letter, model, sign, device, or representation as aforesaid relating exclusively to the business of a railway or canal company, and placed wholly upon or over any railway, canal, railway station, wharf, quay, yard, platform, or station or wharf or quay approach belonging to a railway or canal company, and so placed that it cannot fall into any street or public place.

The above definition is similar to that contained in the London Building Act, 1894, s. 125 ; see R. v. Vaughan (1896), 12 T. L. R. 193, and London C. C. v. Savoy Hotel Co. (1896), 60 J. P. 457, in which the section was construed. See also London C. C. v. Carwardine (1892), 62 L. J. M. C. 40 ; 57 J. P. 181 ; and Tussaud v. London C. C. (1892), 57 J. P. 184 ; 9 T. L. R. 64, decided under the London Sky Signs Act, 1891, which also contained a different definition ; and Goldstraw v. Jones (1907), 71 J. P. 22 ; 96 L. T. 30, a decision under a local Act as to " a sign."

PART X.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bathing places.

92. The local authority—

(a) may make byelaws with regard to any public bathing, whether from bathing machines or not, for any of the purposes mentioned in section sixty-nine of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, and also for the purpose of regulating the hours of bathing and enforcing the provision and maintenance of any life-saving apparatus or other means of protecting bathers from danger by persons providing accommodation for public bathing; and

(b) may, if they think fit, provide and maintain on or at any place within their district, which abuts on the sea or any river, bathing-sheds or other conveniences with all necessary appliances, and may charge for the use thereof.

This section may be put in force by Order of the Ministry of Health. An authority applying for an Order will probably be required to state the grounds upon which the powers of the section are considered necessary, and a rural district council should ascertain whether they have been invested at any time with the powers of s. 171 (5) of the P. H. A., 1875 (incorporating part of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847).

Byelaws made under this section require confirmation by the Ministry: see s. 9, ante, p. 1024.

The construction placed upon the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, s. 69, by the L. G. B. was that byelaws made thereunder must be restricted to the regulation of public bathing in connection with the use of bathing machines. This restriction will be removed if this section is applied to a district, and the section widens the scope of the byelaws in other directions. Section 69 of the Act of 1847 applies only where any part of the seashore or strand of any river used as a public bathing-place is within the limits of the special Act. The provision in the text is not so limited, and it would appear therefore that byelaws may be made for regulating bathing in places not adjoining the seashore or a river. Reference may be made to M'Gregor v. Disselduff, ante, p. 434, where a byelaw (under a Scotch Act) prohibiting bathing altogether under certain circumstances was held ultra vires on the ground that the statute conferred no power to prohibit bathing.

An authority should avoid doing anything which may be construed as an invitation to the public to bathe on foreshore in private ownership (Conyngham v. Broadstairs R. D. C. (1911), Times, July 22nd).

Provision of life-saving appliances.

93. The local authority of any district may provide and maintain life-saving appliances at any place in their district where they think those appliances are likely to be of use.

This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health: see s. 3, ante, p. 1021. An Order seems to be readily granted when cause is shown.

Power to licence pleasure boats.

94 (a).—(1) The local authority may grant upon such terms and conditions as they may think fit licences for pleasure boats and pleasure vessels to be let for hire or to be used for carrying passengers for hire and to the boatmen or persons assisting in the charge or navigation o such boats and vessels, and may charge annual fees for such licences, for a boat or vessel a fee not exceeding the sum of five shillings, and for a boatman or other person a fee not exceeding the sum of one shilling. Section 94.

(2) Any such licence may be granted for such period as the local authority may think fit, and may be suspended or revoked by the local authority whenever they shall deem such suspension or revocation to be necessary or desirable in the interests of the public : Provided that the existence of the power to suspend or revoke the licence shall be plainly set forth in the licence itself.

(3) No person shall let for hire any pleasure boat or pleasure vessel not so licensed or at any time during the suspension of the licence for the boat or vessel, nor shall any person carry or permit to be carried passengers for hire in any pleasure boat or vessel not so licensed or at any time during the suspension of the licence for the boat or vessel.

(4) A licence under this section shall not be required for any boat or vessel duly licensed by or under any regulations of the Board of Trade.

(5) No person shall carry or permit to be carried in any pleasure boat or pleasure vessel a greater number of passengers for hire than shall be specified in the licence applying to such boat or vessel, and every owner of any such boat or vessel shall, before permitting the same to be used for carrying passengers for hire, paint or cause to be painted, in letters and figures not less than one inch in height and three-quarters of an inch in breadth, on a conspicuous part of the said boat or vessel, his own name and also the number of persons which it is licensed to carry, in the form " Licensed to carry persons."

(6) Every person who shall act in contravention of the provisions of this section shall for each offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

(7) Any person deeming himself aggrieved by the withholding, suspension, or revocation of any licence under the provisions of this section may appeal to a petty sessional court held after the expiration of two clear days after such withholding, suspension, or revocation : Provided that the person so aggrieved shall give twenty-four hours' written notice of such appeal, and the ground thereof, to the clerk, and the court shall have power to make such order as they see fit and to award costs, such costs to be recoverable summarily as a civil debt (b).

(a) This section only becomes operative in a district when applied to it by an Order of the Ministry of Health : see s. 3, ante, p. 1021. An authority applying for such an Order will probably be required to state to what extent pleasure boats are hired in the district, and whether there are any byelaws in force with regard to pleasure boats.

When the section has been applied it will extend the provisions of the P. H. A., 1875, s. 172, p. 395, ante.

The defendant, who resided outside a district in which this section was in force, brought his boat to the beach within it and then landed and touted for passengers. Certain persons got into his boat. It was held that there was evidence that he was plying for hire ; and that, although no express evidence was given as to whether the boundary of the district extended below high-water mark, the magistrates were justified in convicting (Fearon v. Warrenpoint U. D. C. (1910), 44 Ir. L. T. 265) ; see, however, as to England the note to " parish " on p. 5, ante.

(b) See as to this expression, the note on pp. 551, 552, ante.

Section 95.

Extension and amendment of s. 175 and s. 176 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55.

95. The powers of a local authority under sections one hundred and seventy-five and one hundred and seventy-six of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall extend to highway purposes (a), and notwithstanding anything in section one hundred and seventy-five of the Public Health Act, 1875, or any general provision in any local Act, any lands acquired by a local authority and not required for the purposes for which those lands have been acquired may be appropriated (b) for any purpose approved by the Local Government Board, subject, nevertheless, to any special covenant or condition affecting the use of the lands attached thereto at the time of the purchase by the local authority, or to any special provision affecting the use of the lands contained in any local Act: Provided that the local authority shall not, on any lands so appropriated, create or permit any nuisance; and that the local authority shall not, on any such lands, sink any well for the public supply of water, or construct any cemetery, burial ground, destructor, station for generating electricity, sewage farm, or hospital for infectious disease, unless, after local inquiry and consideration of any objections made by persons affected, the Local Government Board, subject to such conditions as they think fit, authorise the work or construction.

Nothing in this section shall affect any rights acquired before the commencement of this section (c) under any judgment or order of a court of competent jurisdiction, or under any agreement in writing, but if a dispute, one of the parties to which is a local authority, arises under such an agreement as to any such right, the dispute shall, if either party so require, be settled by the Local Government Board as if it were a doubt or difference within the meaning of section three hundred and four of the Public Health Act, 1875, and the Local Government Board may for that purpose deal by Order with any matters which may be dealt with by an Order or Provisional Order under the said section (d).

(a) The land can only be acquired compulsorily by means of a Provisional Order of the Ministry of Health confirmed by Parliament: see ss. 175 and 176, ante, pp. 412, 417.

A rural council who obtain the powers of this section will not, if they merely succeeded to the powers of a surveyor of highways, obtain any further powers for the acquisition of land for highway purposes or otherwise. They may have to apply to the Ministry of Health for urban powers under s. 149 or s. 154 of the P. H. A., 1875; see notes to those sections and to the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25.

(b) Where this section is applied to a district by an Order of the Ministry of Health, it effects an important amendment of the P. H. A., 1875, s. 175, ante, p. 412. Apart from this section, an authority are, generally speaking, unable to permanently appropriate land to a purpose which is inconsistent with the particular purpose for which it was acquired. See Att.-Gen. v. Hanwell U. D. C., Att.-Gen. v. Pontypridd U. D. C., and Att.-Gen. v. Bradford Corporation, ante, pp. 415, 416. Subject to any special covenant or condition affecting the use of the lands attached thereto at the time of the purchase by the authority, or to any special provision affecting the use of the lands contained in any local Act, lands not required for the purposes for which they have been acquired may be appropriated for any purposes approved by the M. of H. The authority must not, however, on any lands so appropriated, create or permit any nuisance, and must not, on such lands, sink any well for the public supply of water, or construct any cemetery, burial ground, destructor, station for generating electricity, sewage farm, or hospital for infectious diseases, unless after local inquiry and consideration of any objections made by persons affected, the Ministry, subject to such conditions as they think fit, authorise the work or construction. The proviso at the end of the section containing a saving of rights acquired, before it is put in operation, under any judgment or order of a court of competent jurisdiction, or under any agreement in writing, must also be noticed.

Note to Section 95.

It is not clear whether an appropriation of a piece of land, the acquisition of which was specifically authorised by a local Act, can be made under the section, but it would appear that land acquired under a provision in a local Act authorising in general terms the acquisition of land for a specified purpose might be so appropriated.

The appropriation of land by an authority which is also a local education authority is provided for by the Education Act, 1921, 11 & 12 Geo. 5, c. 51, s. 113, which enables a local education authority with the consent of and after inquiry by the Minister of Health, to appropriate any land acquired by them otherwise than in their capacity of local education authority.

The M. of H. require authorities applying for the powers of the section to give references to any provisions in any local Acts or Provisional Orders in force in the district bearing upon the question of the appropriation of lands for purposes other than those for which they were required. The Ministry also inquire whether the council have in prospect any special appropriation of land under this section. In this case particulars must be supplied, indicating how and subject to what conditions the land was acquired and for what purpose it is proposed that it should be appropriated.

It is doubtful whether, even with the powers of s. 95 of the present Act, a local authority will find it practicable to appropriate for a different purpose land which has been acquired for public walks and pleasure grounds and over which the public have thus acquired rights. It is understood that the M. of H. take a strict view on this subject. See notes to s. 164 of the P. H. A., 1875.

SCHEDULE.

[IRELAND ONLY.]

THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACT, 1908.

(8 EDW. 7, c. 6.)

An Act to make the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875, with respect to the provision and regulation of Markets applicable in rural districts. [1st August 1908.]

Provision, etc. of markets by rural authorities.

1. A rural district council may, with the consent of the Local Government Board, exercise with respect to the provision or regulation of markets any powers which an urban district council may exercise with the consent of owners and ratepayers under section one hundred and sixty-six of the Public Health Act, 1875, and sections one hundred and sixty-seven and one hundred and sixty-eight of that Act shall apply with respect to the exercise of those powers by a rural district council as they apply with respect to the exercise of those powers by an urban district council.

Construction and short title.

2.—(1) This Act shall be construed as one with the Public Health Act, 1875.

(2) This Act may be cited as the Public Health Act, 1908, and this

Section 2.

Act and the Public Health Acts may together be cited as the Public Health Acts.

See the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 166—168, pp. 376 et seq., ante, as to markets. The L. G. B. considered that there were practical difficulties which prevented them from making those sections applicable to rural districts by a simple order under s. 276. This Act gets rid of any difficulty.

In the course of an explanatory circular, dated September 7th, 1908, the L. G. B. said: "The new Act will enable any rural district council, with the consent of the Board to exercise, with respect to the provision or regulation of markets any powers which an urban district council may exercise with the consent of owners and ratepayers under section 166. . . . In the case of a rural district council, the consent of the owners and ratepayers will not be required. And sections 167 and 168 of that Act are made applicable with respect to the exercise of those powers by a rural district council in the same manner as they apply with respect to the exercise of those powers by an urban district council. Cases in which rural district councils require to exercise powers under the new Act may not be very numerous, but the need for such powers has occasionally been shown, and it has been thought desirable that they should be in existence. Where, for example, it is the custom to hold live stock markets on a portion of the public highway, the provision of a properly constructed and regulated market-place is frequently expedient not merely on sanitary grounds, but for the well-being of the animals offered for sale, and for the convenience both of persons attending the market and of the users of the highway. . . . The powers given by the new Act can only be exercised with the consent of the Board. In any case where they may be thought to be needed the rural district council in applying for consent should furnish the Board with full particulars of the circumstances which in the opinion of the council render the application necessary and of the action which they would propose to take if consent were given. . . . The provision of a market, with proper accessories, will be a purpose for which the council will be enabled to borrow money under the Public Health Act, 1875. The expenses of the council in relation to the maintenance of any market which they may establish will be defrayable as general expenses unless they are determined by order of the Board to be special expenses under section 229 of the Act of 1875. . . . Any byelaws made by the council with respect to any market provided by them under the provisions of section 167 of the Act of 1875, as applied by the new Act, must be submitted to, and confirmed by the Board before they can take effect, and the requirements in relation to byelaws contained in sections 182 to 185 of the Act of 1875 must be otherwise complied with as regards any byelaws so made."

Several rural councils have obtained powers under this Act to establish and regulate markets.

THE LOCAL AUTHORITIES (ADMISSION OF THE PRESS TO MEETINGS) ACT, 1908.

(8 EDW. 7, c. 43.)

An Act to provide for the Admission of Representatives of the Press to the Meetings of certain Local Authorities. [21st December 1908.]

Representatives of the press to be admitted to the meetings of a local authority subject to a proviso.

1. Representatives of the press shall be admitted to the meetings of every local authority: Provided that a local authority may temporarily exclude such representatives from a meeting as often as may be desirable at any meeting when, in the opinion of a majority of the members of the local authority present at such meeting, expressed by resolution, in view of the special nature of the business then being dealt with or about to be dealt with, such exclusion is advisable in the public interest.

This Act was passed in consequence of the decision in Tenby Corporation v. Mason, referred to on p. 670, ante. Note to Section 1.

See ss. 3 and 4, infra, as to meetings of committees.

2. For the purposes of this Act the expression "local authority" means— Definitions.

(a) A council of a county, county borough, borough (including a metropolitan borough), urban district, rural district, or parish, and a joint committee or joint board of any two or more such councils to which any of the powers or duties of the appointing councils may have been transferred or delegated under the provisions of any Act of Parliament or Provisional Order; and a parish meeting under the provisions of the Local Government Act, 1894;

(b) An education committee and a joint education committee, established under section seventeen of the Education Act, 1902, so far as respects any acts or proceedings which are not required to be submitted to the council or councils for its or their approval;

(c) A board of guardians, and a joint committee constituted in pursuance of section eight of the Poor Law Act, 1879, and the board of management of any school or asylum district formed under any of the Acts relating to the relief of the poor;

(d) A central body and a distress committee under the Unemployed Workmen Act, 1905;

(e) The Metropolitan Water Board and a joint water board constituted under the provisions of any Act of Parliament or Provisional Order;

(f) Any other local body which has, or may hereafter have, the power to make a rate.

The expression "rate" means a rate the proceeds of which are applicable to public local purposes, and leviable on the basis of an assessment in respect of property, and includes any sum which, though obtained in the first instance by a precept, certificate, or other document requiring payment from some authority or officer, is or can be ultimately raised out of a rate.

The expression "representatives of the press" means duly accredited representatives of newspapers and duly accredited representatives of news agencies which systematically carry on the business of selling and supplying reports and information to newspapers.

3. This Act shall not extend to any meeting of a committee of a local authority, as defined for the purposes of this Act, unless the committee is itself such an authority. Saving for committee meetings.

4. Nothing in this Act shall be construed so as to prohibit a committee of a local authority from admitting representatives of the press to its meetings. Powers of committee.

5. Nothing in this Act shall be construed so as to prohibit a local authority from admitting the public to its meetings. Admission of the public.

Section 6.

6. [Application to Scotland.]

Short title and extent.

7.—(1) This Act may be cited as the Local Authorities (Admission of the Press to Meetings) Act, 1908.

(2) This Act shall not extend to Ireland.

THE HOUSING, TOWN PLANNING, ETC. ACT, 1909.

(9 EDW. 7, c. 44.)

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Housing of the Working Classes, to provide for the making of Town Planning schemes, and to make further provision with respect to the appointment and duties of County Medical Officers of Health, and to provide for the establishment of Public Health and Housing Committees of County Councils.

[3rd December 1909.]

[In view of the possibility of a Bill for the consolidation of the Housing Acts being introduced and passed into law in the present (1922) Session of Parliament, it has been thought advisable to take out of Vol. I. this Act and also the Housing of the Working Classes Acts, 1890, 1894, 1900, and 1903; the Housing Act, 1914; the Housing (No. 2) Act, 1914; the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1919; the Housing (Additional Powers) Act, 1919; and the Housing Act, 1921. These Acts or the Consolidation Act (if any) which replaces them will be inserted in Vol. II.]

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT (ADJUSTMENTS) ACT, 1913 (a).

(3 & 4 GEO. 5, c. 19.)

An Act to extend and amend the Law relating to the Adjustment of Financial Relations between Local Government Areas on the Alteration of the Boundaries thereof or other change in relation to which the adjustment takes place. [15th August 1913.]

Amendment of law as to adjustments on alteration of local government boundaries, and extension of matters in respect of which adjustment may be made.

1.—(1) On any adjustment under section thirty-two or section sixty-two (b) of the Local Government Act, 1888, or under section sixty-eight (c) of the Local Government Act, 1894—

(a) Any adjustment of the Local Taxation Licences, the Estate Duty Grant, and the residue under section one of the Local Taxation (Customs and Excise) Act, 1890) (d), shall be carried out in accordance with the rules contained in Part I. of the Schedule to this Act:

(b) Provision shall be made for the payment to any authority of such sum as seems equitable in accordance with the rules contained in Part II. of the Schedule to this Act, in respect of any increase of burden which will properly be thrown on the ratepayers of the area of that authority in meeting the cost incurred by that authority in the execution of any of their powers and duties as a consequence of any alteration of boundaries or other change in relation to which the adjustment takes place (e). Section 1.

(2) This section shall apply to any adjustment made (otherwise than by agreement) under any of the said sections thirty-two and sixty-two of the Local Government Act, 1888, and sixty-eight of the Local Government Act, 1894, whether as originally enacted or as applied in England or Wales by any other Act, or by any Provisional Order, or by any order made or confirmed by the Local Government Board under the Local Government Act, 1888, or the Local Government Act, 1894, and consequent on an alteration of boundaries or other change effected after the passing of this Act.

(a) This Act does not apply to adjustments by agreement, but otherwise it applies (s. 1 (2)) to all future adjustments under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 32 (creation of new county boroughs), under ibid., s. 62 (alteration of areas), p. 775, ante, and under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 68 (alteration of areas), either as originally enacted or as applied by any other statute or Order. Its object was to give effect to the report of the Joint Committee on Financial Adjustments under the L. G. Acts; for the text of such Report see the annual volume on Local Government, 1911–12, p. 101. See also 75 J. P. N. 414, 427, and see also ibid., p. 421. Accordingly the Act provides for the apportionment of the Local Taxation Licences and Estate Duty Grant, etc. (as to these, see p. 754, ante), and it also modifies to a considerable extent the consequences of the decision in Caterham U. D. C. v. Godstone R. D. C., p. 776, ante; whilst not enabling an authority to claim compensation for loss of area as such, it provides for compensation in respect of any increased burden thrown upon the ratepayers in consequence of the alteration of area.

Reference should be made to the L. G. A., 1888, s. 62, and the L. G. A., 1894, s. 68; in the notes to the former section will be found collected the various cases decided prior to the passing of this Act.

(b) See this section and notes thereto, p. 775, ante.

(c) See this section and notes thereto, p. 980, ante.

(d) As to the revenues and grants for the apportionment of which s. 1 (1) (a), and Sched., Pt. I., make provision, see notes on pp. 754—756, ante.

(e) Section 1 (1) (b) and Sched., Pt. II., modify the effect of the decision in the Caterham Case, as to which see p. 776, ante.

2. This Act may be cited as the Local Government (Adjustments) Act, 1913. Short title.

SCHEDULE.

PART I.

RULES FOR DETERMINING ADJUSTMENT OF THE LOCAL TAXATION LICENCES, THE ESTATE DUTY GRANT, AND THE RESIDUE UNDER SECTION ONE OF THE LOCAL TAXATION (CUSTOMS AND EXCISE) ACT, 1890 (a).

(1) The portion of the Local Taxation Licences and Estate Duty Grant payable or estimated to be payable in respect of the area of the administrative county (b) as it existed immediately before the appointed day (b) shall after the appointed day be divided between the councils between which the adjustment is to be made, and the amount payable to each shall be apportioned on the following basis:

(a) There shall be apportioned to the council of the administrative county from which the area is severed amounts equal to the average annual amounts of the compulsory payments and transfers made by or on behalf of that council in accordance with section twenty-four (c) of the Local Government Act, 1888, in respect of the five years ending the thirty-first day of March preceding the appointed day, less the portions of such average annual amounts paid and transferred for and in respect of the separated area, and amounts equal to such last-mentioned portions shall be apportioned to the council of the other administrative county.

(b) Out of the balance (if any) of the said portion of the Local Taxation Licences and Estate Duty Grant there shall next be apportioned to the council of the administrative county from which the area is severed amounts equal to the average annual amounts of the compulsory payments made by or on behalf of that council in accordance with section twenty-six (d) of the Local Government Act, 1888, in respect of the five years ending the thirty-first day of March preceding the appointed day, less the portions of such average annual amounts paid for and in respect of the separated area, and amounts equal to such last-mentioned portions shall be apportioned to the council of the other administrative county.

(c) Out of the balance (if any) of the said portion of the Local Taxation Licences and Estate Duty Grant there shall next be apportioned to the council of the administrative county from which the area is severed a sum equal to one-half of the average annual cost during the five years preceding the appointed day of the maintenance of main roads within the county (including any payments made in respect of the interest on or of the repayment of the capital of loans raised on account of such main roads), after deducting the amount of one-half of such cost incurred in respect of main roads within the area separated from the county, and such last-mentioned amount shall be apportioned to the council of the other administrative county :

Provided that, if it appears that the council of the administrative county from which the area is severed have failed to declare any roads in the county to be main roads which ought to have been so declared, or have declared any roads to be main roads which ought not to have been so declared, proper adjustments shall be made in the calculation of the cost of maintenance of main roads in the county under this rule, by the inclusion of the cost of such roads as ought to have been declared to be main roads or the exclusion of the cost of such roads as ought not to have been declared to be main roads, as the case may require (aa) :

(d) If any balance of the Local Taxation Licences and Estate Duty Grant remains after apportioning between the two councils the sums ascertained in accordance with the foregoing rules, such balance shall be divided between the councils in proportion to the rateable values (b) on the appointed day of the administrative county from which the area is severed less that area, and of that area, respectively :

(e) If any difficulty arises in ascertaining for the purposes of paragraph (a) or paragraph (b) the portion of any item paid or transferred for and in respect of the separated area or any part thereof, a portion of that item proportionate to the rateable value at the commencement of the financial year in respect of which the payment or transfer was made of that area or part as compared with the rateable value of the whole area for and in respect of which the item was paid or transferred shall be deemed to have been paid or transferred for and in respect of the separated area :

(f) If the amount available for apportionment under any of the preceding paragraphs is insufficient to meet the whole of the amounts apportioned under the paragraph to the two administrative counties, those amounts shall be reduced proportionately.

(a) See note (d) on p. 1083, ante.

(aa) See with reference to this provision Glamorgan C. C. v. Cardiff Corporation, [1915] 3 K. B. 438 ; 79 J. P. 505.

(b) See definition in r. (3), infra.

(c) See this section, p. 754, ante.

(d) See this section, p. 758, ante.

(2) The residue under section one of the Local Taxation (Customs and Excise) Act, 1890, payable or estimated to be payable in respect of the area of the administrative county as it existed immediately before the appointed day shall, after the appointed day, be divided between the councils in proportion to the rateable values on the appointed day of the administrative county from which the area is severed less that area, and of that area, respectively.

(3) For the purposes of this Schedule, the expression " administrative county " includes a county borough, the expression " appointed day " means the day fixed for the transfer of the separated area from one administrative county to another, or, if the transfer is for the purposes of sections twenty to twenty-six of the Local Government Act, 1888, to be deemed to take effect at some later date, then such later date ; and the expression " rateable value " means (unless the parties to the adjustment otherwise agree) the rateable value as determined by the last valuation list, or if there is no valuation list, by the last poor rate.

PART II.

RULES FOR DETERMINING SUM TO BE PAID IN RESPECT OF INCREASE OF BURDEN ON RATEPAYERS (a).

(1) Regard shall be had to—

(a) The difference between the burden on the ratepayers which will properly be incurred by the authority in meeting the cost of executing any of their powers and duties and the burden on the ratepayers which would properly have been incurred by the authority in meeting such cost had no alteration of boundaries or other change taken place ;

(b) The length of time during which the increase of burden may be expected to continue :

Provided that no alteration of income in consequence of an apportionment under Part I. of the Schedule shall be taken into account.

(2) The sum payable to any authority in respect of the increase of burden shall not exceed, or, if payable by instalments or by way of annuity (b), the capitalised value of the instalments or annuity shall not exceed, the average annual increase of burden multiplied by fifteen.

Schedule.

(3) Any sum payable in respect of the cost of the maintenance of main roads shall be payable by way of annuity.

(a) See notes (a) and (e) on p. 1083, ante. On similar provisions in a Provisional Order Confirmation Act, it was held that where in consequence of an alteration of boundaries the council of the district from which a portion of its area has been taken has to levy an extra rate in the pound upon its ratepayers in order to carry out its duties, as, for example, in paying off a loan, there is an increase of burden within the meaning of the provisions, in respect of which there has to be an adjustment (Queenborough Corporation v. Sheppey R. D. C., [1915] 1 K. B. 356; 79 J. P. 155.

By Provisional Order confirmed by Act of Parliament, the city of Birmingham extended its boundaries so as to include certain adjoining Poor Law areas, which were to be unified and form a New Birmingham Union. Equitable adjustments were to be made between the New Birmingham Union on the one hand, and the Tamworth, Meriden, and Bromsgrove Unions on the other, and an arbitrator was appointed to adjust the financial relations between them. Article II. of the Provisional Order provided that "On any adjustment made otherwise than by agreement for the purposes of the Order or of the Confirming Act under s. 32 or s. 62 of the Local Government Act, 1888, or under either of those sections as modified or adapted by the Order—(a) Provision shall be made for the payment to any council or other authority affected by the Order of such sums as seems equitable in accordance with the rules contained in the First Schedule to this Order in respect of any increase of burden which will properly be thrown on the ratepayers of the area of that council or other authority in the execution of any of their powers and duties in consequence of any alteration of boundaries effected by the Order or other change in relation to which the adjustment takes place." Rule 1 of the First Schedule of the Order provided that "Regard shall be had to—(a) The difference between the burden on the ratepayers which will probably be incurred by the council or other authority affected by the Order in meeting the cost of executing any of their powers and duties, and the burden on the ratepayers which would properly have been incurred by that council or other authority in meeting such cost had no alterations of boundaries or other change taken place." The arbitrator had therefore to decide whether it was equitable to order the payment to the New Birmingham Union of any sum in respect of any increase of burden to be thrown on the ratepayers of the area of that authority. As to this the sole evidence provided for the arbitrator by the New Birmingham Union was evidence as to the amount which the parishes, severed from the union now amalgamated as the New Birmingham Union, contributed before the amalgamation to the unions of which they then formed part:—Held, that this was not evidence upon which the arbitrator could make an equitable adjustment as directed by the Provisional Order. It was not sufficient for the New Birmingham Union to say that whatever their present burden was it would be so much less if they had the contributions of the excluded parishes (Birmingham Union v. Tamworth Union (1916), 116 L. T. 342; 80 J. P. 425; 14 L. G. R. 826).

(b) Under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 62, a payment by way of adjustment may be made by way of a capital sum or of a terminal annuity.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (PREVENTION AND TREATMENT OF DISEASE) ACT, 1913.

(3 & 4 GEO. 5, c. 23.)

An Act to amend the Law relating to Public Health as respects the Prevention and Treatment of Disease. [15th August 1913.]

Exercise of powers by local authorities

1. Notwithstanding the provisions of section two hundred and eighty-one of the Public Health Act, 1875 (a), the Local Government Board may by order authorise a local authority having jurisdiction in any part of a united district to exercise in relation to that part any powers which the joint board are also authorised to exercise, subject, however, to such conditions and restrictions as may be imposed by the order. Section 1. —— within areas of joint boards.

(a) See this section, p. 617, ante; it created a difficulty by preventing (inter alia) a sanitary authority which was a constituent member of a joint hospital board from establishing a tuberculosis dispensary for their own district; s. 1 of the new Act gets rid of this difficulty. See also s. 5 of the Public Health (Tuberculosis) Act, 1921, post, p. 1116.

Throughout this Act it is now necessary to read the Ministry of Health for the L. G. B.

2. The Local Government Board shall have power to declare that one of the authorities to execute and enforce regulations made by the Board under section one hundred and thirty (a) of the Public Health Act, 1875, with a view to the treatment of persons affected with cholera or any other epidemic, endemic, or infectious disease, and preventing the spread of cholera and such other diseases, shall be the council of a county, and that section shall have effect accordingly as if a county council were an authority within the meaning of that section: Enforcement of epidemic diseases regulations by county councils.

Provided that, except in case of emergency, the Local Government Board shall not require the council of a county to execute and enforce any such regulations without the consent of such council.

(a) See this section, p. 237, ante. As county councils were unknown in 1875, it was at any rate doubtful whether such councils could be declared to be authorities for carrying into effect regulations made under s. 130, and distinct provision is now made upon the point.

3. It shall be lawful for the council of any county or for any sanitary authority to make any such arrangements as may be sanctioned by the Local Government Board for the treatment of tuberculosis: Provided that the power conferred by this section shall be in addition to and not in derogation of any other power. Treatment of tuberculosis.

See also the Public Health (Tuberculosis) Act, 1921 (11 & 12 Geo. 5, c. 12), post, p. 1114.

4. Any expenses incurred under this Act shall, in the case of a sanitary authority be defrayed as part of the expenses incurred by them in the execution of the Public Health Acts, and in the case of a county council as expenses for general county purposes, or, if the Local Government Board by order so direct, as expenses for special county purposes charged on such part of the county as may be provided by the order. Expenses.

5. This Act may be cited as the Public Health (Prevention and Treatment of Disease) Act, 1913. Short title.

THE PREVENTION OF CORRUPTION ACT, 1916.

(6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 64.)

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Prevention of Corruption (a).

[22nd December 1916.]

(a) This Act amends the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889, 52 & 53 Vict. c. 69, and the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, 6 Edw. 7, c. 34. The effect of the amendments will be found stated in the notes to these Acts, ante, pp. 794, 1014.

Section 1.

Increase of maximum penalty in certain cases. 6 Edw. 7, c. 34. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 69.

1. A person convicted on indictment of a misdemeanour under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, or the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889, shall, where the matter or transaction in relation to which the offence was committed was a contract or a proposal for a contract with His Majesty or any Government Department or any public body (b), or a subcontract to execute any work comprised in such a contract, be liable to penal servitude for a term not exceeding seven nor less than three years :

Provided that nothing in this section shall prevent the infliction in addition to penal servitude of such punishment as under the above-mentioned Acts may be inflicted in addition to imprisonment, or prevent the infliction in lieu of penal servitude of any punishment which may be inflicted under the said Acts.

(b) See s. 4 (2), infra.

Presumption of corruption in certain cases.

2. Where in any proceedings against a person for an offence under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, or the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889, it is proved that any money, gift, or other consideration has been paid or given to or received by a person in the employment of His Majesty or any Government Department or a public body by or from a person, or agent of a person (c), holding or seeking to obtain a contract from His Majesty or any Government Department or public body (b), the money, gift, or consideration shall be deemed to have been paid or given and received corruptly as such inducement or reward as is mentioned in such Act unless the contrary is proved.

(b) See s. 4 (2), infra.
(c) See s. 4 (3), infra.

Time for taking proceedings.

3. Notwithstanding anything in the Summary Jurisdiction Acts proceedings under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, instituted with a view to obtaining a summary conviction for an offence thereunder may be commenced at any time before the expiration of six months after the first discovery of the offence by the prosecutor.

Short title and interpretation.

4.—(1) This Act may be cited as the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1916, and the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889, the Prevention Act, 1906, and this Act may be cited together as the Prevention of Corruption Acts, 1889 to 1916.

(2) In this Act and in the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889, the expression " public body " includes, in addition to the bodies mentioned in the last-mentioned Act, local and public authorities of all descriptions (d).

(d) In the Act of 1889, the expression " public body " is defined to mean any council of a county or county of a city or town, any council of a municipal borough, also any board, commissioners, select vestry, or other body which has power to act under and for the purposes of any Act relating to local government or the public health, or to poor law, or otherwise to administer money raised by rates in pursuance of any public general Act, but does not include any public body existing elsewhere than in the United Kingdom.

(3) A person serving under any such public body is an agent within the meaning of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, and the expressions " agent " and " consideration " in this Act have the same meaning as in the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1906, as amended by this Act (e). Section 4.

(e) In the Act of 1906, ante, p. 1016, the expression " agent " is defined to include a person serving under the Crown or under any corporation or any municipal borough, county or district council or any board of guardians. It also includes any person employed by or acting for another. And the expression " consideration " includes valuable consideration of any kind.

THE PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND BODIES (LOANS) ACT, 1916.

(6 & 7 GEO. 5, c. 69.)

An Act to make further provision with respect to the borrowing powers of councils of counties and of municipal boroughs, and of other public authorities and bodies. [22nd December 1916.]

1.—(1) The council of any county or of any municipal borough or of any urban district may, during the continuance of the present war and a period of six months thereafter (a), borrow, with the consent of the appropriate Government Department, on the security of all or any of the funds, property, or revenues of the council for the purpose of discharging any outstanding loan of the council, or for the purpose or replacing any sinking fund money or other sums which have been used for purposes for which they had power to borrow, or for the purpose of raising any further sums which the appropriate Government Department authorise them to raise with a view to prospective capital expenditure. Further power of county or borough councils, etc. to borrow.

The application and use of any sums borrowed under this provision shall be subject to such conditions as may be imposed by the appropriate Government Department whose consent is given to the borrowing.

(a) This power was temporary and expired on 28th February, 1922. But see sub-s. (3), infra, as to re-borrowing.

(2) During the continuance of the present war, and a period of six months thereafter (b), the council of any county or municipal borough or of any urban district may, with the consent of the Treasury and subject to such conditions as the Treasury may impose, borrow any sums which they have power to borrow for the time being by means of the issue of bearer bonds or other securities to bearer, whether within or without the United Kingdom, and, if thought fit, in any foreign currency.

Any such bonds or securities shall rank, as respects other securities issued by the council, in the same manner as if the sum borrowed by means of those bonds or other securities had been borrowed by means of the issue of stock (c).

(b) The words in italics were repealed and the powers conferred by this sub-section were made permanent by the Housing (Additional Powers) Act, 1919, 9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 99, s. 8. Reference may be made to the Finance Act, 1916, 6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 24, s. 63, which provides that any securities issued in the United States by a municipal corporation, county council or other local authority in the United Kingdom for the purpose of raising any money which they are authorised to borrow, if issued under the authority of the Treasury, shall not be liable to any taxation present or future, except where they are held by persons domiciled in the United Kingdom or by British subjects ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom.

(c) As to the ranking of stock, see the Stock Regulations in App. II., post, Vol. II.

(3) The council of any county or of any municipal borough or of any urban district may re-borrow under the powers given by this Act for the purpose of paying off any money borrowed under those powers; and the limitation on the exercise of those powers to the continuance of the present war and a period of six months thereafter shall not apply to any such re-borrowing.

(4) Any power given by this section shall not derogate from any other power of borrowing, and may be exercised notwithstanding anything in any Act.

Extent, interpretation, and short title.

2.—(1) This Act may be applied to any local authority (other than the council of a county or of a municipal borough or of any urban district), and to any other public body on the application of that authority or body, by the appropriate Government Department; and if so applied, shall be construed, with any necessary modification, as if the authority or body to whom it is applied were substituted for the council of the county or of the municipal borough or urban district.

(2) In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires,—

The expression "appropriate Government Department" means, in the case of the London County Council the Treasury, in the case of other authorities or bodies in England and Wales the Local Government Board (d), in the case of authorities or bodies in Scotland the Secretary for Scotland, and in the case of authorities or bodies in Ireland the Local Government Board for Ireland;

The expression "sinking fund money" means money for the time being standing to the credit of any sinking fund, redemption fund, depreciation fund, or fund of a like nature; and

The expression "municipal borough" means, in the application of this Act to Scotland, a royal, parliamentary, or police burgh.

(d) For "Local Government Board" now read "Minister of Health" (9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 21).

(3) This Act may be cited as the Public Authorities and Bodies (Loans) Act, 1916.

THE FINANCE ACT, 1917.

(7 & 8 GEO. 5, c. 31.)

An Act to grant certain duties of Customs and Inland Revenue (including Excise), to alter other duties, and to amend the Law relating to Customs and Inland Revenue (including Excise) and the National Debt, and to make further provision in connection with Finance.

Power of trustees, etc. to borrow and invest in war securities.

35.—(1) It shall be lawful and shall be deemed always to have been lawful for a trustee to borrow for the purpose of subscribing to or investing in any securities which have been or may be issued in connection with any Government loan raised for the purpose of the present war, and a trustee shall not be liable for any loss resulting from any borrowing so authorised or from any subscription to or investment in such securities or the sale of any securities for the purpose of such subscription or investment, or from the exercise of any option to convert any securities into securities so issued, whether such borrowing, subscription, investment or sale, or the exercise of such option, was before or after the passing of this Act; and trustees and other persons acting in any fiduciary character are hereby expressly authorised to exercise without the consent of any other person, such powers of borrowing, subscription, investment, sale, or conversion, notwithstanding anything in any instrument creating the trust:

Provided that—

(a) In the case of transactions after the passing of this Act, a trustee shall before borrowing for the purpose aforesaid give notice of his intention so to do to the persons for the time being beneficially entitled to the income of the trust fund and the amount borrowed shall not exceed the value for the time being of the trust fund;

(b) For the purpose of transactions after the passing of this Act the power to borrow for the purpose of investing in any such securities shall be deemed not to include a power to borrow for the purpose of purchasing any such securities at any time after the subscription list has been closed, or, in the case of any such securities which are issued on application from day to day, after the issue thereof has been discontinued.

(2) This section shall apply to any officer or department who hold funds on account of or for the benefit of any persons or class of persons as part of, or in consequence of, the duties of the officer or department, but shall not apply to any trustee under an implied or constructive trust, except a resulting trust arising on the determination or failure of an express trust.

(3) The foregoing provisions of this section, so far as they relate to the exercise of such powers as aforesaid before the passing of this Act, shall apply to local and other public authorities, notwithstanding any limitations on their powers, in like manner as they apply to trustees.

(4) It is hereby declared that the power conferred by subsection (6) of section one of the War Loan Act, 1916, on companies and bodies of persons and persons responsible for the direction and management of a company or body of persons to hold government securities purchased in pursuance of the powers conferred by that subsection is not limited to the continuance of the present war and a period of twelve months thereafter.

The powers conferred by the said subsection shall include, and shall be deemed as from the commencement of the war to have included, a power on the part of a company or body of persons and of persons responsible for the direction or management of the company or body to borrow, notwithstanding any such limitations as are mentioned in that subsection, for the purpose of investing in or purchasing Government securities in accordance with that subsection.

The securities in which local authorities can invest money for the purpose of a loans fund or a sinking fund are enumerated in the note to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 234. Under this Act an investment in war securities made prior to the passing of the Act was legalised.

Section 3.

(a) Only those portions of this Act which affect local authorities are included in this work. Reference should be made to the Ministry of Health (Registration and Elections, Transfer of Powers) Order, 1921, in the Appendix, post, Vol. II., for the transfer of powers under this Act from the Minister of Health (as successor to the L. G. B.) to the Secretary of State.

(b) See ss. 6 and 7 (4), post, pp. 1093, 1094.

(c) As to the difference between an occupier and a lodger, see the cases cited in the note to s. 90 of the P. H. Act, 1875, ante, p. 161.

Local government franchise (women).

4. . . .

(3) A woman shall be entitled to be registered as a local government elector for any local government electoral area (a)—

(b) where she is the wife of a man who is entitled to be so registered in respect of premises in which they both reside, and she has attained the age of thirty years and is not subject to any legal incapacity.

For the purpose of this provision, a naval or military voter who is registered in respect of a residence qualification which he would have had but for his service, shall be deemed to be resident in accordance with the qualification.

(a) These dates now read "15 December" and "15 June" respectively (12 & 13 Geo. 5, c. 12, s. 1 and Sched. Pt. I.).

(a) See as to this expression s. 41 (2), post, p. 1109.
(b) See the next section as to disqualifications for voting.

. . . . . .

Provisions as to disqualifications.

9.—(1) A person shall not be disqualified from being registered or from voting as a parliamentary or local government elector by reason that he or some person for whose maintenance he is responsible has received poor relief or other alms (a).

(a) The statutes imposing disqualifications of this nature (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 36; 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 40; 39 & 40 Vict. c. 61, s. 14) are repealed by this Act.

(2) Any person, being a conscientious objector to whom this subsection applies, shall be disqualified during the continuance of the war and a period of five years thereafter from being registered or voting as a parliamentary or local government elector, unless, before the expiration of one year after the termination of the war, he proves to the central tribunal as established for the purposes of the Military Service Act, 1916—

5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 104.

(a) that he has during the continuance of the war taken up and, so far as reasonably practicable, continued service which constitutes a person (other than a person serving on full pay as a member of any of the naval, military, or air forces of the Crown) a naval or military voter for the purposes of this Act; or

(b) that having been exempted from military service on condition of doing work of national importance he has done such work in accordance with the decision and to the satisfaction of the appropriate tribunal or authority; or

(c) that having obtained an absolute exemption from military service without any such condition, he has nevertheless (whether before or after the passing of this Act) been engaged in and, so far as reasonably practicable, continued some work of national importance; and obtains a certificate from the central tribunal to that effect.

This subsection shall apply to a conscientious objector who either—

(i) has been exempted from all military service (including non-combatant service) on the ground of conscientious objection; or

(ii) having been convicted by court martial of an offence against military law, and having represented that the offence was the result of conscientious objection to military service, has been awarded imprisonment or detention.

Section 9.

The central tribunal established under the Military Service Act, 1916, shall be continued for the purpose of this subsection for a period of a year after the termination of the present war.

If a person disqualified under this subsection would have been entitled to be registered as a parliamentary or local government elector but for that disqualification, the disqualification shall not extend so as to affect the right of the wife of that person to be registered or vote as a parliamentary or local government elector, as the case may be.

(3) A person shall not be entitled to be registered or to vote as a parliamentary or local government elector if he is not a British subject, and nothing contained in this Act shall, except as expressly provided therein, confer on any person who is subject to any legal incapacity to be registered or to vote either as a parliamentary or local government elector any right to be so registered or to vote.

(4) A person shall not be disqualified from voting at any election as a parliamentary or local government elector by reason that he is employed for payment by or on behalf of a candidate at such election, so long as the employment is legal.

(5) Any incapacity of a peer to vote at an election arising from the status of a peer (b) shall not extend to peeresses in their own right.

(b) A peer cannot vote at a parliamentary election (Earl Beauchamp v. Madresfield Overseers (1872), L. R. 8 C. P. 245; 42 L. J. C. P. 32; Mackenzie and Lushington's Registration Manual, p. 297).

Provision as to qualification of councillor.

10. A person shall, in addition to and without prejudice to any other qualification, be qualified to be elected a member of the local government authority for any local government electoral area (a) if he is the owner of property held by freehold, copyhold, leasehold or any other tenure within the area of that authority (b).

(a) See as to this expression s. 41 (2), post, p. 1100.

(b) This provision enables an owner of property to be elected though he may not be entitled to be registered as an elector.

PART II.

REGISTRATION.

Spring and autumn registers.

11.—(1) Two registers of electors shall be prepared in every year, of which one (in this Act referred to as the spring register) shall be made for the qualifying period ending on the fifteenth day of January (a), and the other (in this Act referred to as the autumn register) shall be made for the qualifying period ending on the fifteenth day of July (a).

(2) The spring register shall come into force on the commencement of the fifteenth day of April and remain in force until the fifteenth day of October, and the autumn register shall come into force on the commencement of the fifteenth day of October and remain in force until the fifteenth day of April.

(a) See note (a) to s. 6, ante, p. 1093.

(3) If for any reason the registration officer fails to compile a fresh spring or autumn register for his area or any part of his area, the register in force at the time when the fresh register should have come into force shall continue to operate as the register for the area or part of an area in respect of which default has been made.

Section 12. — Registration officers and areas.

12.—(1) Each parliamentary borough and each parliamentary county shall be a registration area, and there shall be a registration officer for each registration area.

(2) Where the registration area is a parliamentary county and is coterminous with, or wholly contained in, one administrative county, the clerk of the county council, and where the registration area is a parliamentary borough and is coterminous with, or wholly contained in, one municipal borough, the town clerk of the borough, shall be the registration officer for the area.

In any other case such clerk of the county council, or town clerk, shall be registration officer for the area as the Local Government Board (a) may by order direct, subject to any conditions which may be made by the order as to the appointment of deputies for any part of the area.

See the special provisions as to urban districts and London contained in s. 16, post, p. 1098.

(a) Throughout this Act for "Local Government Board" must now be read "Ministry of Health."

(3) Any of the duties and powers of the registration officer may be performed and exercised by any deputy for the time being approved by the Local Government Board, and the provisions of this Act shall apply to any such deputy so far as respects any duties or powers to be performed or exercised by him as it applies to the registration officer.

(4) In the event of any vacancy in the office of any clerk of the county council or town clerk who is a registration officer, or in the event of his incapacity to act, any acts authorised or required to be done by or with respect to the registration officer may be done by or with respect to any person temporarily appointed in that behalf by the chairman of the county council or the mayor, as the case may be.

Registration duties.

13.—(1) It shall be the duty of the registration officer to compile the spring and autumn register, and to place, or cause to be placed, on the register in accordance with the rules set out in the First Schedule to this Act the names of those entitled to vote as parliamentary electors or local government electors in his registration area, and to comply with any general or special directions which may be given by the Local Government Board with respect to the arrangements to be made by the registration officer for carrying out his duties as to registration.

If a registration officer refuses, neglects or fails without reasonable cause to perform any of his duties in connection with registration, he shall be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds.

(2) His Majesty may by Order in Council prescribe the forms to be used for registration purposes and any fees to be taken in connection therewith, and alter the rules contained in the First Schedule to this Act for the purpose of carrying this Act into full effect, or for carrying into effect any Act for the time being in force amending or affecting this Act.

The rules contained in the First Schedule to this Act and any Order so made shall have effect as if enacted in this Act (a).

(a) See as to the effect of this provision Ex parte Ringer and the other cases cited therewith in the note under s. 295 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 629.

Section 14. Appeals.

14.—(1) An appeal shall lie to the county court, as defined by rules of court (a), from any decision of the registration officer on any claim or objection which has been considered by him under this Act, or the placing of or refusal to place any mark against any name on the register, and rules of court (a) shall be made for the purpose of determining the procedure on any such appeals and for applying and adapting thereto any enactments relating to county courts and the procedure therein :

Provided that an appeal shall not lie where a claimant or objector has not availed himself of his opportunity, as provided in the First schedule to this Act, of being heard by the registration officer on the claim or objection, or as to the placing of or refusing to place any such mark as aforesaid.

(a) See the County Court (Registration Appeals) Rules, S. R. & O., 1918, No. 802, L. 27, and amended Rules, S. R. & O., 1919, No. 162, L. 2.

(2) An appeal shall lie on any point of law from any decision of the county court on any such appeal from the registration officer in accordance with rules of the Supreme Court to the Court of Appeal, but no appeal shall lie from the decision of the Court of Appeal.

See the Registration Appeals Rule, 1918, Rules of the Supreme Court, O. 58, r. 21.

(3) The right of voting of any person whose name is for the time being on the register shall not be prejudiced by any appeal pending under this section, and any vote given in pursuance of that right shall be as good as if no such appeal were pending, and shall not be affected by the subsequent decision of the appeal.

(4) Notice shall be sent to the registration officer in manner provided by rules of court of the decision of the county court or of the Court of Appeal on any appeal under this section, and the registration officer shall make such alterations in the electors lists or register as may be required to give effect to the decision.

(5) On any appeal under this section the registration officer shall be deemed to be a party to the proceedings.

(6) If the Lord Chancellor is satisfied on the representation of the judge of any county court that the judge is unable, owing to the necessity of dealing with appeals under this Act, to transact the business of the court with proper despatch, the Lord Chancellor may appoint a barrister of at least seven years' standing to act as assistant judge for such time as the Lord Chancellor may direct, and subject to any conditions which he may impose.

Any assistant judge so appointed shall have all the powers and privileges and may perform any of the duties of the judge, whether under this Act or otherwise, to whom he has been appointed assistant.

An assistant judge shall be paid out of moneys provided by Parliament such remuneration and travelling allowances as may be allowed by the Treasury.

In the application of this provision to a county court district the whole of which is within the Duchy of Lancaster, the Chancellor of the Duchy shall be substituted for the Lord Chancellor.

Expenses of registration.

the overseers in connection with the registration of electors; and in sections thirty-nine, sixty-eight and sixty-nine of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, "registration officer" means the registration officer under this Act. Schedule 6. Section 4.

5. Subsection (4) of section forty of the Local Government Act, 1888, shall have effect as if the words "for the time being" were substituted for the words "at the passing of this Act"; and, in order to meet any difficulty (consequent on the change of boundaries under this provision) in filling casual vacancies by election in the London County Council, any such casual vacancy shall, until the first election of the whole number of councillors which takes place after the passing of this Act, be filled by means of the choice by the Council of a person to fill the vacancy, and the councillor so chosen shall hold office in such manner and in all respects as if he had been elected to fill the vacancy.

6. Sections eleven and thirteen and (so far as necessary) section twelve of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878, shall be adapted so as to be applicable to parishes situated in any constituency or in any local government area, and for that purpose "constituency" shall be substituted in those sections for "parliamentary borough," "local government area" for "municipal borough," and "registered as a local government elector" for "enrolled as a burgess."

7. The Local Government Board may, by order, make such further adaptations in the provisions of any Act (including any local Act and any Act to confirm a Provisional Order and any scheme under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, as amended by any subsequent Act) as may seem to them necessary to make those provisions conform with the provisions of this Act; and any order so made shall operate as if enacted in this Act.

ECCLESIASTICAL TITHE RENTCHARGE (RATES) ACT, 1920.

(10 & 11 GEO. 5, c. 22.)

An Act to reduce temporarily the rates payable in respect of Ecclesiastical Tithe Rentcharge. [4th August 1920.]

Partial relief of ecclesiastical tithe rentcharge from rates.

1.—(1) The owner of the tithe rentcharge (a) attached to an ecclesiastical corporation (a) or benefice (a) shall not be liable to pay, in respect of any rate (a) made on or after the first day of April nineteen hundred and twenty, and before the first day of January nineteen hundred and twenty-six (b), which is assessed on him as owner of that tithe rentcharge, an amount in excess of such an amount as would have been payable by him if the rate had been made at such amount in the pound as is equal to the amount in the pound (to be ascertained in accordance with the rules set out in the Schedule to this Act) at which the corresponding rate was made in the year nineteen hundred and eighteen, and the excess shall be deemed to be recoverable.

A Circular and Memorandum of the M. of H. in the Appendix, post, Vol. II., which explain the Act, may be consulted with advantage.

(a) See the definition in sub-s. 5.

(b) Note that the relief afforded is only temporary in character.

(2) Where the owner of tithe rentcharge attached to a benefice, before payment of the amount payable by him in respect of any such rate as aforesaid, produces to the collector of the rate a statutory declaration made by him in a form prescribed by the Minister of Health (a), showing that the total income arising from the benefice (b) for the year ending on the fifth day of April preceding the date at which the rate was made, estimated in accordance with the provisions of the Income Tax Acts, did not exceed three hundred pounds, or, if it exceeded that sum, did not exceed five hundred pounds, the owner shall be entitled to such relief or abatement in respect of such rate as follows, that is to say, if the total income arising from the benefice did not exceed three hundred pounds the owner shall not be liable to any payment in respect of the rate, and if it exceeded that sum, but did not exceed five hundred pounds the owner shall be allowed an abatement of one-half of the amount which would otherwise be payable by him in respect of the rate having regard to the preceding provisions; and the amount of any relief or abatement in respect of a rate given by this section shall be deemed to be irrecoverable. Section 1.

A statutory declaration made for the purpose of this section shall be exempt from stamp duty.

(a) See the Ecclesiastical Tithe Rentcharge (Form of Statutory Declaration) Orders, 1920 and 1921, in the Appendix.

(b) It has been held that "the total income arising from the benefice" means the total income arising to the incumbent, and that, therefore, when the owner of the benefice is bound to pay certain annual sums to the vicars of other parishes and to the late incumbent of the benefice, he is entitled to deduct such sums in making his statutory declaration of the total income (R. v. Latchingdon Overseers (1921), 86 J. P. 43).

Where benefices have been united under s. 16 of the Pluralities Act, 1838, the income from each benefice is separately rateable and relief may be granted under this section in respect of each benefice, though the income from both together may exceed the amount in the section (Keane v. Ashbocking Overseers, [1922] 1 K. B. 143; 85 J. P. 270).

(3) Nothing in this Act shall affect the allowance to be made in respect of rates in the assessment of tithe rentcharge for any rate or tax.

(4) Any amount paid by the owner of tithe rentcharge in respect of any rate to which this Act applies in excess of the amount which he is by virtue of this Act liable to pay shall be recoverable on demand made within six months after the passing of this Act as a debt due to him by the collector of the rate, and such amount shall be so recoverable notwithstanding that the statutory declaration required by this Act to entitle the owner to exemption or relief was not produced to the collector of the rate before payment of the rate if such declaration is so produced on or before the demand for repayment.

(5) In this Act the expression "ecclesiastical corporation" has the same meaning as in the Episcopal and Capitular Estates Act, 1851; the expressions "benefice" and "owner of tithe rentcharge" and "tithe rentcharge" have the same meanings as in the Tithe Rentcharge (Rates) Act, 1899; and the expression "rate" means a rate the proceeds of which are applicable to public local purposes and which is leviable on the basis of an assessment in respect of the yearly value of property. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104. 62 & 63 Vict. c. 17.

2. This Act may be cited as the Ecclesiastical Tithe Rentcharge (Rates) Act, 1920. Short title.

SCHEDULE. Section 1.

RULES FOR DETERMINING AMOUNT IN THE POUND OF CORRESPONDING RATE.

(1) Where a rate (hereinafter referred to as "a current rate") is made in respect of any yearly, half-yearly, or other period, and a corresponding rate in the year nineteen hundred and eighteen (hereinafter referred to as "the standard rate") was made in respect of the like period, the amount in the pound of the standard rate shall, for the purposes of this Act, be treated as the amount in the pound at which the corresponding rate was made.

Schedule. —

(2) Where a current rate is made in respect of any yearly, half yearly, or other period, and the standard rate was made in respect of a shorter or longer period, then—

(a) in the former case, the aggregate of the amounts in the pound of the standard rates made in respect of the periods covered by the period in respect of which the current rate is made shall, for the purposes of this Act, be treated as the rate in the pound at which the corresponding rate was made;

(b) in the latter case, such part of the amount in the pound of the standard rate as bears to the whole of that amount the same proportion as the period in respect of which the current rate is made bears to the period in respect of which the standard rate was made shall, for the purposes of this Act, be treated as the rate in the pound at which the corresponding rate was made.

(3) If by reason of the constitution or extension of a borough or urban district, the consolidation of rates, or other change of circumstances any question arises as to the rate to which a current rate corresponds, the question shall be determined in accordance with any general or special regulations which the Minister of Health may make for the purpose (a), and such regulations may provide for the manner in which, in cases to which the regulations apply, the rate in the pound of the corresponding rate is to be calculated, and for a rate being treated as two or more rates according to the purposes for which it was levied, and for making adjustments when the proportion of the rateable value on which tithe rentcharge is assessed to a current rate differs from the proportion on which it was assessed to the standard rate, or when any other circumstances render such adjustment necessary.

(a) Regulations were made by the M. of H. by Order dated August 5th, 1920. See the Order in the Appendix, post, Vol. II.

(4) Where in the year nineteen hundred and eighteen no rate was made which corresponds to or under regulations made as aforesaid is deemed to correspond to a current rate, the amount in the pound at which the corresponding rate was made in that year shall, for the purposes of this Act, be treated as nil.

PUBLIC HEALTH (TUBERCULOSIS) ACT, 1921.

(11 & 12 GEO. 5, c. 12.)

An Act to make further provision with respect to arrangements by local authorities for the treatment of tuberculosis (a). [12th May 1921.]

(a) The effect of the National Health Insurance Act, 1920, was to take away from the Insurance Committees the responsibility of providing institutional treatment for tuberculous insured persons as from 30th April, 1921, the date when sanatorium benefit ceased, and it was considered to be essential that provision should be made for continuing the treatment without break. County and county borough councils, with very few exceptions, had at the date of the passing of this Act already made arrangements for the institutional treatment of tuberculous persons in their areas, whether insured or non-insured. These arrangements were made in accordance with schemes or agreements approved by the M. of H. or his predecessors. Section 1 (1) of this Act provides that councils which have made such arrangements and which continue them shall, for the purposes of the Act, be deemed to have made adequate arrangements for the treatment of tuberculosis.

Those councils who had not made arrangements for the general institutional treatment of tuberculosis are required by s. 1 (2) to make adequate arrangements to that end. In default, the Minister is empowered to act himself at the cost of a defaulting council. Note.

Further provision with respect to arrangements for treatment.

1.—(1) Where the council of any county or county borough has, before the passing of this Act, made arrangements for the treatment of persons suffering from tuberculosis (including persons insured under the National Health Insurance Acts, 1911 to 1920) at or in dispensaries, sanatoria, and other institutions in accordance with a scheme approved by the Local Government Board or the Minister of Health, that council shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to have made adequate arrangements for the treatment of tuberculosis so long as such scheme, with such modifications, if any, as the Minister may on the application of the council from time to time approve, continues in operation.

In the application of this subsection to Wales an agreement made with the King Edward the Seventh Welsh National Memorial Association, and approved by the Welsh Insurance Commissioners or the Minister of Health, shall be treated as equivalent to a scheme approved by the Minister of Health, and an application made by that association with the approval of a council shall be deemed to be an application of the council.

(2) Where the council of any county or county borough fails to make adequate arrangements for the treatment of tuberculosis at or in dispensaries, sanatoria, and other institutions approved by the Minister, the Minister may, after giving the council an opportunity of being heard, make such arrangements as he may think necessary for the purpose of such treatment.

Any expenses incurred by the Minister in arranging for such treatment may be paid in the first instance by the Minister out of moneys provided by Parliament, and the amount of any expenses certified by the Minister to have been so incurred shall be paid to the Minister on demand by the council and shall be recoverable as a debt due to the Crown.

This subsection shall not apply in the case of any council which at the date of the passing of this Act is deemed to have made adequate arrangements as aforesaid and which fails to continue to make such arrangements by reason only of the withdrawal of, or diminution in the rate of, the contributions made from the Exchequer before the passing of this Act to the councils of counties and county boroughs in aid of the treatment of tuberculosis.

After-care by councils of counties and county boroughs.

1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 55.

2. Without prejudice and in addition to any other power, whether under this or any other Act, every council of a county or county borough shall have power to make such arrangements as they may think desirable for the after-care of persons who have suffered from tuberculosis (including persons for the time being insured under the National Insurance Act, 1911, as amended or extended by any past or future enactment), and the provisions of this Act relating to committees and joint committees shall extend accordingly as though in those provisions the expression "treatment of tuberculosis" included such after-care.

Approval of institutions.

3. Any approval by the Minister of Health of an institution for the treatment of tuberculosis may be given for such time and subject to such conditions as the Minister may think fit, and the Minister shall have power to withdraw any such approval.

Power to act through committees.

4. The powers of a county or county borough council in relation to the treatment of tuberculosis (other than the power of raising a rate or of borrowing money) may be exercised through a committee of the council or through a sub-committee or any committee, and the council and, subject to any directions of the council, the committee may appoint as members of the committee or sub-committee, as the case may be, persons (including members of insurance committees) who are not members of the council, being persons specially qualified by training or experience in matters relating to the treatment of tuberculosis, but not less than two-thirds of the members of such committee or sub-committee shall consist of members of the council.

Joint committees.

5.—(1) For the purpose of facilitating co-operation between county councils and county borough councils in the exercise of the powers conferred upon them by any enactment to make arrangements for the treatment of tuberculosis, the Minister may by order, with the consent of the councils concerned, make such provision as appears to him necessary or expedient, by the constitution of joint committees or otherwise, for the joint exercise by such councils of all or any of their powers in relation thereto, and any such order may provide how, in what proportions, and out of what funds or rates, the expenses incurred by such councils are to be defrayed, and may contain such consequential, incidental, and supplemental provisions as may appear necessary for the purposes of the order.

(2) Every such joint committee shall be a body corporate by such name as the order constituting the committee may direct, and shall have perpetual succession and a common seal, and may hold land for the purpose of their powers and duties without licence in mortmain.

(3) Any joint committee constituted under any enactment repealed by this Act shall continue in existence and have all the powers which may be exercised by any joint committee constituted under this section, and any order constituting such joint committee shall continue in force and have effect accordingly.

Powers of Metropolitan Asylums Board.

6. The managers of the Metropolitan Asylums District may, with the approval of the Minister of Health, enter into agreements with the council of any county or county borough for the reception of persons suffering from tuberculosis in hospitals or sanatoria provided by the managers.

Further provision with respect

7.—(1) The Minister may by order constitute an advisory committee for the purpose of assisting the council of any county or county borough in making arrangements for the treatment of any persons suffering from tuberculosis who are masters, seamen, or apprentices to the sea service or the sea-fishing service. Section 7. — to treatment of seamen.

(2) An order under this section may provide—

(a) For the representation on the said committee of any society approved under the National Health Insurance Acts, 1911 to 1920, more than three-fourths of whose members are such masters, seamen and apprentices as aforesaid, and of the council of any county or county borough having a substantial number of such masters, seamen, and apprentices resident within their area, and may contain such other provisions as may appear necessary to the Minister for giving effect to the order; and

(b) If the governing body constituted under subsection (6) of section forty-eight of the National Insurance Act, 1911, as amended by section twenty-seven of the National Health Insurance Act, 1918, agree to contribute, out of the special fund referred to in the said subsection (6), towards the expenses of the said committee, for the appointment by the governing body aforesaid from among their own members of the representatives on the said committee of all such societies as aforesaid. 7 & 8 Geo. 5, c. 62.

(3) An order made under this section may be revoked or varied by another order so made.

8.—(1) Any expenses incurred under this Act by a county council shall be defrayed as expenses for general county purposes, or, if the Minister of Health by order so directs, as expenses for special county purposes charged on such part of the county as may be provided by the order. Expenses.

(2) Any expenses incurred under this Act by the council of a county borough shall be defrayed as part of the expenses of the council in the execution of the Public Health Acts, 1875 to 1908.

9.—(1) This Act may be cited as the Public Health (Tuberculosis) Act, 1921. Short title, repeal, and application.

(2) The enactments specified in the second column of the Schedule to this Act are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the third column of that schedule.

(3) This Act shall not apply to Scotland or Ireland.

SCHEDULE. Section 9.

Session and Chapter.	Short Title.	Extent of Repeal.
1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 55.	National Insurance Act, 1911.	Subsection (3) of section sixty-four.
6 & 7 Geo. 5, c. 12.	Local Government (Emergency Provisions) Act, 1916.	Section sixteen.

Section 1.

PUBLIC HEALTH (OFFICERS) ACT, 1921.

(11 & 12 GEO. 5, c. 23.)

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Appointment and Tenure of Office of Medical Officers of Health, Sanitary Inspectors, and Inspectors of Nuisances, and for other purposes. [28th July 1921.]

Tenure of office of medical officer of health.

1. In cases to which this section applies, the medical officer of health of a local authority who by the terms of his appointment is restricted from engaging in private practice as a medical practitioner shall not be appointed for a limited period only and shall be removable by the authority with the consent of the Minister of Health or by the Minister and not otherwise.

This section applies to—

(a) the medical officer of health of a county borough where any portion of the salary of the medical officer was paid out of moneys voted by Parliament before it was constituted a county borough ;

(b) the medical officer of health of a county district any portion of whose salary is paid out of the county fund of the county in which the district is situate and charged to the Exchequer contribution account.

The provisions of this section relating to removal from office apply to medical officers whether appointed before or after the commencement of this Act (see s. 5).

Tenure of office and appointment of sanitary inspectors.

2.—(1) In cases to which this subsection applies, the sanitary inspector of a local authority who is required by the terms of his appointment to devote the whole of his time to the duties of his office or to the duties of that office and of any other office or offices held by him under any local or public authority, shall not be appointed for a limited period only and shall be removable by the authority with the consent of the Minister of Health or by the Minister and not otherwise.

This subsection applies to—

(a) the sanitary inspector of a county borough where any portion of the salary of the sanitary inspector was paid out of moneys voted by Parliament before it was constituted a county borough ;

(b) the sanitary inspector of a county district any portion of whose salary is paid out of the county fund of the county in which the district is situate and charged to the Exchequer contribution account ;

Provided that, where more than one sanitary inspector is appointed by a local authority, the foregoing paragraphs (a) and (b) of this subsection shall apply only to the senior sanitary inspector as determined by the local authority.

The provisions of this sub-section relating to removal from office apply to sanitary inspectors whether appointed before or after the commencement of this Act (see s. 5).

(2) An urban sanitary authority shall have power to appoint two or more sanitary inspectors. Section 2.

The generally accepted view was that under s. 189 of the P. H. Act, 1875, only one sanitary inspector could be appointed, although an urban authority might appoint assistant inspectors.

3.—(1) In this Act the expression "sanitary inspector" includes an inspector of nuisances appointed under the Public Health Act, 1875, and an inspector of nuisances shall henceforth be designated a sanitary inspector. Definition of "sanitary inspector." 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55.

(2) In this Act the expression "local authority" means an urban or rural sanitary authority within the meaning of the Public Health Acts or a port sanitary authority.

4. Nothing in this Act shall prevent a local authority from making, with the sanction of the Minister of Health, a temporary arrangement for the performance of all or any of the duties of a medical officer of health or sanitary inspector, and any person appointed by virtue of any such arrangement to perform those duties or any of them, shall, subject to the terms of his appointment, have all the powers and liabilities of a duly appointed medical officer of health or sanitary inspector as the case may be. Temporary appointments.

The provisions of this section will obviate any difficulty such as that which was considered in Lewis v. Weston-super-Mare L. B., ante, p. 57. There was already in s. 191 of the P. H. Act, 1875, ante, p. 454, power to appoint a deputy medical officer in case of illness or incapacity of the M. O. H.

5. The provisions of this Act relating to the removal from office of medical officers of health and sanitary inspectors shall apply to such officers and inspectors whether appointed before or after the commencement of this Act. Application to existing officers.

6. Section twenty-four of the Local Government Act, 1888 (a) (which provides for payments by county councils to local authorities in respect of the salaries of medical officers of health and sanitary inspectors), shall have effect as if the reference in subsection (2) thereof to the Public Health Act, 1875, included a reference to this Act. Application of s. 24 (2) of 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41.

(a) See this section at p. 756, ante.

7.—(1) The provisions of paragraphs (b) and (c) of subsection (2) of section one hundred and eight of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (which relate to the removal and appointment of medical officers of health of metropolitan borough councils), shall apply to the chief or senior sanitary inspectors of metropolitan borough councils and to the medical officers of health and the chief or senior sanitary inspector of the port sanitary authority of the Port of London as they apply to the medical officers of health of metropolitan borough councils, and those provisions shall have effect accordingly. Provisions as to London. 54 & 55 Vict. c. 76.

(2) Save as provided by this section, this Act shall not apply to the administrative county of London.

8. This Act shall not extend to Scotland or Ireland. Extent of Act.

Section 9. Construction of Act.

9. This Act shall, except so far as it relates to the administrative county of London, be read as one with the Public Health Acts.

See as to the effect of this provision the note under s. 1 of the Private Street Works Act, 1892, ante, p. 870.

Short title and commencement of Act.

10. This Act may be cited as the Public Health (Officers) Act, 1921, and shall come into operation on the first day of April, nineteen hundred and twenty-two.

HEALTH RESORTS AND WATERING PLACES ACT, 1921.

(11 & 12 GEO. 5, c. 27.)

An Act to empower Local Authorities to advertise Health Resorts and Watering Places. [28th July 1921.]

Power of local authority to levy rate for advertisement.

1. Subject to the provisions of this Act, the council of any borough or urban district may advertise the advantages and amenities of the borough or district, or any part thereof, as a health resort or watering place by the insertion of advertisements in newspapers not published within the borough or district so sought to be advertised, or by handbooks or leaflets, or by placards at railway stations, and may expend money for the purpose as provided by this Act.

It should be noted that the marginal note to this section is incorrect, no rate can be levied for the purposes of the Act: see s. 2, infra, and note thereto. (See also note to s. 43 of P. H. A., 1907, ante, p. 1046.)

Expenses.

2. The council of any borough or urban district may expend for the purposes of this Act the profits received by them from the letting of chairs, tents, tent sites, bathing machines, platform sites for entertainments, and sites of stalls for beach vendors, or from charges for admission to any gardens, parks, inclosures, and places of interest, in respect of which such council are entitled to make such charges, or from any other profits which accrue to such council in providing entertainments or recreation for visitors, provided that the council shall not be entitled to expend any other money for such purposes, and the sum so expended in any one financial year shall not exceed the amount which would be produced by a rate of one penny in the pound levied on the rateable value of the borough or district.

It will be seen that recourse cannot be had to the rates even to the extent of the produce of a penny rate. Moreover, the amount of the produce of a penny rate is the limit to which a council may resort to profits of chair-letting, etc.
